Cathedral of Wells,

IN

SOMERSETSHIRE.

IN conformity with Sir William Dugdale's arrangement, the Cathedral of WELLS is here placed immediately after the monastery and cathedral of Bath, among the houses of the Benedictine Order. The intimate connection of the two churches in their history, indeed, renders it almost impossible that they should be placed asunder. Sir William Dugdale, however, had another reason for recording what he thought the abbey of Wells in the early part of his work. Bishop Godwin, in his Catalogue of Bishops, had given a Charter from Cynewlf king of the West Saxons, granted to Wells as a monastery, "ad augmentum Monasterii quod situm est juxta fontem magnum quem vocitant Wielea," A. D. 766, which Dugdale copied without suspecting it to be spurious.^a

It is said that Ina, about the year 704, founded a collegiate church at Wells to the honour of St. Andrew the Apostle, and removed hither the episcopal seat of the bishop of Somersetshire, which had previously been fixed at Congresbury: Daniel being at that time prelate.^b

Other historians, says Tanner, with greater certainty affirm, that ^a See Num. I. "Kenulphi cartam, says Wharton, "Godwinus episcopus exhibuit, quasi indubium antiquitatis Wellensis monumentum, consueta deceptus in curiâ. Quod si episcopus subscribentes investigasset, annosque Dominicæ incarnationis et indictionis contulisset, commentitium esse facile perspexisset." Angl. Sacr. tom. i. p. 553. Bishop Tanner is mistaken in stating that this Charter is commented upon by Dr. Hickes in the Thesaurus.

^b Wharton has given an extract from one of the Glastonbury Chronicles, detailing the foundation of this see of Congresbury by St. Fagan and St. Deruvian, in the year 167. Capgrave, however, says, that Congresbury was a very solitary place, and had its name and renown from a religious hermit called Cungar, who, by the gift of King Edgar, had the adjacent territory, and here, about the year 711, according to Cressey, founded a Collegiate Church for twelve canons, to the honour of the Holy Trinity, which, as is said, was further endowed by King Edgar. Bishop Tanner animadvertens on the anachronisms both of the Glastonbury Chronicle and Capgrave. Neither, indeed, seem entitled to the smallest share of credit. The following are Wharton's words, who also remarks, in the same paragraph, upon the ancient names of Wells: "Statutum à suscepti operis initio mihi erat de fabulosis Britanniae episcopis tacere. Cum autem historicus noster de Daniele Congresberiensium mentionem ingesserit, hunc penitus intactum prætermittere non possumus. Sic igitur habet fabula, prout apud Chronicon Glastoniense legitur. 'Anno Domini CLXVII. Episcopatus Somersetiæ per SS. Faganum et Deruvianum sumpsit exordium, et in Kungresburiâ per multum tempus Sedes Episcopalis fuit. Sederunt itaque in eadem sede plurimi pontifices successivè usque ad tempus Inæ regis Westsaxonum; quorum numerum, gesta, et tempora, nusquam reperimus descripta. In tempore autem prædicti regis Daniel, qui in cathedrâ de Kangresburiâ sedebat ultimus, sedem illam, quæ illic per DC. annos vel amplius remanserat, ad villam quæ tunc TETHISCINE nunc vero

ATHIEMUS was the first Bishop of WELLS, placed here by King Edward the elder and Plegmund archbishop of Canterbury, A. D. 909.^c He succeeded to the archbishoprick of Canterbury in 924.^d

WLFELMUS, or WOLFELMUS, became bishop of Wells in 924. He also was translated to Canterbury in 927.^e

ELFECH, or ELFEGE, was the next bishop. The Textus Roffensis calls him Ælfheah.^f

WLFELMUS, or WOLFELM, II. He occurs in 938.^g Le Neve says in 942.^h

BRITHELMUS, a monk of Glastonbury, is the fifth bishop upon record. He was translated in 959 to Canterbury; but, within a short time, upon the pretext of insufficiency, was removed back to the see of Wells.ⁱ

KYNEWARD, abbat of Middleton, succeeded upon Brithelm's death in 973. He died, according to Florence of Worcester, in 975; others say in 985.^k

SIGAR, abbat of Glastonbury, was the next bishop, holding his abbey, to which he had been appointed in 972, together with his see. He died on the 28th of June, 997.^l

ADELWYNUS, ALFWINUS, or EALWYNUS, became bishop upon Sigar's death. He died, himself, about the year 1000.^m

BURWOLD was commemorated in the Martyrology of the Church of Wells as the ninth bishop. He is unnoticed in William of Malmesbury's book "de Pontificibus:" but a tomb in the church was ascribed to him.ⁿ

WELLES nominatur, Ina rege donante et ei consentiente, transtulit. Iste autem Daniel in eodem episcopatu ultimus erat episcopus Britonum.' Translationem sedis episcopalis istam cl. Usserius in annum 721, retulit in Indice Chronol. ad Antiqu. Britann. Annus 704, historico nostro magis placuit Welliam eo tempore TETHISCINE dictam fuisse Chronicon Glastoniense prodit. Et sane TUDINGTUN eam antiquitus dictam fuisse Registrum Wellense confirmat; neque aliunde THEORODUNI nomen hausit Lelandum, qui ut voces barbaras in Latinas convertat vim prisca vocabulis inferre solet." Angl. Sacr. ut supr.

Collinson says, the manor of Congresbury was granted at a later period to the church of Wells, by King Edward the Confessor. In the Domesday Survey, however, we find the bishop holding a single hide only of the manor.

CVNGRESBERIE. "De ipsa terra hujus manerii ablata sunt 11. hidæ quæ ibi jacuerunt tempore regis Edwardi. Giso episcopus tenet unam et valet iii. lib." Somers. fol. 87. Terræ Regis. The pasture called Waimora, belonging at the time of the Survey to the church of Wells, is also said to have been a member of the manor of Congresbury in the time of King Edward. Ibid. fol.

LIVIG, or LEOVINGUS, who is also called ELSTAN, or ETHELSTANUS, succeeded before the year 1001. He was removed to the see of Canterbury in 1013.^a

EATELWYNUS, abbat of Evesham, succeeded to the bishopric of Wells on Living's promotion.^b He was ejected in 1023, when

BRITWINUS occurs bishop. Eathelwyn and Brithwin are both stated to have died in 1026.^c

MERVYNIT, abbat of Glastonbury, was made bishop in 1027. He died in 1034.^d

DUDU, or DUDOCOS, was the next bishop, a native of Germai.^e He is said to have obtained for his see, from King Edward the Confessor, the manors of Congresbury and Banwell. Simeon of Durham places his death in the year 1060.

GISO, GISA, or GISO HASBAN, a native of St. Trudo, a village in the territory of Hasban, in Lorraine, succeeded Duduc. He was consecrated bishop, April 15th, 1061^f. Other accounts say he was consecrated in 1060. Gdwin says in 1059.^g Upon taking possession of his see, he is stated to have found ten canons only at Wells.

Collinson says, "On his entry into his diocese he found the states of the church in a sad condition; for Harold earl of Wessex having, with his father, Godwin earl of Kent, being banished the kingdom, and deprived of all his estates in this county by King Edward, who bestowed them on the church of Wells, had in a piratical manner made a descent in these parts, raised contributions among his former tenants, spoiled the church of all its ornaments, driven away the canons, invaded their possessions and converted them to his own use. Bishop Giso in vain expostulated with the king on this outrageous usage; but received from the queen, who was Harold's sister, the manors of Mark and Mudgeley, as a trifling compensation for the injuries which his bishopric had sustained. Shortly after, Harold was restored to King Edward's favour, and made his captain-general; upon which he, in his turn, procured the banishment of Giso, and, when he came to the crown, resumed most of those estates of which he had been deprived. Bishop Giso continued in banishment till the death of Harold, and the advancement of the Conqueror to the throne, who in the second year of his reign restored all Harold's estates to the church of Wells, except some small parcels which had been conveyed to the monastery of Gloucester; in lieu of which he gave the manor and advowson of Yatton, and the manor of Winsham. Giso being thus reinstated, used his utmost diligence in recovering other estates which had been embezzled from his church, in procuring Charters of confirmation for the better security of what it already had, and making provision for its better subsistence. In particular he recovered from one Arser, who had been a favourite in the court of Edward the Confessor, the manors of Combe St. Nicholas, Worminster, and Litton, all which he had obtained by his intrigues and interest with the king.^h ⁱ The following is the passage. "Et sic in episcopum consecratus est Romæ die Paschæ, i. e. xvii. cal. Maii, anno Domini MLX. Hic invenit tantum x. canonicos in ecclesia Wellensi, tam bonis mobilibus et ornamentis ecclesiasticis quam possessionibus ad ecclesiam suam spectantibus per Haroldum comitem Cantiae et Westsexiae spoliatis, et publicæ mendicitati subjectos. Unde a domino suo S. Edwardo rege possessionem de Wedmore, et de regina Editha terram quæ Merken et Modesley vocatur, ad sui et fratrum suorum sustentationem impetravit. Deinde post mortem Edwardi regis præfatus Haroldus regnum Anglorum invasit in festo Epiphaniæ Domini apud Lambhith; ubi ipse præter consensum procerum capituli suo propriis manibus regium diadema imposuit. Is statim omnes possessiones dicti Gisonis et canonicorum Wellensis ecclesiæ perpe-

'Historia de Episcopis Bathoniensibus et Wellensibus ad annum M.CCCC.XXIII. authore Canonico Wellensi,' printed in the Anglia Sacra:¹ but there seems considerable reason to doubt its accuracy. According to the Domesday Survey, the church of Wells, at least in the Conqueror's time, possessed but one manor which had belonged to Harold:^k and in proof that Harold confirmed to Giso all the privileges of the bishopric in their fullest tenure, we have the evidence of his own Charter.^l Editha also, the queen of Edward the Confessor, was a benefactress during her widowhood, as well as in the reign of her husband.^m

Having increased the revenues of the church, Giso augmented the number of the canons, and placed over them a provost. He also built a cloister, a dormitory, and a refectory. He died A.D. 1088;ⁿ and was buried on the north side of the altar of his church.

It was toward the close of Bishop Giso's pontificate that the Domesday Survey of the church property of Wells was taken. The bishop possessed lands in no other county than Somerset. At Wells he held fifty hides of land, with four mills, three hundred acres of meadow, three leuua in length and one in breadth of pasture land, wood two leuua in length and two quarentenes in breadth, and three leuua of moor land. Of these fifty hides, fourteen were tenanted by the canons of the church, and twenty-two by other persons. The bishop, beside these fifty, held two hides which had not been assessed in the time of the Confessor. At Cumbe the bishop held twenty hides of land, twelve acres of meadow, half a leuua of pasture, and a leuua of wood. At Chingesberie twenty hides, with two mills, a hundred acres of meadow, and pasture a leuua in length and three quarentenes in breadth. At Cerdre eight hides, a mill, twenty acres of meadow, woodland and pasture each two leuua in length and four quarentenes in breadth. At Litelande two hides, twelve acres of meadow, a hundred of pasture and twenty of wood. At Wivelescome fifteen hides, a mill, thirty-four acres of meadow, two hundred acres of pasture, and eighty acres of wood. At Walintone fourteen hides, two mills, a hundred and five acres of meadow, pasture a leuua in length and half a leuua in breadth, and wood three quarentenes in length and breadth. One hide was added to this manor which in the reign of the Confessor had been held as a distinct manor of itself. At Lidegar the bishop held ten hides all but a virgate, a mill, thirty acres of meadow, pasture a leuua in length and three quarentenes in breadth, and the same measure of wood. At Banwelle, which in King Edward's time had been the property of Earl Harold, the bishop held thirty hides, a hundred acres of meadow, a square leuua of pasture, and two leuua and a half of wood. Upon the tenanted part of this land there were three mills. At Evreeriz the bishop held twenty hides, a mill, sixty acres of meadow, two hundred of pasture, and wood a leuua in length and one quarentene in breadth. At Westberie six hides, thirty acres of meadow, and a wood one leuua in length and two quarentenes in breadth. At Winesham ten hides, two mills, six acres

Anno tamen xi. regni sui restituit Banewell; et donavit eidem episcopo et suis successoribus Jatton cum ecclesia. of meadow, and wood half a leuua in length and a quarentene and half in breadth. In Chivvre thirty hides, three mills, a hundred acres of meadow, and fifty of pasture, with woodland two leuua in length and half a leuua in breadth. In Latune twenty hides of land, thirty-two acres of meadow, wood a leuua in length and two quarentenes in breadth, and a square leuua of moorland. At the time of the Survey a pasture called Waimora belonged to this manor, which in the time of King Edward had appertained to Congreberie, upon the royal demesne. At Wedmore the bishop held eleven hides, seventy acres of meadow, two fisheries, fifty acres of wood, and a leuua of pasture both in length and breadth.

The canons of St. Andrew Wells are stated to have held, both at the time of the Survey and in the Confessor's reign, of the bishop, four hides in Wandestrev, twelve acres of meadow, and wood three quarentenes in length and two in breadth: and in Litune, in the same manner, eight hides and a half of arable, sixty acres of meadow, a thousand acres of pasture, and three quarentenes of wood.

At the close of this part of the Domesday Survey, the royal manor of Milvertune is stated to have been held by Bishop Giso in King Edward's time, when it was assessed for a virgate of land only. The manor of Aissa also, held at the formation of the Survey as a distinct manor by Roger Arundel, is recorded to have been, in the time of King Edward the Confessor, a member of the bishop's manor of Lediart. Bishop Giso was then assessed for it as for three hides and a virgate. It is added, "Rogerus tenet de rege injuste."

The number of hides held by the bishop appear to have amounted to two hundred seventy-nine and a half: and the total rents, as near as can be computed, at the time of the Survey, to the sum of 315*l.* 10*s.*

Latune is the only manor belonging to the see within which a church is noticed.^a

JOHN DE VILLULA, a native of Tours in France, thence also called JOHANNES TURONENSIS, succeeded Giso. He appears to have practised physic; and, at the time of his promotion, was one of the king's chaplains.^b This prelate destroyed the cloister and other buildings which Giso had erected at Wells for the use of the canons, and in the place where they stood built a palace for himself and his successors. His removal of the seat of his bishoprick to Bath, in 1090, has been already noticed in the account of Bath abbey; the church of which he rebuilt. Ralph de Diceto places this removal in the year 1091.^c Bishop John even took upon himself the title of Bishop of BATH: uniting the monastery of that city and his bishoprick in one. The canon of Wells, whose history of the bishops of the see is published in the Anglia Sacra, says, "Hic etiam, inconsultis canonicis Wellensibus, et præter eorum consensum, transtulit sedem Episcopalem Wellensem in Abbatiam Bathoniensem; et redditus pertinentes ad mensam abbatialem monasterii Bathoniensis mensæ suæ episcopali univit; et dimisso nomine episcopatus Wellensis, primus omnium fecit se Bathoniensem episcopum appellari. Hic etiam urbem Bathoniæ a rege Willielmo II. sibi et successoribus suis emit pro quingentis marciis argenti."^d Bishop John de Villula died in 1123.

GODFREY, a Belgian, and chaplain to King Henry the First's queen, was the next bishop. He received his consecration Aug. 26th, 1123.^e After holding the bishoprick twelve years, he died Aug. 16th, 1151.^f His successor was

ROBERT, a monk of Lewes, and a native of Normandy. Four years after the consecration of this prelate, the church of Bath which John de Vlula had erected was destroyed by fire: but Bishop Robert rebuilt it. He did not, however, confine himself entirely to ecclesiastical concerns, since it appears that he embroiled himself in the civil commotions between King Stephen and the Empress Maud. It so happened that one Geoffrey Talbot, a commander of the empress's forces, coming into Bath in the capacity of spy, was discovered by the bishop, and detained in durance. The inhabitants of Bristol, who were strongly attached to Maud's interest, came over immediately to Bath in a large party unexpectedly, took the bishop away with them to Bristol, and there imprisoned him in the castle: nor would they deliver him up till the king had consented to the release of Talbot; which he at length did with much regret, and with many severe animadversions on the conduct of the bishop, who he thought had suffered himself to be taken prisoner, that he might have a pretence of freeing Talbot, the king's inveterate enemy.^g In the mean time, a violent contention arose between the monks of Bath and the canons of Wells, as to which of these cities should be honoured with the episcopal seat: but this business being referred by compromise to the bishop's arbitration, he ordained that the bishops of this diocese should neither be called "Bishops of Wells," as they had been of old, nor "Bishops of Bath," as they had been of later times; but that, taking their name from both Churches, they should in succeeding time be called Bishops of BATH and WELLS; that each of the churches, when the see was vacant, should appoint an equal number of delegates, by whose votes the bishop should be chosen, and that he should be installed both at Bath and Wells.^h For the better regulation of the possessions of the church of Wells, he divided the estates into two parts; one of which he appropriated to the chapter in common, and out of the other he allotted to every canon a portion called a prebend. He appointed one Ivo their dean, to preside over the chapter, and a sub-dean to supply his place when absent; a precentor, or chanter, to regulate the choir, and a subchanter under him; a chancellor, to instruct the younger canons; and a treasurer, to take care of the ornaments of the church.ⁱ The Canon of Wells, whose history is given in the Anglia Sacra, says, he dedicated the church of Wells in the presence of Josceline bishop of Salisbury, Simon bishop of Worcester, and Robert bishop of Hereford. He also separated the different prebends of the church, the profits for the support of which had before his time been held in common; and founded the two new prebends of Jatton and Hyswich in the marsh, to the latter of which he annexed the church of Bishop's Compton.^k Bishop Robert died on the first of the kalends of September, 1166: and was buried in the church of Bath.^l

King Henry the Second held the bishoprick of Bath and Wells in his own hands eight years, eight months, and fifteen days after the decease of Robert; receiving during that time all the rents, issues, and profits of the vacant see, such as the farms of manors, the rents of the archdeaconries, and the pleas of the bishoprick;^m but bestowed it, at length, on

Lombard, bishop of Salisbury; who was consecrated in 1174.^a Soon after his consecration, he rebuilt the churches of St. Mary and St. Michael within the walls, in the city of Bath; and, not far from the latter, founded the hospital of St. John Baptist. He procured from King Richard I. the confirmation of a right which he claimed of keeping dogs for the purpose of sporting throughout the county of Somerset:^b and afterwards obtained from the same king, for the use of his chapter, the manors of North Curry, Wrantage, and West Hatch; and founded several prebends in the church. He likewise incorporated the town of Wells, and constituted it a free borough. In 1191 he was translated to the see of Canterbury; but died in that same year, at his house at Dogmersfield in Hampshire, and was buried at Bath.^c

SAVARIC, archdeacon of Northampton, and treasurer of the church of Salisbury, succeeded to the bishoprick of Bath and Wells in 1192.^d Some little time after his consecration, King Richard I. in his return from Palestine, was taken prisoner in a small village near Vienna, by Leopold duke of Austria, who delivered him up to Henry VI. emperor of Germany, who was then at variance with the king. The emperor being nearly allied to Bishop Savaric, with whom he had held a correspondence on the state of the English church, among other hard conditions of Richard's release, insisted on a promise from him that the abbacy of Glastonbury, which was then vacant, should thenceforth be annexed to the bishoprick of Bath and Wells.^e To effect this, Savaricus engaged to return to the king the city of Bath, which his predecessor John de Villula had purchased; and transferring the episcopal seat to Glastonbury, styled himself BISHOP of GLASTONBURY till his death, which happened Aug. 8th, 1205. He was buried at Bath, with the following epitaph, expressive of the rambling inquietude of his life:

"Hospes erat mundo, per mundum semper eundo, Sic suprema dies fit sibi prima quies."^f

JOSELINE DE WELLES, called in the 'Annales Marganenses' JOCELINE TROTMAN, was the next bishop: elected by the joint suffrages of the canons of Bath and Wells. He was consecrated at Reading, in the chapel of St. Mary, May 28th, 1206. The monks of Glastonbury, immediately after his election, petitioned the court of Rome to be separated from the bishoprick, and to be restored to the wonted government of an abbat. For twelve years Bishop Josceline supported his claim: till, in 1218, the liberation of the monastery was effected. The particulars of the adjustment on this occasion, with the enumeration of the manors which formed the bishop's compensation for the release, have been already given in the Account of Glastonbury.^g Bishop Josceline now assumed the former title of BISHOP of BATH and WELLS, which has ever since been used by the successive prelates of this see. Very soon after this, having incurred the king's displeasure by interdicting the nation, pursuant to the pope's command, he was obliged to relinquish his bishoprick and the kingdom, and passed five years abroad in banishment.^h After his return, he applied himself to the adorning and enlarging the church of Wells. He founded several prebends, appropriated divers churches to the use of the chapter, and gave them out of his own estate the manor of Winscombe.ⁱ He augmented the revenues of the dignitaries, and first ordained vicars choral, who were to supply the place of the canons in singing and performing divine service. He obtained of Hugh bishop of Lincoln the manors of Congresbury, Chedder, and Axbridge; and, jointly with him, founded the hospital of St. John at Wells. He built two costly chapels; one in his palace at Wookey, and the other at Wells. The church itself of Wells being in many parts decayed, notwithstanding the vast sums of money expended upon it, he entirely rebuilt the west end thereof, as it now stands, of marble and polished stone, and dedicated it Oct. 23d, 1239. Bishop Josceline died Nov. 19th, 1242, and was buried in the middle of the choir at Wells, beneath a marble tomb, now much defaced and mutilated.^k

An interval of two years elapsed between the death of Josceline and the appointment of his successor, during which time the see remained in the hands of the king. The monks of Bath, at length, neglecting the regulation made by Bishop Robert with respect to the election of a prelate, held a chapter without consulting the canons of Wells, and elected of their own accord^l one

ROGER, precentor of the church of Salisbury, who was accordingly consecrated September 11th, 1244. This step occasioned a long litigation between the two churches, and the pope was appealed to;^m but it at length terminated with a promise from the monks of their stricter observance of the compact for the future, and a trifling concession on the bishop's part to the canons. He died Jan. 13th, 1247, having sat only three years: and was buried at Bath.ⁿ

WILLIAM BITTON, or BUTTON, first sub-dean, and afterwards archdeacon of Wells and rector of Middlezoy in Somersetshire, with the common concurrence of the monks of Bath and the canons of Wells, was elected bishop in the beginning of the year 1248. The monks of Glastonbury made frequent murmurings in his time, respecting the loss of those estates which had been given up on Josceline's relinquishing the abbacy; but they did not recover any thing. In 1257 he procured of Henry III. a Charter of free-warren for his manor of Wells;^o and in 1263 appropriated the church of St. Mary de Stall to the monks of Bath: the year after which he died, and was buried under a marble tomb in the middle of Our Lady chapel, where, in digging a grave in 1727, the bones of this prelate were discovered, with a large stone ring on his finger, and a small silver cup full of liquor.^p

ROBERT BURNELL, son of Robert and brother of Hugh Lords Burnell, was elected bishop of Bath and Wells Jan. 23, 1274. He died Dec. 11th, 1308. Collinson says he held this see nine years, which is certainly a mistake. He was interred in the nave of Wells cathedral, near Bishop Bubwith's chapel.^k

JOHN DROKENESFORD, or DE DROKENSFORD, was the next bishop; who, at the time of his election, was keeper of the king's wardrobe and under-treasurer of the exchequer, having before been prebendary of Wells, York, and Southwell. He was elected Feb. 5th, 1309.^l Collinson says he was a liberal benefactor to his church, the buildings and privileges of which he greatly amplified.^m He died at Dogmeresfeld May 9th, 1329, and was buried in the chapel of St. Catherine, in which he a little time before had founded a chantry at the altar of St. John Baptist.

JOHN BARNET, treasurer of England, and afterwards bishop of Worcester, was translated to this see Nov. 24th, 1363.^b In 1366 he was removed to the see of Ely.

JOHN HAREWELL, or DE HAREWELL, LL.B., chaplain to Edward the Black Prince, and chancellor of Gascony, succeeded to this bishoprick Dec. 15th, 1366. He was a considerable contributor to the erection of the south-west tower of the church; and gave a hundred marks toward glazing the great west window. He gave also to the church a missal which cost twenty pounds, with various rich vestments. His will bore date June 29th, and was proved Aug. 20th, 1386. He was buried at Wells before the altar of St. Kalixtus.^c

WALTER SKYRLAWE was translated to Bath and Wells, from the see of Litchfield and Coventry, Aug. 18th, 1386; within two years after which, April 3d, 1388, he was again removed to Durham. RALPH ERGHUM, or ARGUM, LL.D., bishop of Salisbury, was translated to the see of Bath and Wells by a bull of Pope Urban VI. bearing date April 3d, 1388. He gave to the dean and chapter of Wells the parsonage of Pucklechurch, with fifty marks, and a messuage in Wells called The George. He also gave them a gold chalice and paten of the price of fifty-four pounds, a missal which cost twenty-two pounds, and other ornaments. By deed, dated Jan. 20th, 1399, he founded a chantry in his cathedral for the souls of Gilbert and Agnes, his father and mother, and of Agnes his sister: and by his will appointed his executors to build in the street then called 'La Mounterye,' but afterwards College Lane, a house, or college, for fourteen priests to celebrate divine service in the church of Wells. He died April 10th, 1400.^e

Collinson says, "This Bishop Erghum fortified the episcopal palace, surrounding it with a deep moat, and an embattled wall, flanked by semi-circular towers, as it stands to this day." He quotes as his authority the 'Lib. Rub. Bathon.' then in the possession of Viscount Weymouth; observing that Godwin, in his Commentary de Præsulibus, p. 377, erroneously ascribes this to Ralph de Salopia. The canon of Wells, whose history, ending in 1423, is printed in the Anglia Sacra, concurs with Godwin.^f

RICHARD CLIFFORD, archdeacon of Canterbury, and keeper of the privy seal, was preferred to this bishoprick by Pope Boniface IX. upon the death of Erghum: but the king disapproving of, and Clifford renouncing the promotion, he was in the following year made bishop of Worcester. The actual successor of Erghum was

HENRY BOWETT, LL.D., canon of Wells, who was consecrated Nov. 20th, 1401, in the king's presence, at St. Paul's. He had been a steady adherent to King Henry the Fourth when earl of Hereford; for which, in 1398, he was condemned by King Richard II.; but his life was spared on condition that he should go into banishment. He returned with King Henry IV. to England; was made treasurer of England in 1402; and in the middle of 1406 conducted Philippa, the king's daughter, into Denmark, to be married to the king. On the 7th of October, 1407, he was preferred, by papal provision from Pope Gregory XII. to the archbishoprick of York.^g

NICHOLAS BUBWITH, who had been successively bishop of London and Salisbury, was translated to Bath and Wells October 7th, 1407. He received the temporalities of the see from the king on April 1st, 1408. He built the alms-house called after his name, for twenty-four poor men and women, on the north side of St. Cuthbert's church in Wells, the library over the cloisters of the cathedral, and within it, opposite the pulpit, a little chapel, still called 'Bubwith's chapel,' wherein he was buried in 1424, and where he appointed certain priests to say mass for his soul.^h Collinson says one priest only.ⁱ Bishop Bubwith was a contributor towards the building of the north-west tower at the west end of the church of Wells, and otherwise improved that structure.^k He was also a benefactor to the church of Bath.^l

JOHN STAFFORD, the ninth son of Humphrey earl of Stafford, afterwards duke of Buckingham, was the next bishop. After possessing different preferments of a minor kind, he became keeper of the privy seal to King Henry VI. and in 1422 high treasurer of England. He

It then adds, "Mitra pret. cent. sol. unum bacul. pastoral. pret. x. marc. unum turibulum argenteum pret. iv. marc. et dimid. et ii. candelabra argentea pret. xii. marc. has dominus Radulphus episcopus recepit de capitulo Well. et obligavit se et executores suos ad restituendum nisi satisfecerit pro eisdem. had been made a canon of Wells by Bishop Bubwith in 1413, and in 1423 succeeded to the deanery of the cathedral. He was consecrated bishop of Bath and Wells May 27th, 1425. From 1432 to 1450 he held the office of lord chancellor, having in 1443 succeeded to the archbishopric of Canterbury.^a He died on the 8th of the kalends of June, 1452.^b

THOMAS DE BECKINGTON, or BEKYNTON, LL.D. was consecrated bishop of Bath and Wells Oct. 13th, 1443.^c He was born at Beckington, or Beckhampton, in Somersetshire, received his earliest education in Wickham's college at Winchester, and in 1408 became a fellow of New college Oxford. He was afterwards chancellor of the university. Being called to court to superintend the education of King Henry the Sixth, he had numerous preferments heaped upon him. He held the livings of St. Leonard near Hastings in Sussex, and of Sutton in the diocese of Salisbury: and about 1430 became dean of the arches. He was also chancellor to Humphrey duke of Gloucester, archdeacon of Buckingham, canon of York in 1435, and in 1439 canon of Wells, principal secretary of state, and keeper of the privy seal.^d

Bishop Beckington was also an author. He wrote an elaborate treatise in confutation of the Salique law:^e and has also left a collection of letters.^f

^h Collinson, tom. iii. pp. 384, 385. The following is the account of this grant in Bishop Beckington's register:

"20 Sept. 1451. Dominus episcopus concedit Willielmo Vouell magistro et confratribus et concivibus burgensibus civitatis seu burgi

In 1442, he was one of the ambassadors who were sent to treat for the king's marriage.^g

Soon after his promotion to the see of Bath and Wells, he erected a row of houses on the north side of the market-place at Wells, which he called his "Nova Opera;" as also two large gate-houses at the east end. In 1451, also, he gave to William Vowel master, and the brethren, citizens, and burgesses of Wells, to have and to hold of him the said bishop and his successors, bishops of Bath and Wells, for ever, a reservoir, or conduit, near the high cross in the market-place, supplied by pipes with water from St. Andrew's well; appointing the overplus water to run, night and day, for the supply of the bishop's mills upon St. Andrew's stream. In commemoration of which public benefaction, the master, brethren, and burgesses of the city bound themselves and their successors, for ever, to visit once a year the spot in St. Andrew's church where the said bishop should be interred, and there pray for his soul, and the souls of all faithful deceased; and the said bishop granted an indulgence of forty days to all such as should duly perform this solemn service. This grant was confirmed by the dean and chapter of Wells, and by the prior and chapter of Bath, Sept. 20th, 1451.^h

It was about this time that Bishop Beckington consecrated the chapel for his own interment.ⁱ

Bishop Beckington also built the west side of the cloister of the cathedral, where his arms are still to be seen upon the vaulting, and spent six thousand marks in repairing and beautifying the several houses belonging to the bishoprick; on most of which he caused his device, a flaming beacon upon a tun or large cask, allusive to his name, to be engraved.^a Collinson says, by his Will, dated Nov. 3d, 1464, he bequeathed to the church of Wells, for the reparation thereof twenty pounds, four very costly vestments, four hundred pounds to buy copes, a silver vessel for holy water ten pounds in weight, a silver cross, partly gilt, of the same weight, a chair for the bishop's use in the church, cushions, and other ornaments. To the church of Bath, also, he bequeathed a cup, a censer, and a pax of silver thirty ounces in weight, besides thirty copes, and other vestments. The rest of his legacies, not belonging to Wells, are omitted here. His executors, Collinson adds, bestowed such of the bishop's effects as remained unbequeathed in building the Vicars-Close, which had been begun by Bishop Ralph de Salopia.

Bishop Beckington died Jan. 14th, 1465, and was buried in the chapel on the south side of the cathedral, which he had himself prepared.

JOHN FREE was preferred to this bishoprick, on the death of Beckington, by Pope Paul the Second; but died within a month of his appointment,^b without having been consecrated. The real successor of Beckington was

ROBERT STILLINGTON, LL. D., archdeacon of Taunton. He was consecrated March 16th, 1466. He was a close adherent to the cause of the house of York, and in 1475 was sent by King Edward the Fourth to the duke of Brittany to demand the person of Henry earl of Richmond, though without success. Upon the accession of the earl of Richmond to the throne, as King Henry the Seventh, he remained unmolested: but taking part with Lambert Simnell in 1487, he was seized and sent to prison, where he died in 1491.^c His body was interred in a chapel which he had built and dedicated to the Virgin Mary, adjoining the cloister of Wells cathedral; in after times stripped and destroyed by Sir John Gates.^d

RICHARD FOX, LL. D., was translated to Bath and Wells, from the see of Exeter, Feb. 8th, 1492; whence, toward the close of the year 1494, he was translated to Durham. The author of the Continuation of the History of the Bishops of Bath and Wells, published in the Anglia Sacra, says, "Spiritualia episcopatus Well. post translationem ejus in manus archiepiscopi Cant. accepta sunt 1494, 12 Decemb. et penes eundem remanserunt usque ad initium anni 1496."^e

OLIVER KING, LL. D., was also translated from Exeter to this see Nov. 6th, 1495; but was not enthroned till March 12th, 1496.^f He has been already mentioned as the restorer of the abbey and cathedral church of Bath.^g By his will, which bore date October 24th, 1503, he directed his body to be buried in the choir of his new church of Bath, near the first arch on the north side toward the high altar. He was succeeded, here, by

ADRIAN DE CASTELLO, a native of Cornetto in Tuscany, who was sent over by Pope Innocent the Eighth, to quiet the disturbances in Scotland. In 1502 he was made bishop of Hereford; in the next year a cardinal; and on October 13th, 1504, was translated to this bishoprick, which he let out to farmers, himself residing at Rome.^h For conspiring against Pope Leo the Tenth, whom he had hoped to succeed in the papacy, he was deprived of all his numerous preferments. He was succeeded in this bishoprick by

THOMAS WULCY, or WOLSEY, the great favourite of King Henry the Eighth, who received the temporalities of the see from the king August 28th, 1518. He had before rented the bishoprick, of de Castello. Cardinal Wolsey held this see in commendam till the month of April, 1523.ⁱ

JOHN CLERK, D. D., was consecrated bishop of Bath and Wells in the spring of 1523: the temporalities were restored to him on May 2d. He had previously been made dean of Windsor, master of the rolls, and one of the king's privy council. He was much employed by King Henry the Eighth in foreign embassies. While upon his last embassy, to the duke of Cleves, he fell ill, as it was supposed from the effects of poison: he recovered so far as to return to England, but died Jan. 3d, 1541. His body was interred in the church of the Minors by Aldgate.^k

WILLIAM KNIGHT, LL. D., fellow of New college Oxford, and archdeacon of Richmond, was consecrated bishop of Bath and Wells May 29th, 1541.^l Like his predecessor, he was much employed in foreign embassies. In his time, that is in the 35th of Henry the Eighth, an act of parliament passed for settling the right of election of the bishops of this see, whereby the dean and chapter of Wells being made one sole chapter, were vested with that power.^m He died Sept. 29th, 1547, and was buried under the great pulpit in the nave of the cathedral church, which he had caused to be constructed for his tomb.ⁿ

WILLIAM BARLOW, D. D., was translated to this see from St. David's Feb. 3d, 1547.^o In his time great havoc was made with the buildings and revenues of the church. What with selling, exchanging, and spoiling, the see lost in very few years nearly half of its possessions.^p In 1553, when Queen Mary came to the crown, Bishop Barlow fled to Germany.

GILBERT BOURN, or BOURNE, B. D., was elected

"26 Henry VIII. these revenues were valued at 1843*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.* per annum, and the bishop paid out of them to the pope, for an income, the sum of four hundred and thirty florins. How these revenues became in a little time after so strangely dwindled, I shall now proceed to shew.

bishop March 28th, 1554, and was consecrated on April 1st following in the church of St. Saviour Southwark. He was deprived in the beginning of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and died at Sylverton, in Devonshire, Sept. 10th, 1569.^a

GILBERT BERKELEY, or BARKLEY, D. D., was elected bishop Jan. 29th, 1559-1560, and consecrated March 24th. He died in the episcopal palace at Wells Nov. 2d, 1581, and was buried in his cathedral. After a vacancy of near three years,

THOMAS GODWIN, D. D., was elected bishop Aug. 10th, 1584, and consecrated Sept. 13th. He died at Oakingham, in Berkshire, where he had been born, at the age of seventy-three, Nov. 19th, 1590.^b

JOHN STILL, D. D., master of Trinity college Cambridge, was elected bishop, after a vacancy of two years in the see, Jan. 23d, 1592. He died Feb. 26th, 1607. By his will he gave five hundred pounds for the perpetual relief of the poor of Bishop Bubwith's hospital at Wells; with which his son, Nathaniel Still, Esq. in 1614, purchased lands, and built a house for the reception of six poor people, in addition to the original number of twenty-four.^c

JAMES MONTAGUE, D. D., was elected bishop March 29th, 1608.^d On his advancement to this see, he, at a very considerable expence, repaired and beautified the palaces of Wells and Banwell, the cathedral of Wells, and the abbey church of Bath; on which last he expended the sum of one thousand pounds. On Oct. 4th, 1616, he was translated to Winchester. He died July 19th, 1618, and was buried at Bath.^e

ARTHUR LAKE, D. D., was elected bishop Oct. 17th, 1616. He was preferred from the Deanery of Worcester. He died May 4th, 1626, and was buried in the cathedral of Wells.

WILLIAM LAUD, D. D., was translated to this see from the Bishoprick of St. David's June 20th, 1626: whence, in June, 1628, he was translated to the see of London.

LEONARD MAWE, D. D., was elected bishop July 24th, 1628. He was prebendary of Wells and chaplain to Prince Charles, afterwards King Charles I. whom he attended in the journey to Spain. He died at Chiswick, in Middlesex, Sept. 3d, 1629.^f

WALTER CURLE, D. D., bishop of Rochester, was translated to this see Oct. 29th, 1629: whence, in 1632, he was removed to Winchester.

WILLIAM PIERCE, or PIERS, D. D., was translated from the see of Peterborough to Bath and Wells Nov.

his experience in war, negotiations, and civil affairs; but above all, his propinquity in blood, betimes endeared him to the affections of his royal charge, who, in opposition to the avowed will of his people, both laity and clergy, loaded him with extravagant favours; and, when he returned victorious from the wars of Scotland, where in the field of Pinkey he cut off upwards of a thousand gentlemen, and ten thousand common souldiers, he extended his generosity towards him beyond the bounds of equity. For, not out of his private purse, or exchequer, nor out of his manors or castles, or such other funds as would publicly have been little felt, however somewhat diminished, but out of the lands and possessions of this bishoprick, he bestowed on him a large gratuity for his services; insomuch that the liberty, borough, and manor of Wells, the hundred of Wells-Forum, the manors of Wookey, Banwell, Chew-Magna, Blackford, Wellington, Cranmore, and Evercreech, the borough of Wellington, the hundreds of Winterstoke and Chew, as also the parks of Wells, Banwell, and Evercreech, with all their appurtenances, were at one stroke alienated from the bishoprick to the said duke of Somerset, his heirs and assigns; Barlow, then bishop of the see, acquiescing in the disposal of them, upon the duke's promise of two thousand pounds; and the dean and chapter confirming the bishop's deed.

"The court, perceiving the bishop so easy to be wrought on, and so complacent in giving up the revenues of his church, tried him still farther; and on May 20th, 1548, prevailed on him by a licence to consign to the king all the demesnes and manors of Claverton, Hampton, Lydiard, Compton Magna and Parva, in this county; the demesne, manor, and hundred of Pucklechurch, in the county of Gloucester; the demesne and manor of Chard, and the borough of Chard, in Somersetshire; the demesne and manor of Westerleigh, in the county of Gloucester; and the manors of Cheddar and Huish, with their rights, members, and appurtenances; and that all his messuage called Bathe Place, formerly called the Myneryes, in the parish of St. Botolph without Aldgate, London; and the scite of the hospital of St. John at Wells, and all those farms and hereditaments of Westdown and Pinkesmoor, and the rectory of Evercreech, and the advowson and right of patronage of the vicarage of the parish church of Evercreech; and all and singular the messuages, lands, tenements, mills, meadows, pastures, woods, under-woods, commons, wastes, heaths, 26th, 1632. He was deprived by the parliament of his bishoprick, but recovered it again at the Restoration. He died at Walthamstow, in Essex, in the month of April, 1670, where he was buried.

ROBERT CREIGHTON, D. D., dean of Wells, was elected bishop May 25th, 1670. He died Nov. 21, 1672, at the age of seventy-nine, and was buried in his cathedral.^g

PETER MEW, LL. D., was elected Dec. 19th, 1672, and consecrated Feb. 9th following. On Nov. 22d, 1684, he was translated to Winchester.

THOMAS KENN, D. D., succeeded Bishop Mew. He was consecrated Jan. 25th, 1684. Refusing to take the oaths to King William and Queen Mary, he was first suspended from his see Aug. 1, 1689, and on Feb. 1st, 1690, was deprived. He retired to Longleat, the seat of his patron, Viscount Weymouth, where he died March 19th, 1711.

WILLIAM BEVERIDGE, D. D., was nominated to this see by the king April 23d, 1691, but refused accepting it: whereupon RICHARD KIDDER, D. D., was nominated June 13th, 1691, and consecrated in the church of St. Mary le Bow Aug. 30th following. He was killed in his bed at Wells by the fall of a stack of chimneys, which were blown down in the great storm of wind Nov. 26th, 1703. Bishop Kennett, in his manuscript Diptycha, says, "Upon the accession of Queen Anne to the crown, 1702, a proposal was made, by the interest of the Lord Weymouth, that Bishop Kidder should be translated to the see of Carlisle, and Dr. Kenn restored to Bath and Wells. Bishop Kidder sent his consent to the queen by the mouth of the archbishop of York: but, when all things were ready, Dr. Kenn declined it upon new exception to the oath of abjuration."

GEORGE HOOPER, D. D., was translated to this see from St. Asaph March 14th, 1703. He died at the age of ninety Sept. 6th, 1727, and was buried in the church of Wells.

JOHN WYNNE, D. D., was likewise translated to Bath and Wells from the see of St. Asaph Nov. 11th, 1727. He died at his seat at Soughton, in Flintshire, in 1743.

EDWARD WILLES, D. D., was translated to this see from the bishoprick of St. David's in Sept. 1743. He died at his house in Hill-street, Berkley-square, in his eightieth year, Nov. 24th, 1773.

CHARLES MOSS, D. D., was translated from St. David's to this see April 26th, 1774: upon whose death, marshes, waters, fisheries, rents, reversions, services, courts-leet, view of frank-pledge, parks, warrens, and advowsons of churches; and all other possessions and hereditaments whatsoever, in Claverton, Hampton, Lydiard, Compton-Magna, Compton-Parva, Chard, Cheddar, and Huish, in this county, and Pucklechurch and Westerleigh in the county of Gloucester, to hold to the said king his heirs and assigns for ever. In lieu whereof the king granted to the said bishop the church and rectory of St. John the Baptist at Glastonbury, and the rectory or chapel of St. Bennet in that town; as also the rectories or chapels of Bradley and West Pennard, and the churches and rectories of North-Load, East Brent, East Pennard, and Weston, parcel of the possessions of the late monastery of Glastonbury; and also the churches and rectories of Corston, Cumpston-Dunden, and Castle-Cary, parcel of the possessions of the priory of Bath, with the advowsons and right of patronage of those several churches, lands, glebes, pensions, tithes, &c.—all a very insufficient consideration for the lands thus shamefully dismembered from the bishoprick.

"After the death of the duke of Somerset, Bishop Bourne, Barlow's successor, with the utmost difficulty, and after repeated solicitations, found means to recover the following possessions, viz. Wells, Chard, Huish, Wookey, Dulcot, Hurcot, Ashton, East and West Horington, Priddy, Westbury, Coxley, Milton, Dinder, Evercreech, Cranmore, Whitchurch, Yardley, Chesterblade, Worminster, Wookey-Hole, Combe, Southwik, Old-Chard, Crin-Chard, Banwell, Chew, and Cheddar, to the yearly value of 332*l.* 18*s.* 11*d.* But this favour was granted to the bishop upon the hard condition of his giving up in consideration thereof the manors of Congresbury and Yatton." RICHARD BEADON, D.D., was translated from the see of Gloucester to Bath and Wells April 12th, 1802.

The diocese of Bath and Wells contains all Somersetshire, except Holy Cross, or the Temple Church, St. Mary Redcliffe, and St. Thomas with Leigh, chapels to Bedminster, in the county of Somerset; which three first, lying in the city of Bristol, belong to that diocese, as do all the other Bristol churches, in number fifteen, besides the cathedral: though they are in the ancient limits of Gloucestershire, and were ever

^b It may not be irrelevant here to add a list of the DEANS OF WELLS.

Ivo, the first dean of Wells, was so constituted about the year 1135. He occurs again under the year 1159.

RICHARD DE SPAKESTON occurs dean in 1160; and again, according to Wharton, in 1174.

ALEXANDER occurs in 1180, and again in 1209.

LEONIUS is noticed in 1213, and again in 1215.

RALPH DE LECHLADE is the next who occurs, in the time of Bishop Josceline.

PETER DE CICESTRIA attended as dean at a synod held in the church of Bath April 4th, 1220. His death is noticed in the Register of the dean and chapter in 1237; before the end of which year a chantry was founded for his soul in the cathedral, before the altar of St. Kalixtus.

WILLIAM DE MERTON was elected dean on the 13th of the kalends of October, 1237.

JOHN, called SARACENUS, was appointed by the pope's letters in 1242. He occurs again in the Chartulary of Glastonbury monastery in 1252.

GILES DE BRIDPORT received the king's assent to his election April 15th, 1253: upon whose advancement to the see of Salisbury, EDWARD LE CNOll, or DE LA CNOll, was chosen dean in the month of Sept. 1256. He died Sept. 16th, 1284.

THOMAS BUTTON, or DE BUTTON, was elected Nov. 15, 1284. On his promotion to the see of Exeter, in 1292, WILLIAM BURNELL was chosen dean.

WALTER DE HASELCHAW, who has been already noticed among the bishops of the see, was made dean, not, as Le Neve says, in 1295, but on the 16th of the kal. of Jan. 1298. The deanery having remained vacant from the death of Burnell in 1295.

HENRY HUSE, or HUSEE, succeeded to the deanery in 1302. His death is noticed in 1305.

JOHN GODELEGH succeeded on the death of Huse. He was a considerable benefactor to the fabric of his church; insomuch, that, in 1330, the chapter of the cathedral founded a chantry for two priests to pray for his good estate. He died Feb. 4th, 1332.

RICHARD DE BURY, also called RICHARD DE ST. EDMUND, was admitted dean in consequence of the pope's letters, Feb. 20th, 1332. He was, in the next year, preferred to the see of Durham, when,

WIBERT DE LITTLETON was elected on the 10th of the kal. of May, 1334. He died before the 2d of the kal. of Sept. 1335, when

WALTER DE LONDON was admitted dean. He died in 1350, when

JOHN DE CARLETON was elected to succeed him. He died in 1361.

WILLIAM DE CAMEL was the next elected, but refused the preferment: in consequence of which

STEPHEN DE PEMPELL, or PYMPEL, was chosen dean Nov. 3d, 1361. He died Feb. 3d, 1378, and was buried in the cathedral, before the altar of St. Stephen.

JOHN FORDHAM was elected Feb. 22, 1378. He was promoted in 1381 to the bishoprick of Durham.

THOMAS DE SUDBURY was made dean of Wells in the same year.

NICHOLAS SLAKE occurs dean in 1396. Le Neve, in his Fasti Eccl. Anglic. p. 36, quotes the Registers of Braybroke bishop of London, and Medeford bishop of Salisbury, to show that

HENRY BEAUFORT held this deanery in 1397. This was no other than the cardinal, the son of John of Gaunt. It is singular, however, that Kennett should have preserved the following memorandum from the Register of Bishop Bowet. "1401. 14 Nov. Dominus archiepiscopus Cant. contulit decanatum Well. (qui per tantum tempus notorie vacavit, et ad se devolutus est) domino Thomæ Tuttebury presbytero, amoto Nicholao Slake, dicti decanatus tunc illicito detentore, ex decreto Johannis Maydenhith decani Cicestr. commissarii in ea parte specialis domini archiepiscopi Cantuar. et die 26 Nov. episcopus B. W. admisit eundem Thomam Tuttebury ad decanatum Well. et installari mandavit."

The preferment of Cardinal Beaufort to this deanery in early life sufficiently accounts for his legacy to the church; the particulars of which have been already detailed from his will. The date of THOMAS TUTTEBURY's admission to this deanery has been just noticed. He held it but a short time: nor is it said whether he vacated it by death or preferment.

THOMAS STANLEY was elected dean Sept. 20th, 1403. Le Neve, after Godwin, makes him dean as early as 1401. He died March 11th, 1409.

RICHARD COURTNEY was elected May 26th, 1410. In 1413 he was removed to the bishoprick of Norwich.

THOMAS KARNEKE, or KARNEKA, was elected upon Courtney's promotion, but died in the month of September in the same year.

WALTER MEDFORD, or METFORD, archdeacon of Salisbury, was confirmed dean Nov. 8th, 1413. Upon whose death reckoned within that county till such time as Bristol became a county and city of itself.^a

The MEMBERS OF WELLS CATHEDRAL are, the bishop, dean,^b precentor, chancellor, treasurer, three archdeacons, a subdean, and forty-nine prebendaries, seven of whom, beside the dean, are residentiaries. Some of the prebends being annexed to and included within the dignities, their regular stated number is reduced. Beside these, there are five priest vicars, eight lay vicars, six choristers, an organist, a sacrist, and JOHN STAFFORD, LL.D., was confirmed in the deanery, Sept. 9th, 1423. In 1425 he was preferred, as has been already noticed, to the bishoprick of Wells.

JOHN FORREST was confirmed dean Nov. 19th, 1425. He died March 25th, 1446, and was buried in the cathedral.

JOHN DE LA BERE, bishop of St. David's, is said by Godwin to have held this deanery for a short time in 1447: but Le Neve thinks the mention of him alludes only to some controversy in the election of a successor to Forrest, as NICHOLAS CARENT appears to have been confirmed as Forrest's successor Aug. 28th, 1446. He died possessed of this deanery May 3d, 1467.

WILLIAM WYTHAM, LL.D., succeeded upon Carent's death. He died July 16th, 1472, and was buried in the cathedral.

JOHN GUNTORP, B.D., was elected Dec. 18th, 1472. Kennett, from the register of Wells, says that in 1487 he gave to the treasury of the church a massive silver image of the Virgin. "A.D. 1487 Sept. 8. Johannes Gunthorp decan. Well. imaginem quandam ex argento factam et deauratam gloriosæ Virginis Mariæ CLXIII. uncias ponderantem obtulit et præsentavit in thesauraria dictæ ecclesiæ Well. Reg. Well." He died June 25th, 1498.

WILLIAM COUSYN was elected dean Dec. 25th, 1498. He was confirmed April 15th, 1499; installed by proxy June 23d the same year, and in person June 8th, 1502. He died in 1525.

THOMAS WINTER succeeded March 26th, 1526. He was called the nephew, but is supposed to have been the son of Cardinal Wolsey. He resigned this deanery toward the close of the year 1528.

RICHARD WOLEMAN, LL.D., became dean in 1529. Wood says he died in the summer of 1537, and was buried in the cloister of St. Stephen's chapel Westminster. His successor was the celebrated

THOMAS CROMWELL earl of Essex, who appears to have held this deanery from 1537 till the time of his attainder. At the close of the statute of attainder enacted against him, a proviso was especially inserted, that nothing therein contained should extend or be in any wise prejudicial unto the bishop of Bath and Wells, the deanery, or the dean and chapter of Wells. See MS. Harl. Brit. Mus. 7089. Lord Cromwell was beheaded July 28th, 1540.

WILLIAM FITZJAMES was the next dean: appointed in the same year. He resigned the deanery in 1548: in which year

JOHN GOODMAN was appointed. He was deprived in 1550, when he was succeeded by WILLIAM TURNER. Turner was deprived in 1553; when

JOHN GOODMAN was restored. Goodman was again deprived in 1559. He was once more succeeded by WILLIAM TURNER, who held the deanery till his death, July 7th, 1568.

ROBERT WESTON, LL.D., succeeded to the deanery in 1570. He died in Ireland May 20th, 1573: and was buried in the cathedral of St. Patrick Dublin.

VALENTINE DALE, LL.D., was chosen dean in 1574. He died Nov. 17th, 1589.

JOHN HERBERT became dean in 1589.

BENJAMIN HEYDEN, D.D., succeeded in 1602. He died in 1607.

RICHARD MEREDITH, B.D., was installed Nov. 21, 1607. He died Aug. 15th, 1621, and was buried in the cathedral.

RALPH BARLOW, D.D., was installed in the month of September, 1621. He died at Wells, and was buried in the cathedral July 27th, 1631.

GEORGE WARBURTON, D.D., was collated Aug. 25th, 1631. He died in December, 1641.

WALTER RALEIGH, D.D., was collated Jan. 13th, 1641. He died Oct. 10th, 1646, and was buried in the cathedral. From this time the deanery was vacant fourteen years.

ROBERT CREIGHTON, D.D., was constituted dean in 1660: whence, in 1670, he was promoted to the bishoprick.

RALPH BATHURST, M.D., was installed June 28th, 1670.

WILLIAM GRAHME, D.D., was installed July 28th, 1704.

MATTHEW BRAILSFORD, D.D., was installed July 23d, 1713. He died Dec. 13th, 1733.

ISAAC MADOX, D.D., became dean the same year. He became bishop of St. Asaph in 1736, and finally, in 1743, bishop of Worcester.

JOHN HARRIS, D.D., succeeded to this deanery in 1736: holding it in commendam with the bishoprick of Landaff. He died Aug. 28th, 1738.

SAMUEL CRESWICK, D.D., was made dean Nov. 6th, 1739. He died Jan. 13th, 1766.

LORD FRANCIS SEYMOUR, son of the duke of Somerset, was appointed dean in the same month. He died Feb. 9th, 1799.

GEORGE WILLIAM LUKIN, D.D., became dean March 26th, 1799. He died Nov. 27th, 1812.

THE HON. and REV. HENRY RYDER, M.A., became dean of Wells Dec. 12th, 1812. Since, lord bishop of Gloucester.

During the time of Bishop Adrian de Castello, many of the MUNIMENTS of the Cathedral of WELLS appear to have been lost. In the Extracts from the register of his episcopate, contained in the Harleian manuscript 6966, we read, "Excommunicatio in eos qui Munimenta, Registra, et alias Scripturas publicas ex Archivis domini episcopi furto abstulerunt, Sept. A. D. 1515." We have Wharton's authority, also, for the fact that they again suffered in the duke of Monmouth's rebellion, A. D. 1685. "Nuper enim direpta sunt, et impio furore mutilata ac discissa a schismaticis in rebellione Somersetensi anno 1685 mota."^b regularly adorned with statues in a more perfect state than is seen in any cathedral, excepting that of Lincoln: they are of kings, queens, bishops, warriors, &c. as large as life. In the centre of the transepts rises a large square tower, a hundred and sixty feet in height, the base resting upon four broad arches. The nave is separated from the ailes by eighteen clustered pillars. The original plan of the church, as at Exeter, appears never to have been departed from, but to have been followed by successive bishops, till its completion by Bishop Stillington.

On the south side of the cathedral is the cloister: the west side of which, a hundred and sixty-two feet in length, was built by Bishop Beckington; the south side, a hundred and fifty-two feet in length, was begun by the same bishop, but completed by Thomas Henry treasurer of Wells; the east side, a hundred and fifty-nine feet in length, was the work of Bishop Bubwith.^a

The chapter-house, of an octagonal form, is fifty-two feet in diameter: the roof being supported by a central clustered column of Purbeck marble.

Among the chapels in this cathedral, Collinson enumerates Bishop Beckwith's, in the nave; Knights chapel, built by Hugh Sugar, one of the executors of Bishop Beckington; Bishop Beckington's own chapel; St. Catherine's; and John de Middleton, or Milton's chapel: beside several others on the north side, in one of which Peter Lightfoot's astronomical clock, brought hither from Glastonbury, is still preserved.

The college of vicars, adjoining the cathedral, has been already noticed as founded by Ralph de Salopia.

Southward, at a short distance from the church, stands the bishop's palace, an ancient and august structure. Its walls are said by Collinson to encompass seven acres of ground, and they are flanked by redoubts and half-moons. A deep moat, supplied with water from St. Andrew's well, surrounds the whole: over which, on the north side, is a bridge, with a stately gatehouse, serving as an entrance to the exterior court, or ballium. On the east side of this court is the bishop's dwelling-house, containing several handsome apartments, with the chapel. On the south side of the court, nearly opposite the entrance, stood the great hall, built by Bishop Burnell.^b

[Reg. Well. III. fol. 16, et fol. 339. Hearn. Ad. de Domerh. tom. i. p. 240. Vide Harl. MS. 6968, ex magno Libro Cartarum penes Dec. et Capit. Well. p. 47.]

JOHANNES Dei gratia rex Angliæ archiepiscopis, episcopis, &c. salutem. Sciatis nos intuitu Dei, et pro salute animæ nostræ liberaliter et pure concessisse et præsentī carta nostra confirmasse venerabili patri nostro Joscelino Bathon. et Glaston. episcopo et successoribus suis, quod si contigerit quod ecclesia Glaston. sub abbatis regimine debeat gubernari, idem episcopus et omnes successores sui in perpetuum habeant in liberam elemosynam patronatum ejusdem abbatiæ et pertinentiarum, cum omni jure, et cum omnibus dignitatibus, libertatibus, et liberis consuetudinibus ad patronatum pertinentibus. Quicumque vero inibi promotus fuerit ad regimen abbatiæ illius, recipiet de manu prædicti episcopi et successorum suorum temporalia, quæ regalia appellarentur, si ad nos pertineret patronatus, et ipsis, tanquam dominis et patronis ejusdem ecclesiæ, faciet fidelitatem de feodis quæ pertinebant ad abbatiam illam, facturus fidelitatem postea nobis et hæredibus nostris tanquam principibus, sed non propter feoda. Et idem episcopus et omnes successores sui in perpetuum, per manus suas nobis et hæredibus nostris facient servitium regale quod ecclesia Glaston. debuit et consuevit facere dum ibidem prius essent abbates. Abbas vero, qui pro tempore fuerit, faciet prædicto episcopo, et successoribus suis in perpetuum, tanquam dominis et patronis, servitia, quæ de feodis, quæ ad eum et abbatiam suam pertinebunt, nobis et hæredibus nostris debebuntur. Si vero contigerit abbas Glaston. decedere dum episcopatus Bathon. vacaverit, et in manu nostra, vel hæredum nostrorum extiterit aliquo tempore, nos et hæredes nostri custodiam habebimus ejusdem abbatiæ cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, quamdiu episcopatus Bathon. vacaverit, sicut aliarum abbatiarum regni nostri vacantium et ratione prædicti episcopatus vacantis cum assensu nostro, abbas ibi interim præficietur. Sed quotiens abbatiam illam vacare contigerit, non vacante sede episcopali, custodiam et ordinationem illius abbatiæ idem episcopus et successores sui habebunt libere et pacifice in perpetuum ut patroni; ita quod in ordinatione ipsius ecclesiæ de abbate vel abbatis electione, nec ante, nec post electionem abbatis regius requiretur assensus, sed totum ad episcopum pertinebit. Quare volumus et firmiter præcipimus quod prædictus episcopus et successores sui prædictum patronatum abbatiæ Glaston. cum custodia et ordinatione ejusdem, cum vacaverit, habeant et teneant in liberam elemosynam, libere, quiete, integre, plenarie, cum omnibus pertinentiis, dignitatibus, libertatibus, et liberis consuetudinibus suis in perpetuum, sicut prædictum est. Prohibemus autem, ex parte Dei omnipotentis, et beatæ Mariæ, et omnium sanctorum, et nostra, ne quis contra hanc piam et liberam concessionem et confirmationem venire præsumat: quod si quis fecerit, maledictionem Dei, et beatæ Mariæ, et omnium sanctorum et nostram incurrat. *Statuta Jocelini, Episcopi Bathon. acta in Capitulo Wellen.

[MS. Harl. Brit. Mus. 1682, fol. 1.]

salutem in Domino. Postquam ad episcopatus officium nos promoveri permisit altissimus, omne studium adhibuimus, et adhuc adhibemus, ut cultus divini nominis, et decus ecclesiæ nobis commissæ, temporibus nostris cumuletur et amplietur, quicquid ad dispositionem, utilitatem, et ornatum ipsius respicit semper cogitantes, et ad effectum pro viribus nostris deducere festinantes. Ecclesiam S. Andreae Well. quæ periculum ruinæ patiebatur pro sua vetustate, cui, Domino Jesu Christo salvatore nostro permittente, præsidemus, ipsius auxilium invocantes, ædificare cœpimus et ampliare; in qua de sola sui gratia adeo profecimus, quod ipsam divinis precibus et sacris unctionibus, cum altaribus, vasis, et vestibus, et reliquiis, ad divinum cultum explendum, in eadem devote solempniterque consecravimus. Et quoniam ecclesias ædificantibus non solum de ædificio ipsiusque consecratione cogitandum est, verum etiam de ministrantium alimentis, cum communia ministrantibus in ecclesia prædicta, temporibus prædecessorum nostro assignata, tenuis fuerit et insufficiens, ipsam, benedictus Deus, temporibus nostris in multis ampliavimus, terras, ecclesias, et alia plura bona ad augmentationem commune conferendo; ita quod quotidianæ distributiones, quæ tantum præsentibus in villa conferuntur, inde poterunt bene augmentari, quod plenius fieri debere intendamus in conferendo. Nos igitur de consensu Johannis Sarraceni, decani, et capituli nostri Well. qui pure, et simpliciter, et absolute, de mera et spontanea voluntate sua nostræ super hoc se supposuerunt ordinationi et statuto, taliter ordinandum duximus et statuendum ut, cessante omnino de cætero modo et forma prioris distributionis communæ cotidianæ in pane de grangia, habeamus nos et successores nostri singulis diebus, quibus Well. venerimus, aut ibi fuerimus, aut inde recesserimus, octo denarios pro communia cotidiana, et quinque denarios pro pane, qui prius habere solebamus per diem sex denarios et quatuor panes albos. Quinque vero personæ, scil. decanus, præcentor, archidiaconus, cancellarius, et thesaurar. qui habere consueverunt per diem sex denarios pro communia cotidiana, et duos albos panes, et duos nigros, percipiant de cætero singulis diebus, quibus Well. venerint, illic fuerint, vel inde recesserint, octo denarios pro communia cotidiana, et quatuor denarios pro panē. Alii vero omnes canonici singulis diebus modo prædicto pro communia cotidiana percipiant quatuor denar. et pro pane duos denar. qui prius percipere consueverunt tres denar. et unum album panem et alium nigrum panem per diem. Vicarii vero, singuli, singulis diebus, pro communia panis, quam secunda die tantum de grangia percipere consueverunt, singulos percipiant denarios, dummodo matutinis et aliis horis canonicis interfuerint. Quod si non interfuerint, denarii careant perceptione, præter illos, quos ex causa legitima ab eo^a contigerit, dum tamen fuerint in villa, quibus decanus, vel subdecanus,^b relaxationem duxerit concedend. Cæteri vero omnes, qui ex quacunque causa integram communam panis singulis diebus habere solent de grangia, unum denarium percipiant per diem ea ratione, qua panem percipere consueverunt, et pro dimidia communa panis obulum. Si vero contigerit aliquando, quod absit, fructus vel redditus ad grangiam deputatos, de qua solet fieri panis distributio ad communam, ad dictam distributionem denar. pro pane per annum non posse sufficere, a tempore quo non suffecerint, usque ad finem ejusdem anni cesset omnino prædicta distributio denariorum pro pane, qui de grangia solvi solebat et debebat, quoad omnes, qui panem de grangia vel denarios pro pane solent percipere, quousque de grangia^c superioris vel aliunde provisum fuerit, unde plene per omnia perfici valeat dicta distributio denariorum pro pane de grangia. Speramus tamen, et firmam spem concipimus, quod cum ad manus decani et capituli plenarie pervenerint omnia, quæ ad dictæ communæ augmentum contulimus, et assignavimus, et corporali eorundem gavisi fuerint possessione, plene per omnia sufficient ad distributionem communæ cotidianæ in forma prædicta faciendam. Et ad competens residuum inter personas et canonicos residentes, in villa distribuendum in fine anni. Ordinavimus etiam et statuimus, quod quicquid ultra distributionem communæ cotidianæ in forma præmissa de fructibus ipsius in fine anni superfuerit, inter personas canonicas in villa residentes distribuatur, et saltem^d instauris et aliis necessariis reddituum commune. Residentes autem interpretamur quoad participationem residui in fine anni omnes illos canonicos, qui per medium annum, sive continue sive interpolatim fecerint in villam residentiam, præter decanum, præcentorem, cancell. et thesaurar. quos interpretamur residentes, si per duas partes anni fecerint residentiam, sive continue, sive interpolatim. Hæc autem ordinamus, salvis in omnibus aliis per omnia unicuique, tam personæ quam simplici canonico, omnibus aliis rationabilibus petitionibus et consuetudinibus ecclesiæ Well. hucusque contentis.^e In cujus rei robur et testimonium præsentī scripto sigillum nostrum apponi fecimus, una cum sigillo Johannis Sarraceni, decani, et capituli Well. Act. in capitulo Well. sextodecimo kal. Nov. m^o.cc^o. quadragesimo secundo et pontif. nostri tricesimo septimo.

NUM. XXVIII.

An Acte touching the Deane and Chapter of Welles, to be one sole Chapter of it selfe.

[Stat. 34, 35 Hen. VIII. ca. 15, edit. Berthelet, Lond. 1551, fol.]

WHERE before this time the chapter unto the See and Bishshoprike of Bathe and Welles was the deane and chapter of the cathedrall church of saint Andrewe of Welles in the countye of Somerset, and the late prior and covent of the late priorie or monasterye of the apostelles sainte Peter and Paule of Bathe, in the said countie of Somerset: by reason whereof al feoffementes, leases, grauntes, and estates, made of any of the manours, landes, tenementes, heredytamentes, fees, offices, or any other thyng belongyng or appertainyng unto the said see and bishoprike, or whereof the bishop of the said see of Bathe and Welles for the tyme beyng, was seised in the right of the said bishoprike, or goyng out of the sayd manours, landes, tenementes, or heredytamentes, belonging unto the said bishoprike, which shulde be good or of effecte in the lawe, to bynde his successors, in succession after the death of the said bishop of the said bishoprike for the tyme being grauntor, lessour, or givour of any of the premysses, as is aforesayde, ought to be made in writyng by the same bishop under his seale: and to be also by wrytyng sealed, as well with the common seale of the priour and covent for the tyme beyng of the said late priorie or monasterye of Bathe, as also with the chapter seale of the deane and chapter of Welles for the tyme beyng ratified, confirmed, and assented unto, whiche said priory or monasterye of Bath divers yeres now past, was and now is lawfully dissolved, extincted, and determined. And where as dyvers and sundrye gyftes, feoffementes, grauntes, leases, writynges, and other thynges have ben made in writyng sithen the dissolution of the sayde late priorye or monasterye of Bathe, of and in parcell of the premisses, or goinge out, or to be perceyued or taken of and in the same, by the nowe bishop of the said see and bishoprike. Whiche said gyftes, feoffementes, grauntes, leasses, writynges, and other thynges the said deane and chapitre of Welles, hath sith the makynge thereof ratified and confirmed under theyr common seale, in due fourme after the law. And yet that not withstandinge there is and remayneth great doubte and question among divers persons, whether the confirmation or assent of the saide deane or chapiter of Welles, had and made by writynge under theyr chapiter seale, sythens the dissolution of the saied late priorie or monasterye be sufficient in the lawe, to make perfecte and good the same gyftes, feoffementes, grauntes, leases, writynges, and other thinges heretofore made by the said now bishop, to bynde him and his successours in succession or not: and also whether al giftes, feoffementes, grauntes, leases, writynges, dedes, actes, and other thynges hereafter lafully to be made in writynge, by the said nowe byshop, or any his successours, and sealed with the seale of the byshop of the said see, or bysshopryke for the tyme beyng, and confirmed, ratified, or assented unto by the saied deane and chapiter of Welles, under or with their chapiter seale, shalbe good and availeable in the lawe, to binde the saied bishop of the said see, or bishopryke for the tyme beyng in succession. In consideration wherof, and to thintent to avoide all ambiguities, doubttes, and questions, that may growe, come, ryse, or be in that behalfe; be it enacted, ordeyned, and establysshed, by the kyng our soveraygne lord, the lordes spirituall and temporall, and the commons in this presente parliament assembled, and by the auctoritie of the same, that all gyftes, feoffementes, grauntes, leases, writynges, dedes, and actes, made in writyng by the saied now bishop of the sayde see or bissopryke, under the seale of the same bishop, sithen the dissolution of the said late priorie, or monasterye of Bathe, or, at any tyme sithen the dissolution of the same late monasterye, and also all gyftes, feoffementes, grauntes, leases, dedes, writynges, and actes hereafter to be made in wrytinge by the bishop of Bathe and Welles for the tyme beyng, or any manours, landes, tenementes, heredytamentes, offices, fees, or any other thyng belongynge to the said bisshoprike or goynge out of the same, or in any wise touchynge or concernynge the same bysshoprike or see, and the same sealed by the said bysshop for the tyme being, and whiche at any tyme sythen the dissolution of the saied late monasterye have ben, or at any tyme hereafter shalbe ratified, confirmed, and assented unto by the deane and chapiter of Welles for the tyme beyng, in writyng under their chapiter seale, shall be good and effectuell in the lawe to all intentes and purposes, to binde, in succession, the successours of the saied bysshop for the tyme beyng, accordynge to the tenours, purportes, and effectes of the same gyftes, feoffementes, grauntes, leases, and other writynges, dedes, and actes, so made or hereafter to be made in writynge: any lawe, custome, or vsage heretofore used or had to the contrary notwithstanding.

And further be it enacted, by the auctoritie aforesaid, that the deane and chapiter of Welles aforesaid and their successour for the tyme beyng, shalbe from hensforth for ever excepted, taken, reputed, and adjudged, to bee the full, entier, and sole chapiter of the bishoprike of Bathe and Welles, and belongynge to the same bysshopryke, in full name, nature, and auctoritie, power, and qualitie, to all intentes, constructions, and purposes, as the sole chapiter of the same bishoprike.

Provyded alwayes, that this act, or any thyng therin contained, do not extende to binde any founder or givour of any manours, landes, tenementes, or hereditamentes of the saied see and bishoprike, or therunto belonginge, of, for, or concernynge all such actions and sutes, as they or any of them may, shuld, or ought to have, by reason of any alienation in fee symple or fee taile, hereafter to be made of any of the manours, landes, tenementes, or heredytamentes of the saied see and bishoprike, or of any parte therof.

Winchcombe Abbey,

IN

GLOUCESTERSHIRE.

ING Offa is said to have built a Nunnery here in the year 787; in the room of which, A.D. 798, Kenulph king of Mercia laid the foundation of a stately abbey, wherein, at its first foundation, no fewer than three hundred monks were maintained.^a He com- mended it to the protec- tion of the blessed Virgin Mary.^b The particulars and Charter of Kenulph's foundation will be found in the Appendix of Instru- ments.^c At the time of the dedication, Kenulph is said to have released at the high altar, the king of Kent, whom he had newly taken prisoner.^d In process of time this monastery came into the possession of secu- lars, or otherwise was almost wholly decayed, when, A.D. 985, Oswald bishop of Worcester reformed the discipline and recovered the lands of this religious house, which appears then, or subsequently, to have been dedicated to St. Kenelm (the son of Kenulph), as well as to the Virgin Mary.^e The History of Ramsey Abbey, printed in Gale's XV. Scriptores, places Oswald's foundation before the year 974.

ABBATS.

LIVINGUS, abbat of Winchcombe, occurs among the witnesses to Bertulph's Charter, granted to the abbey of Croyland in 851.^f

GERMANUS is stated to have been the first abbat upon Oswald's foundation.^g He had before been prior of Ramsey.^h

GODWINE occurs as abbat in 1044, in a Charter granted by King Edward the Confessor to the mo- nastery of St. Peter at Ghent.ⁱ He is supposed to be the same person whom Stubbs calls EADWINE.^k Flo- rence of Worcester places his death in the month of October, 1053; and adds that after his death Aldred bishop of Worcester kept the abbey in his own hands for a considerable time^l: at last appointing

GODRIC, the king's chaplain, the son of Godman,

^a See Num. IV. Matthew of Westm. edit. Francof. 1601, p. 153, says, "Kenulphus pater Kenelmi, fundavit abbatiam de Winchelcomba sufficienter ad 200. sustentandos monachos." Rudder, Hist. Glouc. p. 825, says, it is supposed that not more than forty or fifty of them were in holy orders, the rest working to supply the priests and themselves in all necessities that might be wanting.

^d So, Matthew of Westminster, "Anno gratiæ 798. Kinulfus rex Merciorum, Cantia provinciam hostiliter perlustrans, prædatus est, regemque eorum Eadbertum cognomine Pren, viribus sibi imparem comprehendit, et vinctum secum cum victoria reduxit. Sed non multo post, quum apud Winchelcumbam ecclesiam, quam fundave- rat, fecit dedicari, ipsa consecrationis die, regem captivum ante altare manumittens libertate donavit. Aderat ibi Cuthredus quem Kinulfus rex præfecerat Cantuaritis, loco Eadberti supradicti."

In respect of the dedication of the church, Matthew of Westmin- ster is more particular than Malmesbury, whose account is quoted in the Appendix, Num. I. Matthew of Westminster says, "Basilica plausibus resonabat, platea discursibus fremebat, quod illuc in con- ventu xiii. episcoporum et decem ducum nullus largitatis pastus est repulsam, dum singuli reffectis marsupiiis, hinc abibant. Nam præter illa xenia, quæ optimates susceperant inestimabilis pretii et numeri, in utensilibus, vestibus, equis electissimis, omnibus qui agros non habebant libram argenti, presbyteris marcam auri, monachis solidum unum, et postremo multa universo populo erogavit. Monasterium quoque tam magnis ampliavit redditibus, quod hoc tempore incredi- bile videatur. Mat. Westm. ut supr. p. 151. Compare the Append. Num. V. "De prædiis, dominiis, et possessionibus per beatissimum regem Kenulphum Winchelcumbensi monasterio collatis."

^e Tanner, Notit. Mon. Annal. Wigorn. Angl. Sacr. tom. i. p. 473, Dugdale has given Leland's Excerpts relating to the legend of St. Kenelm's life. The following is Matthew of Westminster's account: "Anno gratiæ 821. Kenulfo rege Merciorum defuncto, corpus ejus apud Winchelcombam sepulturam accepit. Successit ei in regnum Kenelmus filius ejus, quem pater ejus septennem Quendridæ sorori suæ commendaverat nutriendum. Hæc autem falsa regnandi cupiditate seducta, fratruelem de medio tollendum satelliti cuidam, qui alumnus illius fuerat, commendavit. Is insontem puerum, quasi venatum du- cens, inter fruteta occultavit, capite obruncato. Et mirum dictu, quod res tam cælate in Anglia perpetrata, Romæ innotuit divinitus revelata. Siquidem super altare beati Petri apostolorum principis charta quædam perferente candida columba cadens, necis sancti Ke- nelmi regis et martyris, et sepulchralis loci, per ordinem index fuit. Quæ schedula, quoniam Anglicis et aureis literis fuerat exarata, a Romanis et aliis qui aderant clericis, papa jubente, frustra legi tentatur. Sed salubriter angelus illis astitit, qui Latinae linguæ schedulam invol- vens, fecit ut Romani pontificis epistola regibus Anglis compatriotam martyrem indicaret. Habebatur autem inter cætera contentum in charta: In klenc kau bathe Kenelm kynebearne lith under thorne heaved by reaved. Quod Latine sonat, In clenc kou bath, id est, In pastura vaccarum, Kenelmus regis filius jacet sub spina, capite pri- vatus, juxta caput. Igitur (ut dictum est) corpore beati martyris regi- bus Angliæ mirabiliter patefacto, frequenti cœtu clericorum et magna- tum, puerile corpus de spelunca levatum, apud Winchelcumbam vehe- batur. Paricida, sive potius fratricida fœmina nitebatur, clericorum cantu ac laicorum, alacri plausu, propter tanti martyris inventionem commota, e fenestra cœnaculi, in quo stabat caput extulit, et forte psalmum, 'Deus laudem meam ne tacueris,' decantabat, quem a fine, nescio quo præstigio, retrogade dicens, nitebatur cantantium lætitiâ infirmare. Cumque illa à fine usque ad hunc versum, 'Hoc opus eorum, qui detrahunt mihi apud Dominum,' pervenisset; ambo ejus oculi a sedibus suis evulsi continuos super ipsam, quam legebat paginam corruerunt. Adhuc autem psalterium illud, argento fabrefactum et lapsorum luminum cruore madefactum, hujus correctionis præbet indicium. De hujus quoque sancti martyrio quidam sic ait,

'In clenc, sub spina, jacet in convalle bovina,

Vertice privatus, Kenelmus rege creatus.'

abbat, A.D. 1054.^a This Godric is also called EADRICUS. He appears to have opposed the Norman invasion in 1066; in consequence of which he was deprived of his abbacy by the Conqueror, who afterwards kept him a close prisoner in Gloucester castle, committing the charge of Winchcombe monastery to the abbat of Evesham, till such time as a Norman of the name of

GALANDUS was appointed abbat.^b This abbat is said to have died in 1074: though, from other authority, he appears to have attended the council held at London in 1075.^c

RADULFUS succeeded to the abbacy in 1077.^d

It was in the time of this abbat that the Domesday Survey was taken, A.D. 1087; whence it appears that Winchcombe abbey held, in Oxfordshire, twenty-four hides of land at Henestan, and one at Cestitone. In Gloucestershire, thirty hides at Scireburne, seven at Bladintun, three hides at Tveninge, one hide at Freolintune, two hides and a half at Aldritone, three hides and a half at Niwetone, three hides at Stantone, two at Carleton, seven at Snaweshille, ten hides at Heniberge, three hides and a half at Edelmintone, two hides in Hidicote, and three and a half in Wenric. In Warwickshire the abbey held six hides in Alne.

The total number of hides held by the abbey of Winchcombe at the time of the Survey was a hundred and nine; including seventy-eight in Gloucestershire. A subsequent entry in the Survey states that, in the time of King Edward, the abbey was assessed in Gloucestershire for sixty hides only. The rental, at the time of the Survey, appears to have produced eighty-two pounds.^e

It was in this abbat's time, also, on the ides of October 1091, that the church of Winchcombe was struck by lightning.^f

Abbat Radulfus died in 1095. In which year

GYRMUND, a monk of Gloucester, was made abbat. He died on the 4th of the ides of June, 1122.

GODEFRID, prior of Winchcombe, was the next abbat; succeeding immediately upon Gyrmund's death. The manuscript Annals of Winchcombe, formerly preserved among the Cotton manuscripts, placed his death on the nones of March, 1138. The Annals of Tewkesbury say in 1137. The continuator of Florence of Worcester says in 1136.^g

ROBERT, a monk of Cluny, related to King Stephen, received the benediction as abbat from Simon bishop of Worcester on the 11th of the kalends of June, 1138.^h In his time, on the 4th of the kalends of October, 1151, the abbey was destroyed by fire.ⁱ On the 8th of the kalends of February following abbat Robert died.^k

WILLIAM, a monk of Christ church Canterbury, succeeded in 1152.^l

GERYASE, a monk of Winchcombe, was made abbat in 1157. He died in 1171.^m

HENRY, prior of Gloucester, succeeded in 1171. He died in 1181.ⁿ

CRISPIN, prior of Winchcombe, succeeded as abbat in 1181.^o He died in 1182.

RADULPHUS, or RALPH, succeeded in 1183.^p He died in 1194.^q

ROBERT, monk of Winchcombe, became abbat in 1194.^r He died on the 6th of the ides of June, 1221.^s

THOMAS, prior of Winchcombe, succeeded in 1221.^t He died on the 5th of the nones of October, 1232.^u

HENRY DE TUDINTON, sacrist of the monastery, was installed abbat Oct. 29th, 1232.^x He died in the year 1247. He was succeeded in the same year by

JOHN YANWORTHE, whom Willis calls JOHN DE YARMOUTH, or GANEWORTH. This abbat presided at the chapter of the Benedictine order held at Oxford in 1271. He resigned his abbacy in 1282: two years after which he died.^y

WALTER DE WYKEWANE, cellerar of Winchcombe, succeeded to the abbacy in 1282.^z His constitutions for the government of the monastery will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.^a It was during this abbat's time that the church of Endstone in Oxfordshire was appropriated to the abbey, A.D. 1308.^b

THOMAS DE SHIREBURN became abbat, on the death of Wykewane, in 1314. The temporalities were restored to him July 10th, 8 Edw. II. His successor was

RICHARD DE IDEBURY, or YDEBURY, sacrist of the monastery; to whose election the king gave his consent 14th June, 1315.^c He died in 1339.

WILLIAM DE SHIRBURN was chosen abbat early in 1340; on the 28th of April, in which year the temporalities of the monastery were restored to him.^d

ROBERT DE YPEWELLA, or IPPEWELLE, was confirmed abbat Sept. 24th, 1352.^e He resigned A.D. 1359, 34 Edw. III.^f

WALTER DE WINFORTON, or WINFORTUNE, cellerar of the church of Worcester, succeeded to the abbacy on Yppewell's cession. He died June 22d, 1395:^g and was succeeded on July 6th following by WILLIAM BRADELEY, to whom the temporalities of the monastery were restored July 24th.^h He died December 28th, 1422.

JOHN CHELTENHAM was elected abbat Jan. 15th following: receiving the benediction in the cathedral of Worcester on the 8th of March. Willis is wrong in placing abbat Cheltenham's death in 1452. He died in 1454.

WILLIAM WINCHECOMBE, his successor, received the benediction as abbat at Alvenchurch Dec. 21, 1454. Leland says, "In K. Hen. V. tyme, the paroch chyrch of the towne [of Winchcombe] was kept in the body of the church of the monastery. But in K. Hen. VI. tyme, one William Winchecombe, abbot of Winchelescombe, began with the consent of the towne a paroch church at the west ende of the abbey, where of ould tyme had beene and then was a litle chappell of St. Pancrace. Abbot William made the east ende of the church. The parishioners had gathered a 200*l.* and began the body

JOHN TWYNNYNGE received the benediction as abbat Aug. 22, 1474. He died in the house of the Carmelites at Oxford in 1488.^b

RICHARD KYDERMINSTRE was confirmed abbat July 10th, 1488. He had been educated in Gloucester college, where there was an apartment belonging to the abbey called Winchcombe Lodging. Willis says, "he was a learned man, and by his wise government, and his encouragement of virtue and good letters, made the monastery flourish so much that it was equal to a little university." An. 1500, he travelled to Rome, and became afterwards a celebrated preacher. In the year 1515, the privileges of the clergy being attacked, he preached a remarkable Sermon on that account, showing that it was against the Law of God, who, by his prophet David, says, 'Touch not my Anointed, and do my prophets no harm.'^c

Leland says, he "did great cost of the church, and enclosed the abbey towards the towne with a maine stone-wall ex quadrato saxo."^d

Abbat Kyderminstre wrote a valuable history of the foundation of his monastery, together with the lives of the Abbats from Germanus to his own time. This book was unfortunately lost in the fire of London, A.D. 1666. Dugdale, however, had previously made some extracts from it.^e

To the notice of his works already mentioned, Wood adds 'Tractatus contra Doctrinam M. Lutheri,' finished in 1521.

The Cotton manuscript Nero B. vi. contains a Latin letter from our abbat to Cardinal Wolsey, congratulating him upon his appointment to the see of York, written in a high-flown style of flattery.

"As for our learned and curious author, Richard Kedermyster," says Wood, "he gave way to fate, to the great reluctancy of all that knew the virtue and piety of the man, in fifteen hundred thirty and one, or thereabouts; and was buried in his own church of Winchcombe abbey."^f

He was succeeded by

RICHARD ANCELME, ANSTELME, or MOUNSLOW, the last abbat; who subscribed to the king's supremacy A.D. 1534. After which, with his monks, he surrendered his abbey into the hands of the King's visitors, Dec. 3d, ^e See Numm. III. IV. V. VII. Wood says, "This Register of Winchcombe, containing at least five books, or parts, came, after the dissolution of the abbey there, into obscure hands. At length, it being produced by an ordinary farmer at an assize held at Gloucester, for the proof of some matter then in question, at which Sir William Morton, lord of the site of Winchcombe abbey, was present; he, by some device, got it out of the farmer's hands, as belonging more properly to him, and kept it sometimes in his house at Kidlington in Oxfordshire, and sometimes in his lodgings at Serjeants Inn in Fleet Street, London. But so it was, that the said Sir William, who was one of the justices of the King's Bench, being in his Norfolk circuit, at what time the dreadful conflagration of London happened, (which was Sept. 2, 3, &c. 1666,) the said book, with other of his goods, and the Inn itself, was totally consumed to ashes. Whether there be any other copy left, I am not certain: sure it is, that Dr. Samuel Fell of Christ Church in Oxon. had a copy of it (written either in vellum or parchment) about 1630, as by some notes taken thence (as then remaining in his custody,) which I have seen, doth manifestly appear; but from whence he had it, or to whom it did afterwards return, (for I think he borrowed it) I know not. Sir William Morton also showed to me in his house at Kidlington several extracts made from that copy, which was sometimes in his hands written by one of his clerks, but, in many material things false. Which extracts are I presume in the hands of his son Sir James Morton." Ath. Ox. edit. Bliss, vol. i. 4to. Lond. 1813, col. 63.

^f Ath. Ox. ut sup. Warton. Hist. Engl. Poet. vol. ii. p. 447, says, His erudition is attested in an epistle from the university of Oxford to King Henry the Eighth. Longland, bishop of Lincoln, the most eloquent preacher of his time, in the dedication to Kyderminstre of five quadragesimal sermons delivered at court, and printed by Pinson in 1517, insists largely on his singularis eruditio, and other shining qualifications.

^g Mit. Ab. vol. i. p. 213. The pensions, as originally assigned, according to Willis, ibid. Addit. p. 71, were as follows:

"Richarde Mounsflowe late abbotte, 140*l.* and 40 lodes of firewood of Depewode yerelie, by th' assignement of the receiver for the tyme being. John Hancock prior, sexten, and master of the chappell, 8*l.* Will. Craker sen. and chaunter, Will. Blossom sen. almenor and pi-

A. D. 1539, when he obtained a pension of 160*l.* per annum. This, in the time of Philip and Mary, had been lessened to 120*l.* per annum; Willis supposes, on account of his having had some preferment given to him to quit his pension in part.^g

Sir Robert Atkyns says, "The town of Winchcomb, with the hundreds of Kiftsgate, Holford, and Gretesden, were let to ferm to the abbat of Winchcomb, 8 Hen. III. The inheritance of Winchcomb town and Kiftsgate hundred were granted to the abbat the same year. The abbey of Winchcomb purchased a charter of free-warren in Winchcomb, 30 Hen. III. and that grant was allowed in a writ of Quo Warranto 15 Edw. I."^h

The revenues of the abbey were valued at the Dissolution at 759*l.* 11*s.* 9*d.* per annum.

The manor of Winchcomb continued in the abbey until its dissolution: it was then granted, with the scite of the monastery, to Sir Thomas Seimour, 1 Edw. VI.; upon whose attainder, 4 Edw. VI., it was granted to William Parr, marquis of Northampton.ⁱ In consequence of another attainder, the scite of the monastery was granted, in the 1st of Queen Mary, to John Lord Chandos. He died the same year, when livery of the scite was granted to Edmund Lord Chandos.^k

A toft and lands in Winchcomb, late belonging to the abbey, were granted in the 35th of Henry VIII. to Richard Andrews and Nicholas Temple. Other lands in Winchcomb, belonging to the abbey, were granted to Richard Andrews and Thomas Hysley in the 36th Hen. VIII.^l

A wood called Depwood, and a wood called Hemlyehoo, in Winchcomb, which had lately belonged to the abbey, were granted to Edmund Lord Chandos in the 1st of Eliz. Other lands in Winchcomb, which likewise belonged to the abbey, were granted to Robert earl of Leicester and to John Morley in the 24th Eliz.

Tithes in Winchcomb, late the abbey's, were granted to Sir Christopher Hatton, 24 Eliz. Others tithes in Winchcomb, which belonged to the abbey, were granted to Sir John Fortescue and Richard Tomlins, 4 Jam. I.^m

Beside the REGISTER of Winchcomb abbey formerly in the possession of Sir William Morton, Tanner notices a Book of the Possessions of the Abbey by Inquisition temp. Hen. VIII. preserved in the Remembrancer's Office in the Exchequer. He also notices the three following manuscripts, together with several original Charters, as formerly in the possession of Sir John Dutton, Knt., of Sherborne:

Rudder says there is no description of the abbey-church extant; and it is thought that the whole was demolished, very soon after the surrender, by Lord Seymour, the first proprietor. Since which time, the very scite of the buildings being levelled, and turned into ploughed fields, it is only conjectured that they stood on the east side of the present parish-church.^b

ANNO Dominicæ incarnationis DCCCLXXXVII. rex Merciorum Offa, in Glaornensi pago, in loco qui Winchilcumba dicitur, monasterium construxit, in quo sanctionales constituit.

[Will. Malmesb. fol. 161 b, n. 20.]

IN eodem pago (Glocestrensi scilicet) est Winchelcumbense monasterium, quod Kenulphus rex Merciorum construxit, ingenti et temporibus nostris incredibili munificentia, fecitque dedicari ecclesiam à xij. episcopis, quorum princeps Wilfridus Cantuariæ archiepiscopus. Ibi in illa dedicationis pompa in decem ducum conventu manumisit ad altare regem Cantuaritarum, quem nuper belli jure ceperat captivum. Ibi præter illa xenia quæ magnates susceperant, inestimabilis scilicet numeri et pretii, erogavit omnibus qui agros non habebant libram argenti, presbyteris marcam auri, monachis solidum unum; præterea toti populo plura. Hoc monasterium, ut semper mortalia labuntur in decursum, cum tempore regis Edgari solo ferè nomine staret, per beatum Oswaldum archiepiscopum nonnihil resuscitatum est. Factus ibi Germanus abbas, quem de Floriaco secum adduxerat, magno adjumento fuit et religioni, et restorationi ecclesie.

Ibi requiescit pater Kenulphus, cum filio Kenelmo, quem genitor septennem Quendridæ sorori reliquerat alendum. Sed illa falsò cupiditati suæ regnum pollicita, fraterculum tollendum è medio satelliti qui alumnus erat commendavit. Is insontem quasi venatum ducens, inter fruticeta obtruncatum occuluit.

Et mirum dictu, quod fraus tam celatè in Anglia commissæ, Romæ divinitus innotuit. Siquidem membrana super altare sancti Petri columba supernè ferente delapsa, necis et sepulturæ loci per ordinem index fuit. Quæ quod elementis Anglicis erat conscripta, à Romanis et aliarum gentium hominibus, qui aderant, frustra legi tentata. Sed salubriter et in tempore astitit Anglus, et latialitè linguæ involucrum evolvens, effecit ut apostolici epistola regibus Anglis compatriotam martyrem indicaret. Quocirca frequenti cœtu, pueruli corpus levatum vehebatur in Winchelcumbam. Ita clericorum vocali cantu, et laico alacri plausu parricida foemina comota, è fenestra cænaculi in quo stabat caput extulit, et fortè psalmum cantabat, 'Deus laudem meam.' Quem à fine, nescio quo præstigio, retrogradum ducens, nitebatur lætitiâ cantantium infirmare. Tum verò vi divina lumina veneficæ cavis orbibus evulsa, cruore versum polluerunt. Hoc opus eorum qui detrahunt mihi apud Dominum, et qui loquuntur mala adversus animam meam. Cruoris signa extant hodiè immanitatem mulierculæ, et Dei ultionem spirantia.

KENULPHUS rex Merciorum obiit anno Domini DCCCXIX. Kenelmus rex, Kenulfi filius. Quendrida et Burginilla germanæ sorores Kenelmi regis.

Quendrida Kenelmo insidias tendit per Askebertum ejus nutricium et procuratorem, ut ipsa regnaret. Kenelmus septennis ducitur ab Askeberto prætextu venandi in sylvam. Est profunda vallis inter duos montes abdita in ipsa sylva, Clenthe dicta. In hac valle Askebertus Kenelmi caput abscidit. Candida vacca hac valle olim frequentabat. Hic locus Vaccæ Vallis appellari consuevit.

Contentio in translatione corporis S. Kenelmi, inter Glocestrenses et Wigornenses de reliquiis S. Kenelmi. Corpus S. Kenelmi defertur Winchelcumbam.

Stabat tunc Quendrida in solario occidentalis partis ecclesie S. Petri, quam viæ spatium dirimit ab atrio monasterii. Legebat autem psalmum cxij. usque ad hunc versum, 'Hoc opus eorum qui detrahunt mihi apud Dominum, et qui loquuntur mala adversus animam meam.' QUONIAM antiqua testimonia de prima nostri Winchelcombensis cœnobii institutione, et de dotatione ecclesiæ nostræ, magna ex parte, tempore Stephani quondam regis Angliæ, ingenti ignis fragore perierunt, quod, Deo annuente, in suo loco apertiùs scribere statuimus: et etiam ex illis scripturarum monumentis, quæ apud nos in hunc diem remanserunt, nonnulla sunt quæ eorum vetustate in illam jam devenerunt obscuritatem ut vix à quoquam legi intelligi possint; nonnulla quoque esse cernimus, quæ hominum negligentia pœnitens exulcerata existunt, atque dilacerata, et, quod magis sentio dolendum, nostros antecessores et eos qui fuerunt ante nos hujus cœnobii fratres, neque vetustiora innovando, neque scribendo recentiora diligentes fuisse. Idecirco, ne ea quæ in nostris vetustioribus, ac antiquis cartis adhuc remansisse cernimus consimili hominum negligentia tandem magis ac magis perire videantur: ita ut suorum fundatorum ac benefactorum nomina (quod absit) sint aliquando oblita, animo concepimus, primam nostram foundationem, ac omnes nostri loci antiquitates per diversas cartas ac libellos hinc inde dispersas, in unum redigere volumen.

Primòque hunc procedendi ordinem servare decrevimus, ut primò de nostræ sacratissimæ ædis fundacione, et laude fundatoris nostri. Secundò de privilegiis, pensionibus, et portionibus eorundem. Tertio, de cartis et privilegiis regum. Quartò, de singulis dominiis et possessionibus nostris à regibus, principibus, aliisque fidelibus Christianis, per tempora et vices præfato monasterio nostro concessis. Postremò, de abbatum hujus loci nominibus, et quæ quisque eorum in commodum, et utilitatem domus nostræ contulerit, prout ea omnia nos reperire contigerit, fideliter, optimo Deo inspirante, exprimere conabimur, ab illo tempore ducendo exordium, quo illustris rex Merciorum Kenulphus dictam ecclesiam nostram primò fundaverit, ubi si fortè alicubi aut minùs aut superabundantè dixisse videar, id obsecro prudens et studiosus lector ex sua charitate, vel diminueret, vel supplere studeat.

REGNANTE Domino nostro in ævum per secula cuncta; anno verò incarnationis ejusdem Salvatoris mundi Domini nostri Jesu Christi dcccxi. indictione autem quarta, imperii verò nostri à Deo dati anno xvj. die verò v. idus Novembris. Tunc ego Kenulphus rex Merciorum hoc opusculum, Deo auxiliante atque favente, in plenitudine provinciæ Wictionum inchoavi, famoso in loco quem solicolæ antiquo nomine, Winchelcomba appellare suescunt. Ecclesiam, quæ modò pulcherrima clarescit scemate jam nunc præparata enituit, ibi Wulfredus quoque præsul Cantuariæ in honore Jesu Christi Domini nostri beatæque Mariæ genetricis Dei, quæ suo conclusit gremio quem cœli capere terraque nequicrant, dedicavit. Ibi quoque meum in Domino corpus pausare decrevi. Complacuit autem mihi Kenulpho, ut ad consecrationem antenominatæ ecclesiæ universos accersissem Merciorum optimates, episcopos, principes, comites, procuratores, meosque propinquos, necnon Cuthredum regem Cantuariorum, atque Siredum regem Orientalium Saxonum, cum omnibus qui testes nostris synodalibus conciliabulis aderunt. Quam verò basilicam ad laudem et ad honorem Domini Jesu Christi, pro amore regni cœlestis, atque expiatione piaculorum meorum, ædificavi, non modò ad roborationem hæreditatis meæ, atque ad solidationem apostolici privilegii, quæ mihi apostolici pontifices cum auctoritate beati Petri apostolorum principis, dirxerunt. Ego etenim Kenulphus, Dei arridente gratia, rex Merciorum, ad gratiarum actionem pro devotione illorum, qui mihi et meæ hæreditati benevola mente cum auctoritate apostolorum affirmatione atque cunctorum synodaliū nostrorum reconciliationem firmiter roboraverunt: jam autem pro confirmatione meæ hæreditatis, quam dominus Leo papa primus affirmabat cum suo privilegio, et postea Paschalis summus pontifex, cum præceptis suæ auctoritatis et universis Merciorum optimatibus, in tribus synodis, unanimo concilio, in perpetuam hæreditatem mihi meisque hæredibus, dona mea omnibus archontis Merciorum necnon et aliarum provinciarum, in auro argenteoque, et in omnibus utensilibus meis, letus erogavi, necnon in equis electissimis, unicuique scilicet secundùm dignitatem sui gradus, et universis qui agros non habebant, libram in argento purissimo tribui, atque in auro mundissimo, unicuique presbitero, marcam tribui unam, et omni servo Dei solidum unum; et ea dona innumeralia sunt sicut nostram regalem dignitatem decebat; quæ nullus enumerare valet, neque numeranda sunt, quæ tunc meæ erogavi genti, ea conditione, ut mihi meisque hæredibus, plena libertate hæreditas mea eo firmior atque stabilior æternaliter perduraret. Ego Kenulphus etiam rex Merciorum vexillum sanctæ crucis in quo passus est Jesus Christus, Dominus noster, ad hoc acquisivi, ut animæ meæ, et omnium bonorum secularium, seu hæredum immobiliter patrocinando, contra tumultum pravorum tutatrix, atque defensatrix perpetuis temporibus permansisset. Et si quis aliquid ab hoc vexillo per vim studeat auferre, majoris sive minoris personæ, sciat se anathematis vinculo innodatum, et à sanctæ crucis tutela coram Deo in die judicii separatum, nisi ante hîc cum satisfactione emendaverit, et ab illo patrocinio prædicto sanctam istam ecclesiam, sub almæ Trinitatis nutu, atque angelorum, et archangelorum, patriarcharum, prophetarum, apostolorum, martirum, confessorum, virginum, et omnium sanctorum protectione corroboratam sciatis permanere. Hoc quoque ego Kenulphus rex, et omnes qui in nostris synodalibus conciliis testes atque conscii hujus rei præsentati fuissent, dijudicavimus, atque unanimo consensu constituimus, ut si homo aliquis culpabilis vitæ suæ aut in aliquo delicto, occultè publicè delinquens, pervenisset ad apicem hæreditatis meæ, et nostram ecclesiam, atque vexillum salutiferæ crucis requireret, firmissimam ibi pacem atque indulgentiam inveniret, et nullus fuisset homo aliqua audacitate fretus, quoquo modo curvave cogitatione, aliquid per vim exinde rapere, nec diminueret, neque agros meæ hæreditatis foras transdonare, vel accommodare, nisi ad tempus, et ad conditionis statutum unius hominis, sed immobiliter permansissent quasi in nostris tribus synodis firmiter decrevimus, æternaliter perdurare. Hii omnes hujus rei veritatis testes extiterunt, et sacratissimo crucis Christi signaculo roborando confirmaverunt. ✠ Ego Kenulphus rex Merciorum hujus definitionis reconciliationem signo sanctæ crucis confirmavi. ✠ Ego Cuthredus rex Cantuariæ consentiens signum salutiferæ crucis impono. ✠ Ego Siredus rex Orientalium-Saxonum signum crucis salutiferæ corroborans impono. ✠ Ego Wulfredus Cantuariæ archiepiscopus consensi et subscripsi. ✠ Ego Aldulphus Lichelfeldensis episcopus consensi et subscripsi. ✠ Ego Denebertus Wigorniensis episcopus consensi et subscripsi. ✠ Ego Wulfhardus Hecana (quæ nunc Herefordiensis dicitur) episcopus consensi et subscripsi. ✠ Ego Werenbrihtus Leogcensis episcopus consensi et subscripsi. ✠ Ego Tilferdus Hagustaldensis episcopus consensi et subscripsi. De Prædiis, Dominiis, et Possessionibus per beatissimum Regem Kenulphum Winchelcumbensi Monasterio collatis.

[Ex Registro Abbathiae de Winchelcumbe penes Will. Morton. Mil. An. 1644.]

Si quispiam cupiat scire quæ et quanta sint illa dominia, possessiones, et prædia quæ monasterio Winchelcumbensi, à principio foundationis suæ, idem beatissimus rex Kenulphus, ex sua munificentia, contulerat; sanè respondemus, nullicubi nos de antiquis nostris munimentis, cartis, aut libris illud unquam reperire potuisse. Quod fortè ideò evenit, quia omnia antiqua nostra munimenta, tempore regis Stephani (sicut ante diximus) aut igne penitus consumpta sunt, aut certè ob nimiam eorum vetustatem ita prædecessorum nostrorum negligentia perierunt, quod eorum vestigia minimè jam appareant. Arbitramur tamen, ex multis conjecturis hæc infra scripta dominia, et dona, et munificentia ejusdem gloriosi fundatoris nostri, nobis in hodiernum diem remansisse, videlicet, dominium sive manerium de Schurburnia cum pertinentiis; dominium sive manerium de Bladingtona cum pertinentiis; dominium sive manerium de Eustona cum pertinentiis; dominium sive manerium de Honiburnia cum pertinentiis; dominium sive manerium de Adelmingtona cum pertinentiis; dominium sive manerium de Alna, cum pertinentiis; dominium sive manerium de Twyningia cum pertinentiis; dominium sive manerium de Charlingtona Abbatis cum pertinentiis; dominium de Newtona cum suis pertinentiis; et dominia sive maneria de Stawntona, et Snowshulla cum eorum pertinentiis et membris. Sicque in præsentiarum nobis Winchelcombensibus, ex dono et liberalitate prædicti fundatoris nostri, undecim integra dominia, cum suis membris, saltem quo ad principalitatem et dominium remansisse videntur; nisi fortè aliqua eorum ex illustrissimis, ac Deo devotissimis principis, regis Eadgari, ex suæ pietatis elemosina, ad nos devenire potuerint, cum scribitur in vita sancti patris Oswaldi, Wigorniensis sedis episcopi, septem monasteria in sua diocesi Wigornensi, industria, et labore ejusdem patris, ad observantiam regularis vitæ fuisse reformati, et regem Deo devotum Edgarum ad ejus preces multa prædia, et possessiones eidem contulisse, ac nostrum Winchelcumbense cœnobium unum fuisse ex septem ita per eum reformatis. Quod enim ad alias possessiones, portiones, et dominia nostra, quæ in præsentiarum possidemus attinet, et quando ad Winchelcombensium manus deveniunt, suis locis hic inde in sequentibus, Deo volente, pluribus aperiemus.

Si verò sint qui scribunt Winchelcombensium et Perscheorensium monasteria, tempore quo Willielmus Normannorum dux, sibi regnum subjugaverat, longè majora, atque plura, quam modò habuisse possessiones, et dominia, sed quia minus cautè sibi de futuris prospicientes, eligerunt eidem Willielmo duci pro viribus resistere, aut eum fortè debellare, ideo dicunt eundem Willielmum regem vehementer in eos commotum, abstulisse plurima ex eorum possessionibus, et ea pro sua voluntate aliis piis locis contulisse. Verùm an hæc aliquid veritatis habeant, necnè, cum ea in nostris antiquitatibus nusquam legerim, non ausim scribere. Memini tamen me, apud monasterium Eveshammense, in eorum antiquissimis historiis olim legisse, Willielmum ducem Normannorum, tunc Anglorum regem, Godricum abbatem Winchelcumbensem violentè tenuisse, ac in castro Gloucestræ jussisse retrudi custodiendum, Winchelcumbenseque cœnobium abbatis Eveshammensium moderationi commendasse, et paulò post cuidam monacho ex Normannorum, ut creditur, genere, Galando nomine, illud idem Winchecumbense monasterium contulisse regendum. Quod reverà fieri unquam haud potuit, nisi (ut communis se habet fama) idem Willielmus rex, in abbatem hujus loci fuisset vehementer exacerbatus. Quod autem aiunt, secundum vulgi opinionem, silvam juxta Twynningiam, Mythwood hodie nuncupatam, olim ad Winchelcombenses pertinuisse, atque per eundem Galandum abbatem fuisse aut impignoratam aut venditam; quia illud in nostrarum antiquitatum codicibus minùs potui alicubi inspicere, ideo pro vero nolim aliquo pacto affirmare. Tutius quidem sentio, in his quæ nobis dubia sunt, totum Dei judicio cum humilitate commendare, quàm, ut incerta pro veris et certis, cum scrupulo conscientiae nostræ, aliqua affirmamus. Quæ autem Perscheorenses, de suis possessionibus amiserunt à sua prima foundatione, (quæ etiam paulò antea meminimus) ipsi de seipsis et loqui et scribere melius atque apertius noverunt. De illo autem quod antea diximus Kenulphum gloriosum regem Winchelcumbense cœnobium construxisse, et in eo collocasse monachos numero trecentos, quemadmodum nos in nostris vetustioribus testimoniis pro historiae veritate indubiè accepimus, si quispiam roget, quomodo potuit tam ingens religiosorum cohors tantillis prædiis, et possessionibus victitari; respondemus, hoc magno esse argumento, pro illa vulgari et communissima opinione amplexanda, quæ dicit quod Willielmus de Normandia dux, plurima oppida et possessiones, à sancto fundatore nostro antea collata, per vim et conquestoris potentiam nobis abrupuisse; vel fortè ita respondendum, tantam tunc monachorum multitudinem, longè minoribus prædiis, quàm sit hac nostra tempestate credibile, habundè satis vivere potuisse. Quoniam in illo magno religiosorum numero, vix fortassis quadraginta vel circiter in sacerdotes aut clericos ordinari cerneret. Reliqua verò multitudo, heremitarum et laicorum more, diversis artificiiis, et aliis manuum laboribus operam dantes, pro hiis quæ in necessariis defuerunt, prout ab antiquo boni fecere monachi, diligenter prospiciebant. Sed hæc de nostro glorioso fundatore jam memorasse sufficiat.

Prohibemus insuper, ne tibi, fili abbas, vel successoribus tuis liceat, sine assensu capituli, vel majoris, vel sanioris partis, ecclesias vel possessiones, aut thesaurum vestri monasterii alienare. In parochialibus autem ecclesiis, quas tenetis, liceat vobis sacerdotes eligere, et episcopo præsentare; quibus, si idonei inventi fuerint, episcopus animarum curam committet, ut de plebis quidem curâ, episcopo autem vobis de temporalibus debeant respondere. Sanè novalium vestrorum, quæ propriis manibus aut sumptibus colitis; sive de nutrimenti vestrorum animalium, nullus à vobis decimas præsumat exigere. Sepulturam quoque ipsius loci, liberam esse decernimus, ut eorum devotioni et extremæ voluntati, qui se illic sepeliri deliberaverint, nisi fortè excommunicati vel interdicti sint, nullus obsistat: salva tamen justitia illarum ecclesiarum, à quibus mortuorum corpora assumuntur. Cum autem generale interdictum terræ fuerit, liceat vobis, clausis januis, exclusis excommunicatis et interdictis, non pulsatis campanis, suppressa voce, divina officia celebrare. Ad hæc præsentis decreto sancimus, et arctius inhiibemus, ne pro benedictione indulgenda, ab abbate vestro aliquid exigatur. Liceat præterea vobis clericos, vel laicos, liberos et absolutos, ad conversionem vestram suscipere, et eos absque ullius contradictione, in vestro monasterio retinere. Prohibemus insuper, ut nulli fratrum vestrorum, post factam in eodem loco professionem, aliqua levitate, sine licentia, abbatis sui fas sit de claustris discedere: discedentem vero, absque communium literarum cautione, nullus audeat retinere, nisi ad arctiorem vitam voluerit transmigrare. Crisma vero, oleum sanctum, consecrationes altarium, sive basilicarum, ordinationes monachorum, sive clericorum vestrorum, qui ad sacros ordines fuerint promovendi, à diocesano suscipiatis episcopo, siquidem catholicus fuerit, et gratiam atque communionem apostolicæ sedis habuerit, et ea gratis et absque ulla pravitate vobis voluerit exhibere: alioquin liceat vobis, quem malueritis adire antistitem, qui vestra fultus auctoritate, quod postulat, indulgeat. Obeunte vero te, nunc ejusdem loci abbate, vel tuorum quolibet successorum, nullus ibi, qualibet subreptionis astutia, seu violentia præponatur; nisi quem fratres communi consensu, vel fratrum pars consilii sanioris, secundum Dei timorem, et beati Benedicti regulam providerint eligendum.

Decernimus ergo, ut nulli omnino hominum liceat præfatum monasterium temerè perturbare, aut ejus possessiones auferre, vel ablatas retinere, minuere, seu quibuslibet vexationibus fatigare, sed illibata omnia et integra conserventur, eorum pro quorum gubernatione et sustentatione concessa sunt, usibus omnimodis profutura; salvâ sedis apostolicæ auctoritate, et diocesani episcopi canonica justitia. Siqua igitur, in futurum ecclesiastica, secularisve persona hanc nostræ constitutionis paginam, sciens, contra eam temere venire temptaverit, secundo tertiove commonita, nisi præsumptionem suam digna satisfactione correxerit; potestatis, honorisque sui dignitate careat, reamque se divino judicio existere, de perpetrata iniquitate cognoscat; et à sacratissimo corpore ac sanguine Dei, et Domini redemptoris nostri Jhesu Christi, aliena fiat, atque in extremo examine districtæ ultioni subjaceat. Cunctis autem eidem loco sua jura servantibus, sit pax Domini nostri Jesu Christi, quatinus et hic fructum bonæ actionis percipiant, et apud districtum judicem præmia æternæ pacis inveniant. Amen.

[MS. Cotton. Cleop. B. 11. fol. 216.]

ECCLESIAM de Ennestan cum suis juribus per dominum Clementem papam quintum appropriari huic monasterio procuravit. Ecclesiam de Wynchecumbe per dominum Godefridum episcopum Wygorn. in usus proprios deputari similiter impetravit. Necnon et decimas majores et minores dominicorum de Halling, Cotesdene, Sponleie, Haseltone, et Zanevorthe similiter per eundem. Voltum presbiterii cum solemnibus tabulata ultra magnum altare, una cum volta karolæ adjacentis, et capellis solempnibus a parte boreali constructis, in quibus idem requiescit non obstante quod monasterium nongentis triginta marcis et amplius recepit creditoribus obligatum suo tempore fieri ordinavit.

Grangiam de Cornden, hameletum de Throp cum pertinentiis, necnon et hameletum de Cotes cum suis juribus perquisivit, redditus ad prædicta pertinentes conventui deputando pro cœnis eorundem et solatiis minutorum, prout alibi plenius est expressum, dominica omnia successoribus abbatibus retinendo. Item in Twenyng terras Colæ et Alotæ cum graveit' et pratis, et pratum quod vocatur le Gore, et redditus ad æstimationem decem marcarum per annum. Item in Gretton terram Petri Malbert et Hugonis Trenchevent cum pratis et aliis pertinentiis ad æstimationem quinque marcarum. Item in Freulynton domos, terras, redditus, et pasturam, ad æstimationem quadraginta solidorum. Item in Honibur terram Henrici de Harleie et Willielmis Croupes ad æstimationem quadraginta solidorum. Item in Schireburn terram Nethercote et pratum quod vocatur Andrewesmedwe, ad æstimationem viginti solidorum. Item in civitate London, subtus Fleotebrug', inter murum villæ et cœmeterium sanctæ Brigidæ juxta domos episcopi Menevensis, domos et ædificia cum gardinis et redditibus quæ vocatur tenementum Albini, quæ continent in latitudine quater viginti pedes, et in longitudine duo decies viginti cum Caya super aquam, et reddunt per annum libere quinquaginta sex sol. salvo abbati et fratribus suis nichilominus, et aliis quibus voluerit aula inferiori, cum camera, stabulis omnibus, et aliis aisiamentis quotiens illuc venire libuerit vel alios destinare. Quæ quidem omnia locari poterunt de anno in annum pro voluntate abbatis cuicunque voluerit; et hæc omnia patent per cartas et processus scriptarum quæ in Thesauraria poterunt inveniri. De sexdecim grangiis et pluribus bercariis super terram et ædificiis intra abbatiam de meremio empto liquere poterit intuiti. Hic etiam panem monachalem adauxit. Officia sacristariæ, pitanciaræ, hostilariæ, infirmariæ, et elemosinariæ præcipue augmentavit, assignando singulis de suo non modica perquisita.

Hic etiam quatuor denarios minuto per ordinem fratri cuilibet assignavit, et fratribus extra refectarium cœnantibus quandocunque per diem septem denar. et obolum assignavit, et alia plurima, ut alibi patet, in fratribus solatium ordinavit, corpus baroniæ nichil onerans per prædicta et multo plura de suis levare valeant perquisitis terris et tenementis cum pertinentiis, pratis, boscis, corpori abbatiæ remanentibus in æternum. Nec est pretereundum quod trecentas acras et amplius de bosco de Ennestan per cartam domini regis fecerit assartare, cujus redditum totum propter affectionem quam habuit erga fratres suos, et de suo labore communi carent in solatium futurorum eorundem coquinæ, assignavit perpetuo duraturum: ita quod coquinarius qui pro tempore fuerit tres missas per ebdom. feria videlicet quarta, sexta, et Sabbato, in honorem beatæ Mariæ pro se, patre, et matre, et omnium fidelium defunctorum animabus dum viveret celebraret; et post ejus decessum dictis quarta feria et sexta pro defunctis, et Sabbato, de sancta Maria per dictum coquinarium cantarentur, ita quod si dictus redditus ad decem marcas se non extendat, de assarti decima suppleatur; et extunc coquinarius conventui plenarie deserviret, et dictus abbas pro futuris temporibus devotius in beneficiis singulorum haberetur, et idem abbas per eorum preces de suis negligentibus relevetur. Nec pro hiis omnibus partibusve eorundem poterit abbas quivis succedens in tempore murmurare seu procurare quomodolibet infirmari, cum hæc et multo plura suo tempore sint per Dei gratiam impetrata quæ omnia per cartas et instrumenta evidenter poterunt apparere. Sunt autem hic et alibi ne per succedentes æmulos degestentur. Ad hæc etiam et si dictus Walterus abbas a tempore suæ creationis usque ad diem hunc Sabbati ebdomadæ Paschæ, sub anno gratiæ millesimo tricentesimo undecimo, a sua creatione vicesimo nono, annis singulis, per papam, decimam bonorum temporalium et spiritualium domus suæ, et per regem Angliæ aliquando medietatem eorundem, et alias quintam partem, frequentius nonam, undecimam, tertiamdecimam temporalium eorum dedisset, serviciaque in Wallia per tres vices, et in Scotia quater, ita quod nondum fuit annus unus per totum tempus antedictum; quin una de oppressionibus antedictis et aliquando omnes sub anno uno infelicitate evenerunt, quæ ad mille et quingentas libras et amplius se extendant, ædificiaque omnia de meremio empto fecerit superius memorata: non tamen pro hiis omnibus quomodolibet nominatis ne dum unum obolum, neque de omnibus quæ conventui pertinebant, usque ad dictum diem subtraxit, statumve tenentium terras quoquomodo mutaverit seu monasterium liberationibus seu sustentationibus oneraverit; et si de quindecim liberationibus domum inveniret multipliciter oneratam. Missæ vero de quibus mentio superius est expressa in viciniore altari loco, videlicet in quo corpus prædicti abbatis requiescit perpetuo celebrentur. Deinde in festo Ascencionis Domini, anno regni regis Edwardi filii regis Edwardi quinto, impetravit idem abbas cartas ab eodem quod possit præter præmissa assartare et in culturam redigere sexaginta acras regias circa Grimesdich, ut patet per cartam. Nec est pretereundum quod warennam subtus Londeleie prius ad firmam ceperat ad terminum sexaginta annorum pro centum marcis, quantumque fuerit tempus venturum patebit per indenturam factam inter dominum de Sudleie et abbatem. Item sub hoc anno est ordinatio ecclesiæ de Haseltone impetrata.

[Ibid. fol. 219 b.]

IN nomine Domini, Amen. Jurisperitorum doctrina prudenter providit quod gesta sub præsentia præcessorum, causa perpetuitatis habendæ primordialiter introducta, per scripturæ seriem veluti per speculum infallibile posteris relinquantur; ne bona deliberatione quadrifaria quæsita variæ per diversos prorsus perirent a casu, et ab hominum memoria novitate quadam cui natura indies est applaudens de facili ducerentur. Nos igitur frater Walterus de Wykewan abbas Wynchecumbiæ, et procurator ad monasterii ejusdem meliorationem, innitentes pro posse sub temporibus nostris, disponente rege Domino nostro Jhesu Christo, ad divini cultus augmentum, bona monasterii in spiritualibus et temporalibus sentientes aliquid jam adaucta, ut de ecclesia beati Petri Wynchecumb jam appropriata, et ad usus proprios monasterii impetrata, decimisque dominorum ac novalium de Halling, Haselton, Zaneworth, Cotesdene, Sponleie, ac de decimis de nutrimentis animalium provenientibus in eisdem quo ad spiritualia, necnon de hamelettis seu mansis de Corndene et Throp, cum suis pertinentiis omnimodis, boscis, pasturis, tenentibus earundem liberis et nativis una, et de firma sexaginta annorum placeæ subtus Londeleie quæ warennam appellatur, sub anno qui sequitur incipiente, et terris et pratis, et redditibus in Grettone et Freulynton et alibi in feodum ad jus et proprietatem dicti monasterii quoad temporalia impetratis, ad ejusdem Domini nostri Jhesu Christi, et sanctæ Mariæ matris ejusdem, sanctique Kennelmi loci prædicti patroni, solatiumque fratrum nostrorum, Jhesu Christo et sanctis prædictis, et aliis omnibus inibi servientium eorumdem fratrum unanimi consentiente consensu, in vigilia Natalis Domini sub anno ejusdem m^o.cc^o. nonagesimo nono; sic ordinamus et statuimus de prædictis, pro futuris temporibus perpetim duraturis, ut ad perpetuam rei memoriam de ecclesia beati Petri Wynchecumb nostris temporibus, ut præmittitur, appropriata ad sustentationem pauperum et partitionem faciendam communem omnibus pauperibus, singulis septimanis, die lunæ confluentibus, ad petendam elemosinam, totalem decimam garbarum de Grettone et Stanleie provenientem. Elemosinarius qui pro tempore fuerit, integraliter percipiet in æternum, liberatione foragii quam de grangia pro equo percipere solebat omnino cessante. Et de illis panibus qui nomine decimæ liberantur eidem de qualibet furna, videlicet triginta duos panes, et de les chirchezetes, et obitibus, et relevio fratrum, qualibet quinta feria, partitionem faciat quatenus ad id sufficere poterunt hæc prædicta. Proviso nichilominus quod servientes mechanici quicumque elemosinarii, vel aliorum officialium, quocumque nomine appellentur, nichil omnino nomine liberationis continue percipiant de prædictis; sed de exitibus placeæ quæ vinea appellatur, servientes elemosinarii sustententur omnino. Hoc excepto quod elemosinarius qui pro tempore fuerit, de dicto relevio et liberatione cervisiæ divina, quam de refectorio recipit. Brevitori cum domi moratur, et Clerico si continue servienti, provideat in esculentis et poculentis, et aliis, per vices de gratia, sicut et alii obedientiarii, quatenus viderit expedire. Et quod saltem de redditu ad elemosinariam pertinente, pro pauperibus, singulis annis ematur pannus per eundem, et in festo sancti Martini distribuatur eisdem. Pellibus ovium et coreis boum de decima lardarii abbatis provenienti- bus, ad id insuper faciend. nichilominus totaliter deputatis, carne etiam earundem pro sua conscientia pauperibus erogata. Curialitate vero illa quæ fratribus fit die sancti Pancratii, et die qua cantatur 'O radix,' de placea vineæ nichilominus exeunte. Et quod cum fratrem quemcunque viam universæ carnis ingredi quando- cunque contingat, liberatio annualis illa quæ obitus appellatur, quæ fit pro eodem, in sustentationem capellani divina celebrantis pro anima illius per annum totaliter convertatur, nisi frater ille adhuc vivens de gratia optinuerit ab abbate, quod de suo obitu aliter ordinetur. Anno Domini millesimo trecentesimo septimo concessit et assignavit idem abbas prædictus elemosinariæ omnes decimas garbarum quas recipere consuevit a parte boreali viæ quæ ducit per mediam hydram usque Landeleye, inter dictam viam et Gretton a superiori parte viæ regiæ quæ ducit del Spitele usque Gretton, decimis dominorum suorum quorumcumque semper sibi salvis, pro salute animæ bonæ memoriæ domini Godefridi Wygorn. episcopi, Willielmi de Chilteham, Nicholai de Wodeford, Walteri de Berton, et aliorum fidelium defunctorum, contravenientes primitus excommunicando.

Pro Sacrista.

SACRISTA qui pro tempore fuerit totam decimam garbarum et fœni de campis de Grete et Sudleie, seu villis aliis qui sunt et jacent a dextra parte et inferiori del Spitele usque le Mersche inclusive, et de hinc usque ad Gretegrove et sic ad finem parochiæ versus Hailes, Piseleie, Morineshull, descendendo usque ad portam de Stanecumbe, et dehinc descendendo per portam de Sudleie usque Bolleford. Necnon ad sustentationem novi operis, specialiter, quatuor solidos de quadam selda intra portam borealem de Glouc. et decimam agnorum totius parochiæ cum herietis contingentibus in eadem, cum de agnis aliquid prius vel etiam ultra medietatem herietorum percipere non soleret, similiter percipiat in æternum. Et cum idem habeat de consuetudine ab antiquo palefridum, cappam, et sellam, ac garcionem illum custodientem pro negotiis expediendis officii provideatur, ex nunc veste stragulata, ut sic cum palefridus prædictus fratribus indigentibus accommodetur, honestius eos sequatur et eisdem deserviat.

Pro Hostilario.

HOSTILIARIUS qui pro tempore fuerit pro suscipiendis parentibus, hospitibus, et amicis, ad confratres monachos venientibus, et sustentandis in fœno et præbenda, pratum quod vocatur le Lutlemedwe cum domibus sitis in eodem, et sex denarios de quadam domo eisdem domibus opposita infra mansum Petri Malbert, quam Willielmus de Couleie tenuit, sibi perpetuo teneat deputatum. Proviso quod præbenda illa quæ talibus per annum debet liberari, per priorem et præcentorem pro qualitate annuali taxetur, sic tamen quod ad minus habeat quod valeat denar. per noctem ad quod carbo pro inferiori hostilioria per hostiliarium provideatur.

Pro Infirmario.

INFIRMARIUS qui pro tempore fuerit, ad necessaria pro infirmis fratribus largius inveniendâ, duos solidos quos nobis reddere consuevit de quadam placea in Colstret sibi retineat in futurum, et redditum de Gloucestria provenientem de domibus quas habuimus titulo legati ex donatione Willielmi de Chilteham in eadem, de quo nobis bene disponere licet cum domus nostra teneretur aliquando ad sustentandum perpetuo unum capellanum pro anima dicti Willielmi celebrantem in ecclesia beatæ Mariæ versus portam australem, cujus cantariam episcopus Wygorn. Godefridus nobis nostro periculo relaxavit. In ejus loco ordinamus quod nomen dicti Willielmi in singulis missalibus scribatur in loco ubi fit memoria defunctorum ut sic celebrantes in suis missis memoriam sui perpetuo comprehenderent in recompensationem cantariæ prædictæ, et quod infirmarius qui pro tempore fuerit qualibet ebdomada per annum, die Mercurii, missam celebret specialiter pro eodem.

Pro Præcentore.

PRÆCENTOR qui pro tempore fuerit tres solidos et sex denarios de terra Hugonis de Trenchevent, quos habuimus de dono Petri Malbert in recompensationem trium solidorum quos de Cornden dum fuit in manu abbatis et conventus de Brueria nomine decimæ percepit, sicut cæteri percipiat in æternum.

Pro Pitantiario et Coquinario.

INSUPER cum melioratio ad quam quilibet prælatus tenetur ut procurator et non dominus dici debeat et augmentum dummodo in laborantium fratrum recreationem aliquando convertatur et solamen, de temporali adaugmate quod nostris diebus de Jhesu Christi bene placito jam advenit; sic ordinamus et constituimus irrefragabiliter duraturum quod pitantiarius qui pro tempore fuerit totum redditum proveniente de feodo de albo marisco de Throp ut de tenentibus de eodem feodo ibidem vel apud Cotes, Pyrie, et Gretton q. habuimus ex donatione Johannis Waupol de Wenlande, seu participum hæreditatis W. de albo marisco prædicti, vel habere poterimus in futurum, seu ex remissione domini Johannis de Sudleie integraliter percipiat et inconcusse, ita quod ad cœnam illorum fratrum qui in solatio quod Misericordia appellatur, sunt per dies quibus carnibus vescuntur, in quibus nihil præter caseum habere solebant, a festo sanctæ Trinitatis usque ad festum sanctæ Crucis meliorandam, et pitantiam de aliquali carne inveniendam pro quatuor diebus cujuslibet septimanæ duos solidos et sex denarios Coquinario liberet in æternum; qui quidem fratres a cœna recedentes in ordinationis memoriam dicant 'Animæ Walteri abbatis, patris et matris ejusdem, et omnium fidelium defunctorum requiescant in pace.'

Pro Coquinario.

FRATRIBUS vero qui per idem tempus et eosdem dies in refectorio reficiuntur, de quatuor ovis frixis per coquinarium similiter provideatur ad cœnam. Pro quibus providendis, de Twening et Schireburne tres peisas casei pro æqualibus portionibus de nostra ordinatione in recompensationem eorundem singulis annis in festo sancti Johannis Baptistæ percipiat in futurum, residuo dicti redditus de feodo de Albo marisco prædicto ad recreationem fratrum die sanctæ Cecilie pro duabus partibus, tertia parte pauperibus erogata, totaliter reservato; nisi dum adhuc vixerimus de consensu fratrum aliter ordinatum fuerit de eodem, et per capitulum concorditer confirmatum. Et interim illud residuum pro duabus partibus die sanctæ Cecilie vel diebus aliquibus infra quindenam sequentem per capitulum provisum in pisce pro conventu per pitantiarium expendatur; tertia parte eodem die pauperibus erogata, herietis, finibus terrarum, scutagiis quæ de dictis tenentibus provenire poterunt, nobis et successoribus nostris abbatibus ad defensionem ecclesiæ eorundem pleniter reservans. Et quod pitantiarius, singulis annis, die sancti Johannis Evangelistæ, unam summam frumenti recipiat de Corndena, et illam reservet usque ad diem sancti Johannis Baptistæ sequentem illo die pauperibus immutabiliter largiendam, et unam summam de granatario abbathiæ, quasi de dominico de Throp pro siminellis die anniversarii regis Kenulfi faciendis.

AD hæc cum nostri monasterii fratres a Septuagesima usque ad Pascha de observatione quadam a vicinis monasteriis discrepante arcius à carnibus se abstineant, nec facta fuerit eis hactenus provisio per quindenam sequentem pro eo quod ovis et lacte solito vescebantur, assignamus et ordinamus duas marcas ad providendum eisdem quoad vixerimus de pisce per pitantiariam per duas tertias ferias ebdomadarum Septuagesimæ et Sexagesimæ de viginti solidis, dimidia marca pro diebus illis pro æqualibus portionibus pauperibus erogata, missa de sancto Thoma Cantuar. archiepiscopo ante distributionem per pitantiariam celebrata. Quæ quidem duæ marcæ cedant loco recreationis fratrum post nostrum decessum imperpetuum, nisi aliter per nos uberius fuerit provisum vel aliter concorditer ordinatum. Et quas quidem duas marcas pitantiarius qui pro tempore fuerit in festo sancti Michaelis de tallagio de Zaneworth per manus præpositi percipiet in æternum pret. xl^s. Et ideo apud Zaneworth quia cum pitantiarius per singula maneria fere particulariter redditus percipere consueverat aliquando, de assensu communi ordinatum fuit tempore bonæ memoriæ Johannis abbatis quod apud Zaneworth octo libr. ad quatuor anni terminos pro eisdem particulis percipiet in æternum. Ita quod nichil ultra de maneriis alibi percipiet in futurum, exceptis duodecim solidis de Wenrich et octo solidis de terra Bollok de Ennestan ad obitum Elyæ de Foxcote per eundem assignatis, quo defuncto cum pro obitu suo quadraginta solid. assignasset eidem, abbas de eodem manerio et dicta pecunia ad quatuor terminos principales ordinabantur pitantiario liberari ut sic de uno et eodem manerio plenius et melius fiat ei solutio suis terminis. Alia etiam ratione ordinamus quod duæ marcæ prædictæ de dicto manerio recipientur, pro eo videlicet quod nostris temporibus, ut præmissum est, per appropriationem decimarum de dominicis et nutrimentis animalium proveniente de dicto manerio, est aliquid per Dei gratiam emendatum. Et licet pro quatuor obbatis cervisiæ quas Elyas de Foxcote, et pro duabus quas Henricus Addy per diem de cellario conventus percipiunt dum vivunt, per abbatem Johannem quinta summa de ordeo et quarta de avena fuerunt assignatæ, assisa cervisiæ pro conventu per septimanam fuerit, hactenus tres summæ de frumento, quatuor de ordeo, et tres de avena, ne illud officium relinquatur per nos aliquid incorrectum; ordinamus pro nobis et successoribus quod illæ duæ summæ de ordeo et avena quæ pro prædictis Elyas et Henrico Addy dum viverent assignabantur, sint de nostra concessione et donatione perpetim duraturæ. Ita quod firma seu assisa septimanæ sit de frumento tres summæ, de ordeo quinque, et de avena quatuor, quæ conjunctim faciunt septem quarteria et quatuor estr' in æternum. Sic tamen quod si conventum de duobus fratribus augmentare, vel pro utilitate domus et fratrum assensu contingat a casu nos seu successores nostros alias ad vitam aliquorum quatuor obbatas de cellario conventus per diem concedere, illas de dicto cellario pro dicto accresco libere, sine contradictione assignare possimus.

Pro Priore.

ORDINAMUS insuper quod de ovibus prioris, si oves habeat, de capella beatæ Mariæ yementur per abbatem triginta oves per annum, pro quibusdam domibus quas prior concessit abbati in vico versus molendinum ejusdem. Et licet nonnulli sint qui præcessorum bene gesta aliquando degestare conentur, dicere tamen non possunt a tergo fratres qui nunc sunt, successores ve imposterum abbates quod maneria seu patrimonium ecclesiæ quod invenimus tempore electionis de nobis factæ per hanc nostram ordinationem de conniventia omnium fratrum factam quo ad corpus abbathiæ seu partem abbatis in aliquo sit diminutum, cum de hiis quæ de Dei providentia, sicut sæpeditum est, temporibus nostris accreverunt. Hæc ordinaverimus prout potuimus ut videtur cum quatuor carucatas terræ, cum boscis, pratis, et pasturis, et aliis ad ea pertinentibus, de accresco nostro corpori abbathiæ et successoribus non longe a monasterio nichilominus reliquerimus in locis prædictis.

Pro Fæno et Foragio Coquinar.

Ex habundanti ad omnem discensionis materiam tollendam, ordinamus quod coquinarius singulis annis duas carectatas fœni et unam de foragio percipiat, de manerio de Twenyng percipiat, per carectarios ejusdem loci sibi cariandas et liberandas in festo beati Petri quod dicatur ad vincula, pro sustentatione illius equi qui conventui deservit. Ita tamen quod coquinarius qui pro tempore fuerit equum ad deserviendum conventui continue retineat cum nunc de foeno et ab antiquo de præbenda sit sufficienter pro eodem provisum. Et quod ordinationes prius factæ de pacamento sexaginta librarum pro coquina conventuali de Schireburne, Ennestan, et thesauraria domus, et aliæ alibi, pro stipendio servientium et discis coquinæ conventus.

Pro Camera.

DE camera etiam conventuali et aliis pro stipendiis servientium, et manutergiis in claustro inveniendis, et ad O. camerarii, et minutis ut filo et aliis inveniendis, et assignatione facta pro stipendio capellani de capella beatæ Mariæ et aliis quibuscumque, una cum aliis remaneant perpetuo duraturæ. Quodque assensu unanimi provideatur quod unus frater monachus colligat omnes redditus villæ Winchcombæ ad quoscunque obedientiariorum pertinentes, adjuncto sibi et id exequente ballivo abbatis, et distractiones faciente, receptis ab eodem fratre rotulis singulorum obedientiariorum continentibus redditus prædictos. Et si contingat aliquod grave fieri oportere, fiat executio per eundem fratrem de scientia et ordinatione obedientiariorum ad quem contigerit pertinere. Et quod nulla littera sigillo conventuali quodcumque contingat aliquando extra claustrum deferatur, priusquam per succentorem aliumve per eum in londbok seu aliis locis, prout negotium requirit, scribatur ex toto.

VOLENTES igitur ut hæc nostra ordinatio et constitutio, et alia quæ ex habundanti recitamus, irrefragabiliter observentur, et a memoria non recedant, præcipimus quod ista ordinatio scribatur in martilogio et in capite missalis infirmariæ, et in capite missalis abbatis, et singulis annis in parliamentis sextarum feriarum in septimana sexagesimæ et ebdomadæ primæ post festum exaltationis sanctæ crucis, per succentorem, vel per alium per se rogatum, ex integro relegentur, qui pro suo labore, singulis annis, duos solidos recipiat in Gretton de terra illa quam habuimus ex donatione Nicholai Cot in eadem. Ita tamen quod si dictus succentor a casu diebus prædictis, vel aliis si non vacent, aliquo anno a recitatione cessaverit, dicti duo solidi illis diebus pauperibus erogentur, facto nichilominus visu in parlamento eadem sexta feria post festum sanctæ crucis prædictum quantum pro die sanctæ Cecilie sequente ad prædicta facienda contigerit remanere. Contravenientes vero nisi necessitas urgeat, aut pietas suadeat, scienter et maliciose, circumstante conventu et dicente “Fiat, Fiat,” excommunicantes solempniter in scriptis; protestando per archiepiscopum Cantuariensem et loci diocesanum procurare velle ordinationes prædictas et sententiam hanc in pleno capitulo dictis anno et die fulminatam quam cito poterimus confirmari.

AD perpetuam rei memoriam juris doctrina necnon circumspectio peritorum prudenter providit ut quæ sub presentia præcessorum primitus ordinantur, causa perpetuitatis habendæ litteris alligentur. Cum igitur a foundatione monasterii Wynchecumbiæ usque ad diem assumptionis beatæ Mariæ sub anno Domini millesimo trecentesimo sexto, panis monachalis ejusdem coctus sexaginta solidos tantum ponderavit sterlingorum, sicque ad sustentationem fratrum videretur exilis qui juxta observantiam regularem de tertia parte illius dum cœnaturi forent extiterant recreandi, nec sic ad elemosinam quicquam remanere valeret, ut die lunæ ebdomadibus singulis pauperibus partitio largior erogetur, quæ de decima panis de furnia et relevio vescentium ubi perpetim fieri ordinatur distributione quintæ feriæ de deci-ma, garbarum de Grettone et Stanleie perpetuo facienda similiter remanente, prout per nos Walterum abbatem alibi est provisum solempnius et plenius perseveret, volumus et concedimus pro nobis et successoribus nostris quod monachalis cujuslibet panis pondus qui coram fratribus hujus monasterii tantum qui in tali loco vel infra septa vel apud Corndene per diem comedunt ubi sunt de parte tertia postmodum cœnaturi ex nunc septuaginta quinque solidos ponderet bene coctus. Quodque panis provisos per patronum a foundatione monasterii, sexaginta solidos, ponderans tam pro fratribus domus vescentibus alibi, quam aliis quibuscumque, prout ab antiquo nichilominus apponendus inviolabiliter perseveret. Et ne panis iste per nos fratrem Walterum de Wykwanc ad talem usum tantummodo, et non ad alium quemcumque, sic adauctus et sub anathemate duraturus, per successores nostros aliquando forsitan aculeo livoris pereat, in futurum, dictum panem exnunc Gauterum W. dupplici consignatum volumus appellari. Cujus quidem panis augmentum de nostro infra limites parochiæ Wynchecumbiæ perquisito plenarie poterit inveniri; aliis per nos pro cœnaturis pariter et minutis conventui vel etiam pauperibus seu obedientiariorum primitus ordinatis, nichilominus remanentibus in æternum tanquam provenientibus ab eodem.

CUMQUE super hæc idem dompnus abbas Walterus sub anno Domini millesimo tricentesimo tertio, duas carucas terras, redditus et servitia liberorum et nativorum, boscos et prata, cum pertinentiis quæ Johannes le Bruyn et Margeria uxor sua in Cotes, seu alibi infra ambitum libertatis de Sudleye habuerunt, prout cartæ testantur, donari monasterio et appropriari de licentia regia procurasset, pariter cum præmissis, domosque quasdam novas, pro solatio fratrum minuendorum apud Corndene levasset, ad perpetuam rei memoriam statuit quæ sequitur: videlicet quod fratres suis terminis ordinate minuti, a festo Paschæ usque ad festum omnium sanctorum die quo minuuntur post nonam simul accedant ad dictum locum, ibique per tres noctes si voluerint commorentur, quarto die in conventum ante missam matutinalem reversuri conjunctim; morantesque ibidem simul dicant horas suas, et missam audiant saltim unam: proviso quod in qualibet minutione una die de sancta Maria, et alia pro animabus patris et matris Walteri abbatis, et illorum qui tempore appropriationis dictorum bonorum in monasterio secum habitum comportarunt, et omnium defunctorum missa celebretur devote. Et ut evagandi materia tollatur, nullus a societate secedat vel ad abbatiam redeat quoquomodo sine scientia senioris societatis minutæ, qui ut curam prior gerat. Et qui contravenerit, a proxima minutione suspendatur omnino. Nec liceat quibuscumque minutis alios de conventu secum ad locum ut hospites invitare, per quod servitium de monasterio minus bene et plene sustentetur nec plusquam duos una die, et hoc nisi de licentia prioris et gratia speciali. Et ne solatium istud forsitan per æmulos in posterum revocetur ex non causis ut causis, ordinatum est quod quilibet minutus qui ad locum accedit, habeat duas obbatas cervisiæ per diem, obbis omnibus de una mensura concorditer prius factis, et de coquinario prout ab antiquo percipere consuevit. Quæ cum dicto abbati viderentur quod sufficere non poterant ad honorem, nec expediret statum rectoriæ seu coquinæ, vel etiam sui cellarii, in aliquo transmutare vel etiam onerare; et ut concordia quæ in domo est omnibus appareret, et foret posteris in exemplum, donavit et concessit dictis minutis omnes redditus quos habuit de dono Johannis le Bruyn et Margeriæ uxoris ejus prædictorum de quibus seisinam recepit, videlicet de quibus cuilibet minuto ut premititur ordinate quodcumque per annum quatuor denarii per pitanciarium liberentur. Refectorarius autem et coquinarius qui pro tempore fuerint, sic se minutorum ministris exhibcant paratos, et sibi liberent quæ debentur, quod non sit necesse cuiquam de minutis, pro suis necessariis perquirendis, a contubernio declinare, et aliorum, seu ad monasterium regredi, vel infra idem tempus quomodolibet a quoquam infra septa monasterii, ut præmittitur, intueri: quodque si de licentia senioris contingat, tunc idem frater ante tempus collationis redeat omnimodo.

De Recreatione die Anniversarii sui.

STATUIT etiam irrefragabiliter conservandum imperpetuum quod de prato de Twenyng quod vocatur Colemedwe, et terra arabili quæ ad firmam traditur Willielmo ate Wode et duobus sociis, leventur triginta solidi pro recreatione fratrum, in recompensationem laboris die anniversarii sui. Et quod pitantiarius recipiat tria quarteria frumenti de grangia de Wynhecumbe eodem die pauperibus eroganda ut infra dictum est. Illis vero duabus marcis pro duabus terciis feriis ebdomadarum septuagesimæ et sexagesimæ prius ordinatis per eundem, ut primitus ordinatum extitit, et mentio superius est expressa pro eisdem fratribus eisdem terciis feriis remanentibus, nichilominus in æternum contradicentes anathematizando singulos per sententiam supradictam.

PRÆSIDENTE eodem domino Waltero Dei gratia abbate in capitulo, tertio idus Januarii, dominica scilicet infra octab. Epiphaniæ, anno Domini millesimo trecentesimo nono, communi consensu totius conventus, provisum fuit et pro futuris temporibus irrefragabiliter statutum per eundem, quod juniores fratres cujuscumque fuerint ordinis vel ætatis qui plene et bene servitium suum reddiderunt, postquam fuerint per priorem certis societatibus assignati in suis terminis cum suis sociis, legitimo impedimento cessante, minuantur. Et quod alii quamdiu fuerint circa redditionem servicii sui occupati, sine delectu personæ, non nisi alternis vicibus minuendi licentia concedatur; nec etiam ludendi causa matutinali tempore cum aliis egrediendi.

De Curialitate Diaconorum die S. Stephani.

MEMORANDUM quod cum diaconi et sacerdotes de gradu diaconorum die sancti Stephani in crastino videlicet natalis Domini chorum regere teneantur et primatum optinere, ratione cujus primatiæ, ac etiam ob honorem sancti Stephani qui unus fuit de septem primis diaconibus, a tempore cujus non extat memoria, consueverint, singulis annis, abbati et conventui singillatim ipso die ad nonam de pane et cervisia, et ad collationem de speciebus et cervisia propriis sumptibus providere; excepto anno Domini millesimo tricentesimo nono, in quo per contradictionem quorundam diaconorum prædicta curialitas quæ prætextu suæ diuturnitatis transivit in jus subtrahabatur: propter quod cum coram domino Waltero Dei gratia abbate, præsidente in capitulo, die sancti Thomæ martiris proximo sequente habebatur sermo de subtractione prædicta, decrevit idem abbas de consensu prioris et conventus quod subtracta per diaconos quo ad diem prædictum redderentur die Circumsisionis Domini quod factum extitit, et quod extunc singulis annis ad hoc faciendum, tam de jure quam de consuetudine antiqua, teneantur, decernens juniores fratres professos, videlicet eos ad quos chori regimen die Sanctorum Innocentium pertinere dinoscitur, ad idem teneri, contradictione alicujus vel aliquorum non obstante.

MEMORANDUM quod anno Domini millesimo tricentesimo nono, in festo sancti Martini in mense Novembri, ad rogatum conventus concessit idem abbas qui supra, quod subcellerarius inveniat extunc infra tres ebdomadas per duos dies pastum sufficientem pro novem picis ad plus utroque die coquinario volenti facere picas ad opus conventus sine subtractione panis debiti ad coquinam præter illos tres dies dominicos; primum videlicet Adventus Domini septuagesimæ et quinquagesimæ tantum pro flavonibus in quibus de antiqua consuetudine ad id faciendum subcellerarius tenebatur.

Pro Clerico colligente Decimas in Autumpno.

ANNO Domini supradicto in crastino sanctæ Fidis Virginis recordatum extitit in capitulo per priorem et seniores, præsidente domino Waltero abbate et recordum approbante ac ratificante, quod clericus de ecclesia institutus per sacristam et deputatus ad colligendum et conservandum decimam suam et alia blada in agris a gula Augusti usque ad festum sancti Michaelis integre percipiet liberationem sibi assignatam; ita quod nec ipse nec aliquis pro eo infra idem tempus teneatur adire pistrinum quamvis omnia genera bladi quovis tempore ante festum sancti Michaelis in horreis fuerint congregata, nec etiam in hiis diebus in quibus majora signa ob reverentiam dei pulsantur ad nonam in quibus similiter abesse licite potest et debet sine subtractione liberationis suæ.

Pro Anniversario Magistri Willielmi de Chiritone.

ANNO Domini millesimo tricentesimo quarto, die sancti Bricii episcopi, pro beneficiis magistri Willielmi de Chiritone nobis collatis, nos Walterus abbas Wynhecumbiæ et ejusdem loci conventus concedimus quod die anniversarii sui fiat servitium pro eodem perpetim in hunc modum; videlicet, quod missa pro eodem cum duobus cantoribus celebretur, quodque reliquum servitium fiat prout decet. Pro quibus quidem ut præmittitur faciendis, recipiat pitantiarius quadraginta solidos ad quatuor anni terminos de duabus virgatis terræ in Honyburne quæ Croupes et Hareleye vocantur, ad procurandum conventum die sui Anniversarii pro labore de viginti sex solidis et octo denariis, et de tresdecim solid. et octo denar. ad pauperes recreandos. Pro quibus quidem quadraginta solidis, dictus Willielmus de quadraginta libris ad monasterium restaurandum de tanto redditu satisfecit. Hanc autem concessionem per sententiam excommunicationis in contravenientes de assensu omnium fratrum observari præcepit dictus abbas die et anno supradictis.

ORDINAVIT insuper idem abbas quod pitantiarius qui pro tempore fuerit percipiat annis singulis de grangia de Wynhecumbe tria quarteria frumenti prætextu emptionis de Cotes. Ita quod feria quarta qualibet trium ebdomadarum primarum quadragesimæ, quamdiu vixerit, fiat de eisdem erogatio pauperibus pro eodem. Si autem ad primum partitionis diem tantum confluere contingat multitudinem quod tertia pars aut duæ partes frumenti prædicti non sufficiunt ad eosdem: tunc dicta tria quarteria, primo die, totaliter eisdem pauperibus erogentur. Post ipsius vero obitum prædicta frumenti liberatio in recreatione pauperum die anniversarii sui integere convertatur. Contravenientes etiam anathematizando singulos per sententiam supradictam.

Sententia lata in Contravenientes.

MEMORANDUM quod cum Conventus Wynhecumbiæ quoad coquinam suam exiliter provideretur, et nos frater Walterus abbas providerimus et assignaverimus quod de decem marcis de assarto de Ennestan sit adaucta suis terminis prout in suo loco plenius ex certa causa continetur. Et insuper quod assignatio magistri Walteri prout in ea continetur pleniter teneatur de decima de Zanevorthe ordinaverimus decem marcas debitis terminis exsolvi debere. Contravenientes vero et impediētes subscripta quoquomodo excommunicamus et anathematizamus in hiis scriptis, hoc intellecto quod solutio cujuslibet termini infra duos menses a tempore quo solutio fieri debebit fideliter exsolvatur, missis omnibus et aliis pro eisdem suis locis et diebus nichilominus exsolutis.

Annunciationis Dominicæ sub anno Domini millesimo tricentesimo tertio decimo ordinavit Walterus abbas, pro salute animæ suæ, quod post decessum Willielmi de Haustede qui possessioni quater viginti marcarum jam incumbit, percipiat conventus pro camera sua de ecclesia de Ennestan de dono suo de mera affectione, specialitate, et gratia, viginti marcas modo qui sequitur exsolvendas, videlicet in festo nativitatis sancti Johannis Baptistæ decem marcas, et in festo Omnium Sanctorum decem marcas. Et diebus quibus percepit conventus dictos denarios vel infra quindecim dies proximo subsequentes, celebret quilibet eorum missas tres de sancta Maria in honorem illius et memoriam dicti abbatis. Si qui vero sacerdotes non fuerint, vel impedimentum habuerint, quo minus poterunt missas celebrare, tunc tria psalteria pro missis prædictis decantent. Quæ omnia vult dictus abbas sub anathemate et sententia inscriptis prius lata inviolabiliter observari.

De Sacristaria pro Decima de Sudle.

ITEM cum sacrista pro accresco cooperturæ novi operis expensas solitas excedere videatur, ordinavit idem Walterus abbas, per consensum fratrum suorum, quod tota decima de Sudleye, sive dominicæ sive villatæ, sacristariæ remaneat imperpetuum, ita videlicet quod melius imposterum sustentetur, et quod qualibet die dominica in æternum sit cereus magnus ardens per totum diem in medio presbiterii ante altare magnum Wynchecumbiæ in honore Dei genetricis Mariæ et memoriam antedicti Walteri abbatis.

Pro Elemosinario.

ITEM statuit idem Walterus abbas, quod elemosinarius qui pro tempore fuerit, habeat totam decimam garbarum et fœni a parte australi de Deoresbrok usque Cockebury, et de Cockebury usque Gretton, quæ non est de dominico nostro, suis usibus applicandam, pro partitione faciendâ, per quemlibet diem Sabbati specialiter pro animabus eorum a quibus aliquid adquisivit injuste, vel per extorsionem vel per quemcumque alium modum illicitum, et pro animabus omnium fidelium defunctorum. Ad hæc omnia infrascripta sub præmissa sententia contineantur perpetim duratura; et pro præmissis fideliter faciendis sententiavit abbas prædictus modo quæ supra; ut sic qui emolumentum habent, sint de onere participes in æternum.

FRATRES mei quæ adquiruntur, monasterio non sine gravi dampno corporis et periculo adquiruntur, et ad commodum vestrum deputantur; ut ergo participes sitis omnium bonorum provenientium de eisdem, oneramus vos quod quilibet vestrum sic in præsentem suscipiat emolumentum cum onere ut pro me respondeat in die iudicii. Et quia nonnulli sunt sine consilio nostro viam universæ carnis ingressi, quatenus fieri poterit absolvi-mus. Et quod illi qui ad cautelam tolerabantur, ex causa factum fuit, unde confitemur. Ad hæc omnes consuetudines quæ suspendebantur tempore donationis medietatis, releventur in virtute obedientiæ, de die in diem, et periculo Prioris et Celerarii ut jantacula, boscus, et cæteræ consuetudines quas ab antiquo novimus approbatas. Ita quod quilibet de terra restituatur ad statum, prout ab antiquo consueverat, bene esse, ut sic vestri et nostri misereatur pro remissione peccatorum singulis faciend. Hæc autem cum instantia et sub periculo injungimus faciend.

Ut autem finis operationis circa curam et custodiam domus felicissime concludatur, idem Walterus abbas, per amicos videlicet dominum Walterum Dei gratia archiepiscopum Cantuariæ, dominum Hugonem le Despenser, et alios, vacationem domus de Wynchecumbe pro quadraginta libris sterlingorum, eo vivente et ac-quietante, fieri procuravit, pro quibus orandum est in æternum sub anno Domini millesimo tricentesimo quattodecimo intrante, et regni regis Edwardi filii regis Edwardi septimo. Et sic omnia tangentia dictam domum sunt prospere consummata, et statu domus in pace nichilominus undique remanente.

Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. salutem. Inspeximus literas patentes domini Ricardi nuper regis Angliæ secundi post Conquestum factas in hæc verba: ‘Richardus Dei gratia rex Angliæ et Franciæ et dominus Hiberniæ omnibus ad quos præsentem literam pervenerint salutem.’ Inspeximus literas patentes de confirmatione domini Edwardi nuper regis Angliæ, avi nostri in hæc verba: ‘Edwardus Dei gratia rex Angliæ et Franciæ et dominus Hiberniæ omnibus ad quod præsentem literam pervenerint salutem.’ Inspeximus quandam cartam quam dominus H. dudum rex Angliæ progenitor noster fecit Deo et sanctæ Mariæ et beato Kenelmo et monasterio de Wynchcombe in hæc verba: ‘H. NUM. XII.

Ex Vitâ Roberti quarti, Winchelcumbensis Cœnobii Abbatis.

[Ibid. fol. 111 b.]

ANNO itaque quinto regis Ricardi primi, optimo patre Radulpho, ab Winchelcumbensibus sublato, religiosus vir, Robertus, nostri loci monachus, legitimis omnium suffragiis, in ejus locum sufficitur, homo certè omni genere virtutum admodum commendandus; qui ea diligentîâ, prudentîâ, sollicitudineque in hiis præsertim, quæ tum ad divinum cultum, ac regularem observantiam, tum ad novam ecclesiæ nostræ, domorumque claustralium extructionem; tum ad augmentum possessionum nostrarum attinebant, semper usus est &c. Inter tamen cætera, quæ nobiliter et munificentissimè, in nostri cœnobii utilitatem atque commodum fieri procuravit, illud occurrit ab omnibus posteris, non ab re accuratissimè animadvertendum, quòd dominia nostra de Yanworthâ, Hasiltonâ, Hallynga, cum advocazione ecclesiarum in eisdem noster abbas Robertus, de manibus domini Williel. advocati Betunæ, expositis, pro eisdem ad vices amplius, quàm quingentis quinquaginta et octo libris primò nobis adquisivit. Exposuit præterea in deforestationem domini nostri de Twynnyngyâ (quod prius commemoratum est, inter ea quæ pertinebant ad forestam de Harwellâ et Ambresleyâ) quinquaginta et septem marcas duodecimque solidos sterlingorum. Hic etiam reverendus pater, haud sine multarum pecuniarum effusione nobis fieri procurabat aquæductum, quo in fistulis plumbeis de fonte apud le Hanwell, usque ad abbatiam nostram, sub terræ meatibus continuo motu, aquâ mundissimâ decurrere valeret, &c.

[Ibid. fol. 112 a.]

IPSIVS etiam Roberti, viri optimi, decreto ordinatum fuit; ut crastino Omnium Sanctorum, quotannis; pane, potu, jurilento unoque ferculo, centum pauperes pascerentur, ob fidelium animas pœnis purgatorii liberandas.

Statuit præterea, ut quoties obtigerit quempiam monachorum nostræ ecclesiæ obire mortem, ejus tum nomen per totam Angliam, Scociam, et Walliam, apud omnia regularia loca quum primum esse denunciandum, quatenus etiam ipsi ejus animæ Deo optimo maximo humili prece commendent, &c.

Ex Vitâ Johannis Yanworthe Abbatis.

[Ibid. fol. 122 b.]

ANNO equidem regis Henrici tertii uno supra tricesimum, sancti patris Henrici abbatis honorabili funere, magnâ celebritate (uti justissimum erat) peracto, delegerunt monachi in ejus locum, communi eorum assensu, religiosum virum, Johannem, cognomine Yanworthe, nostri loci meritissimum celerarium, &c. Inter tamen cætera, quæ ab eo legimus gesta fuisse, illud occurrit maximè commendandum, quod dominium nostrum de Dri-Merstonâ, ampliùs quam mcccc. marcis, ecclesiæ nostræ perpetuo possidendum perquisierit. Alia etiam perquam plura, tum in decimis, possessionibusque spiritualibus, tum in prædiis, nostræ ecclesiæ illius tempestate, ascriptæ fuere, &c.

Ex Vitâ Richardi Ydebury Abbatis.

[Ibid. fol. 226 b.]

ANNO præterea regis Edwardi, filii regis Edwardi, nono; religioso abbate Thomâ ab Winchelcumbensibus sublato; honorandus vir, Ricardus cognomine Ydburei, ecclesiæ nostræ venerabilis sacrista, in ejus locum, juxta patrum canones suffectus est, &c. Idem Ricardus, cum manerium de Rowell, quod est contiguum maneriis suis de Ballyng, Cotysdene, et bosco suo de Winchelcumbâ, immediatè, venale fuisset; idem abbas cepit dictum manerium ad feodi firmam, pro quo solvit, cum suis pertinentiis quingentas et quinquaginta libras. Illis etiam temporibus perquisivit idem abbas assartum infra bundas manerii sui de Ennestone, quod custavit in omnibus, cum pacificâ possessione vicinorum, centum marcas, &c. Idem perquisivit abbas le ferme de Cotes perpetuò.

Ex Vitâ Walteri Winfortune Abbatis.

ANNO equidem regis Edwardi tertii, quarto supra tricesimum, Roberto de Ippewellâ nuper abbate, per propriam abdicationem officio regiminis abbatihæ nostræ absoluto; sortitus est ejus locum, bonorum virorum suffragiis, qui tantum Deum præ oculis habuerunt; per viam (ut aiunt) compromissi, venerandus vir Walterus de Winfortona, sacratissimæ ædis Wigorniensis meritis celerarius, &c.

Idem præterea reverendus pater, secum crebro animadvertens, quomodo abbatia nostra, ab publicis ministris domini regis, contra omnem justiciam esset molestata; maximè verò ab illis ministris qui hundredis de Kystisgate, Holford, et Greston tum præfuerint; eò quòd tum eadem abbatia nostra, tum ferè omnes possessiones nostræ, in eisdem hundredis situata, existerent. Venit proinde eidem venerabili patri Waltero in mentem, quod paci et quieti nostri multum conferret; si præsidio laboreque amicorum suorum, eadem hundreda essent ecclesiæ nostræ subjecta; occupataque per proprios nostri loci ministros: hanc namque ob rem regiam majestatem aggressus est Walterus; apud quem, tum prece, tum pretio, tum amicorum præsidio; demum, post multos conatus, quod petierat impetravit; eâ itaque clementiâ, eâ pietate, eaque benignitate fuerat illustrissimus princeps Ricardus secundus in Winchelcumbenses, ob amorem divi martyris Kenelmi, eorum gloriosissimi patroni, ut visus sit plurimo gaudio affici, sibi dari occasionem, quæ monasterio nostro aliquod beneficium conferret, quo sui memoriam illius loci monachi, majori devotione, de cætero, haberent.

Benedictine Nunnery of Wilton,

FORMERLY

Ellandune,

IN

WILTSHIRE.

WILTON Monastery, says Bishop Tanner, owes its original to Weoxstan, or Wulstan, the famous earl or duke of Wiltshire, who, about the year 773,^a repaired an old church of St. Mary here, which had been almost quite demolished by the Danes, and placed therein a college, or chantry, of secular priests; but, after his death, A. D. 800, his relict Saint Al-

burga, sister to King Egbert, got leave of her brother

^a This year is put in Leland, Collect. vol. i. p. 67, ii. 219, and in the Cotton MS. Faust. B. III. (see Num. I.) as the year of the foundation by King Egbert or his sister. But Wulstan did not die, nor was Egbert king, till A.D. 800, as Chron. Saxon.

The metrical Life of St. Editha, preserved in the Cotton manuscript just quoted, and which contains the early history of Wilton, gives the following account of Weoxstan's, or Wulstan's foundation: placing it as late as A.D. 800.

"In the ayzte hundreth after the incarnacyon hit fell by case
That Ethelmund that of the Marche tho was kyng,
Come into Westsex with gret manasse,
To make the erle of Wylteshyr his vnderlyng.

to make it a nunnery for twelve religious virgins, besides the prioress. King Egbert encouraged this project, and is thereupon said to be the founder of this monastery.^b

King Alfred, having routed the Danes not far from this town, A. D. 871, on the persuasion of his wife Egwine, built a new nunnery on the site of the royal palace here for an abbess and twelve religious, and caused the nuns from St. Mary's to come to this new house, which was dedicated to St. Mary and St. Bartholomew: the joint foundation consisting of twenty-six religious persons,

RADEGUND being the first abbess.^c

King Athelstan, King Edward the elder, King Edwy, and King Edgar, were also great benefactors to this

And Kyng Eghert zaffe bothe londys and rente
To that place and the chirche ywys
For his love that alle thyng sente." fol. 197 b.

^b FOUNDER, in the history of our ancient monasteries, is continually used as another word for patron or benefactor. So, the metrical writer just quoted, continuing the mention of Egbert, says:

"And thus the furst founder of kynges he ys
And Atwolf his sone that holy mon
Zaff londys and rentys therto as y sayd ere;
And Ethelbald his son, when he was gone,
Of kynges was the thryd founder;
And Kyng Ethelbryzt, that worthy knyzt,
The fourthe founder he was therto;
And Etheldrede, that holy wyzt,
Was the fyvethe founder also.
Of kyngys founders fynd I no mo." fol. 198.

^c Alfred's foundation, in the metrical History, is placed as late as the year 890.

"And the kyng was ther tho in that place,
And leyd ther the first ston of that chyrche
After the Incarnacyon ayzte hundreth yer
And foure score yer mo and ten." fol. 200 b.

Again,

"And withinne two yere this abbey was wrouzt
And brouzt to a parfytte hend,
Bot of the dedycacyon spake y ryzt nouzt
For euery zere hit comys in mynde.
Bot RADGUNDE was first sacryd Abbas ther,

And the relygyose wymen that weron at seynt Mary chirche

And other maydones mony mo also Weron veylled tho in that abbay.
Radgund and twelff other maydones mo
Weron y veylled ther in on day
So that in the first bygynnyng
Syxe and twenty wemen ther wer,
And hadden ther hurr leuyng
To serve God there all yfere." fol. 201.

monastery; the latter for the sake of his natural daughter, Saint EDITH,^a a nun, and, as some say, abbess here, who was afterwards canonized, and became the patron saint of the abbey.^b

This Edith, Editha, or Eadgitha, was the natural daughter of King Edgar by the lady

WULFTRUDA, or WILFRID. Of this latter person, Capgrave relates, that, preferring a life of chastity and retirement to the temporal honours intended for her by the king, she was made a nun of Wilton by the hands of Saint Ethelwold; and, on account of her great sanctity and exemplary conduct, became afterwards abbess of that monastery. It appears from a Charter granted by King Edgar, A. D. 974, that Wilfrid was then abbess.^c Here she brought up and educated her daughter Edith, who likewise took the veil, and, at the age of fifteen is said to have been appointed by her father to the government of three monasteries: but nothing could induce her to leave Wilton, at which place she preferred remaining under Wilfrid's maternal care.^d After founding the church of Saint Denis, she died, at the age of twenty-three, A. D. 984, leaving her mother surviving.^e

Editha and her mother Wilfrid were both buried in the church of the monastery.^f

Swein, king of Denmark, in a piratical incursion in 1003, is stated to have destroyed the town of Wilton: nothing, however, is said of the monastery.^g

"Camden," says Mr. Douce, in his account of Wilton, "informs us that in the life of Edward the Confessor it is said, that whilst he was erecting the monastery of St. Peter Westminster, his wife Editha began building an abbey of stone in lieu of the wooden one at Wilton, where she had been educated." To what life of the Confessor Camden refers does not appear. Speed, in his Chronicle, speaking of Editha's separation from her husband Edward, states that he committed her prisoner to the monastery of Wilton; but Mr. Douce conceives that this historian, through some mistake, has substituted Wilton for WHERWELL, to which place, and not to Wilton, all the early writers say she was sent by Edward.^h

The following are the possessions of this monastery as recorded in the Domesday Survey. In Hampshire, in the Isle of Wight, at Watingewell two hides and a half of land, with a salt-pan unassessed. In Wiltshire, at Stanton twenty hides; at Newetone thirteen hides and a half, and half a virgate; at Darneford four hides; at Svalolive four hides and a virgate; at Chilmerc twenty hides; at Werdore one hide; at Chenvel ten hides; at Ovreton ten hides; at Chelche seventy-seven hides; at Newetone nineteen hides and three virgates; at Wilgi ten hides; at Wichford four hides; at Langeford three hides; at Ocheforde four hides; at Dicehantone half a hide; at Bredecumbe six hides; at Babestoch three hides; at Waisel eight hides and a half; at Febefonte ten hides; and two hides at Lavvrechestoches. In Dorsetshire the abbey held six hides at Dedelintone, and three hides and a half at Winburne.

It is impossible to state the precise rental of the monastery in the time of King Edward the Confessor, thirteen only out of twenty-three manorial possessions having their value at that time noticed. It is clear, however, that between the time of the Confessor and the taking of the Survey, a great increase in the value of the abbey lands had taken place. The thirteen manorial possessions just alluded to produced, at the former period, a rental of 80*l.*; the rise at the time of the Survey was to 104*l.*

The total value of the possessions, as to annual rent, at the time of the Survey, amounted to no less than 224*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* Beside which, the rents which the abbey received from the burgh, or town, of Wilton were appreciated at 10*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*

One Toret is said, in the time of King Edward the Confessor, to have given to the monastery two hides of land, with his two daughters, to provide them continually with clothing: which hides were unjustly taken from the monastery by Odo bishop of Baieux.ⁱ

King William the Conqueror, and several of his successors, are said to have added greatly to the opulence of this abbey.

In 1143, King Stephen made the monastery of Wilton his head quarters, and fortified himself there, to repress the incursions of the force assembled at Salisbury. He was attacked, however, and put to flight by the earl of Gloucester, who set fire to the town of Wilton.^k

In the Acta Sanctorum of the Bollandists, Septemb. tom. v. p. 364, are two Lives of St. Editha. One, the compilation of the editors, noticing three other Edithas existing at the same period. The second is the Life of Saint Editha by Gotselinus, "ex MS. Rubra Vallis."

The Editha of Wilton is usually denominated the younger, to distinguish her from her aunt Edith, the sister of King Edgar, and abbess of Pollesworth, in Warwickshire.

The Bollandists say: "Eodem ævo tres aliæ Edithæ, regiæ virgines, in Anglia vixisse dicuntur, præter Editham Ottonis Magni uxorem. Una Ethelwlf regis filia, Alfredi regis soror, quæ S. Modwennæ abbatissæ tradita est; altera Editha Eadwardi senioris filia, Æthelstani soror: tertia, Edmundi regis filia, Eadgari soror; omnes sanctæ, et quidam sanctimoniales in cœnobio Pollesworthensi, quod juxta silvam Ardenniam in Cestrensi diœcesi est." Acta Sanctorum, ut supr. p. 365.

^c Num. VIII. Her name occurs in another Charter, Num. VI., as early as A.D. 968.

^d So the metrical historian already quoted; apparently a writer of the time of Henry the Sixth.

"Wherefore the kyng her fader graunded also therto

Bromton, he adds, speaking of the translation of the body of the murdered St. Edward to Wilton, (in the text, by mistake, called Winton,) states that Wilfrid was at that time abbess of the monastery; her daughter Edith being with her. This was in 982. See Twysd. Script. x. col. 875. Capgrave relates the matter rather differently in his Life of Saint Edward the Martyr.

Hoc ille metu turbatus humi quasi exanimis cecidit; sed tandem respirans lætus erubuit et gavisus quod pœnitentiæ reservatur." Script. x. Twysd. col. 909.

Godwin, in his Life of Peckham archbishop of Canterbury, relates an anecdote which must not be omitted here. He says, "There was a certaine knight of Wiltshire called Sir Osborne Gifford. He had stollen two nuns out of the Nunry of Wilton: which comming to the archbishops eares, he first excommunicated him, and after absolved on these conditions; first that he should never after come within any nunry, or in the company of a nunne; then that three Sundaies together, he should be whipped in the parish church of Wilton, so likewise in the market and church of Shaftsbury three other daies; that he should fast a certaine number of moneths, that he should not weare a shirt in three yeares; and lastly that he should not any more take upon him the habit and title of a knight, but ware apparell of a russet colour, untill hee had spent three yeares in the holy land. All this hee sware should be performed before he might have absolution." ^a This was in 1285.

Browne Willis, in the List of Principals of Religious Houses, prefixed to Bishop Tanner's Notitia Monastica, mentions BRITHGIVA and WLFREDA as abbesses of Wilton subsequent to St. Editha. By the latter, the mother of St. Editha is probably intended, who, as has been already noticed, survived her.

MARGARET occurs abbess in 1217. ^c

King Henry the Third, says Prynne, giving his royal assent to the election of a new abbess at Wilton nunnery, and dying before restitution of the temporalities, King Edward the First, upon the bishop of Sarum's certificate of her confirmation, granted the restitution of all the temporalities, Nov. 29th, 1272, to

JULIANA GIFFARD, a nun of the foundation: ^d upon whose death, in 1295, another election took place. ^e

Fiddes, in his Life of Cardinal Wolsey, speaking of the suppressed monasteries which formed the principal revenues of Christ-church Oxford, says: "There is a letter from the king to the legate, concerning an election of the prioress of Wilton, that may very properly be inserted here, as relating both to the present subject, and expressing a tenderness of conscience in the king, on account of the religious houses suppressed for building the cardinal's college. His majesty, on that occasion, is pleased to take upon him the office of a monitor; and giveth such wholesome advice as might have become a truly religious prince; but to which he afterwards shewed very little regard himself, when he destroyed, besides many other foundations, according to Mr. Camden, six hundred forty-five monasteries; appropriating the revenues of them not to other pious or publick uses; not to the advancement either of religion or learning, except, comparatively speaking, in a few inconsiderable instances; but for the benefit of private persons. The prioress [or rather abbess] of Wilton was, in right of that title, a baroness; there were but three more abbeys in the kingdom of that constitution, Shaftsbury, Berking, and St. Mary's in Winchester. It seems the cardinal had elected a person to that dignity, concerning whom the king had some way previously expressed his dislike; tho' the cardinal was ignorant, or pretended ignorance of his majesty's sentiments, on the occasion.

"In answer to the kings admonitions in the letter referred to, ⁱ of which the softest thing that can be said is, they are expressed with a friendly severity, the cardinal excused himself to his majesty, in so humble, submissive, and insinuating a manner, that his majesty was thereby induced to write him another letter on the occasion with his own hand, which I shall here recite from Lord Herbert.

'As touching the matter of Wilton—seeing it is in no other strain than you write of, and you being also suddenly (with the falling sick of your servants) afraid and troubled, I marvel not that it overslipped you, as it did. But it is no great matter, standing the case as it doth. For it is yet in my hand, as I perceive by your letter. And your default was not so great, seeing the election was but conditional. Wherefore, my lord, seeing the humbleness of your submission, and though the case were much more heinous, I can be content for to remit it; being right glad that according to mine intent, my monitions and warnings have been benignly and lovingly accepted on your behalf, promising you, that the very affection I bear you, caused me thus to do. As touching the help of religious houses to the

ⁱ The following is the part of this letter which refers to the rejected election of the prioress of Wilton to be Abbess:

"The great affection and love I beare you, causeth me (ensuing the doctrine of my Maister, saying 'Quem diligo castigo,') thus plainly as now ensueth to breake to you my mind, ensuring you that neither sinister report, affection to my owne pleasure, interesse parts, nor mediation of any other body beareth place in this case; wherefore, whatsoever I doe say, I pray thinke it spoken of noe displeasure, but of him that would you as much good both of body and soule, as you would your selfe. Methinke it is not the right trayne of a trusty lovinge frend and servant, when the matter is putt by the masters consent into his arbitree and iudgment (specially in a matter wherein his master hath both royalty and interest) to elect and chuse a person which was by him defendid; and yet another thing which much displeaseth me more, that is, to cloake your offence made by ignorance of my pleasure, saying that you expressly know not my determinate mind in that behalfe; alas my lord what can be more evident or plainer than these words, (specially to a wise man) 'His grace careth not who, but referreth it all to you; soe that none of those who either be or have been att any time noted or spotted with incontinence (like as by report the prioresse hath been in her youth) have it;' and also in another place of the letter which sayth, 'and therefore his highnes thinketh her not most meet for that purpose.' Thirdly, in another place of the sayd letter by these words, 'And though his grace speaketh it not soe openly, yet meseemeth his pleasure is, that in noe wise the prioresse have yt, nor yet Dame Ellinor's eldest sister, for many considerations, the which your grace both can, and will best consider.' A my lord it is a double offence both to doe ill, and colour it too; but with men that have witt, it cannot be accepted soe; wherfore good my lord, use noe more that way with me, for there is no man livinge that more hateth it. These things being thus committed, either I must have reserved them in pectore, whereby more displeasure might happen to breed; or ells thus roundly and playnly to declare them to you. Because that I do thinke, that cum amico et familiari sincere semper est agendum. And specially the master to his best beloved servaunt and frend, for in soe doing, the one shalbe the more circumspect in his doeing, the other shall declare and shew the loathnes that is in him to have any occasion to be displeased with him."

Some remarks on the original SEAL belonging to this abbey, communicated to the Society of Antiquaries by Francis Douce, Esq. and published in the eighteenth volume of the Archaeologia, have been already more than once referred to.

The seal in question is one of the most curious, and probably one of the oldest of its kind in this country. Two impressions of it, tolerably perfect, are extant; one, of the time of Edward the Third, appendant to a deed in the Harleian collection in the British Museum, granted to John Colewine by Matilda de la Mare abbess of Wilton; the other, preserved in the Exchequer, appendant to an obligation dated September 18th, 1526, on the part of Cecily Willoughby, then abbess, to Thomas cardinal of York, for a visitation legantine.

The face of the seal represents the three-quarter figure of a nun, probably St. Editha, in the habit of the Benedictine Order; holding in her left hand what seems to be a book, whilst the right is uplifted in the act of giving benediction. The inscription round is, SIGILL. EADGYÐE REGALIS ADELPHÆ. . i. e. Sigillum Eadgithæ regalis adelphæ. ADELPHÆ means nun, or sister. In Du Cange's Glossary of barbarous Greek, the words ἀδελφοί and ἀδελφαί are used for monks and nuns.

In the Paper above alluded to, Mr. Douce submits that this is not only the first Seal ever used by the monastery of Wilton, but that, for reasons which he states, it is the earliest monastic seal that has been hitherto published. He considers it, not only from the letters of the inscription, but from other circumstances, to have been fabricated in Editha's life time.

Whether the seal in question was really fabricated in Editha's life time may admit of doubt. It is singular that to the Harleian Deed already mentioned, the label of another seal, the wax from which is gone, is appendant: and the Instrument itself affords internal evidence that another seal of the monastery beside St. Editha's, was affixed: "Et ut hæc nostra donatio, concessio, et istius scripti nostri confirmatio ratæ et stabiles imperpetuum permaneant, præsens Scriptum SIGILLORUM NOSTRORUM impressione roboravimus." ^a

The circumstance, however, of the seal with the inscription of St. Editha being used officially by the abbess De la Mare in the time of King Edward the Third, again by abbess Willoughby in the reign of King Henry the Eighth, and finally affixed to the surrender of the monastery by abbess Bodenham, in the body of which Instrument it is called the Sigillum Commune of the abbess and convent: there can be no doubt, whatever the other seal mentioned in the Harleian Deed might be, but that this was the official seal of the convent at large.

No portion of the ORIGINAL BUILDINGS of the Monastery is now remaining: the greater part were taken down soon after the Dissolution. William of Worcester, however, has preserved the following dimensions of the church: "Ecclesia Monasterii de Wylton per tria miliaria de Salysbery fundata a beato Edgardo rege Angliæ, et fecit sanctam Edwinam abbatissam ibidem. Et continet in longitudine circa 90 steppys meos. Item, continet in latitudine navis ecclesiæ cum duabus elys circa 46 steppys meos." ^b Wilton House arose upon the scite of the abbey.

Bishop Tanner, speaking of Wilton in the Notitia Monastica, says, "Some have imagined that there was a COLLEGIATE CHURCH here; but quære whether the prebendaries here were not some few secular clergymen provided for out of the lands and churches belonging to the abbey." ^c For upon the Patent Rolls occur often, especially during the vacancy of the abbey, grants or presentations from the Crown of the prebends of Chalk, Stanton, and South Newton in the conventual church of Wilton, to secular clerks. The abbey had possessions at every one of those places; and the prebend of South Newton was granted, as part of the possessions of the abbey, to Sir William Herbert." ^d omnium monasteriorum in Anglia, à tempore sancti Birini confessoris et episcopi Dorcestriensis, usque ad tempus Roberti Grosthe de episcopi Lincolniae; in secundâ parte libri, ubi tractat de monasteriorum regni Westsaxoniae fundatione, capitulo sic incipiente, regnum Westsaxoniae quod incepit anno Domini dñix. sub duce Cerdyke, diutius omnibus septem regnis duravit, cujus caput fuit Ellendinia, id est Wyltonia, quæ per regem Alrudum dabatur sanctimonialibus.

Secundus fundator fuit Adewulfus, filius Egberti regis totius Angliæ. Tertius fundator fuit Ethelbaldus rex, filius Adewulfi. Quartus fundator fuit Ethelbryztus, frater Athelbaldi: sed primus fundator reverendæ abbatiæ, seu monasterii, S. Edithæ, adhuc prosperè in Wyltonia; bono statu existentis, erat ille gloriosus rex Alrudus, junior filius Adewulfi, et frater junior prædictorum trium regum, quem Leo papa unxit in regem, dum apud eum Romæ adhuc juvenis residebat: qui rex Alrudus causâ Elfredæ infantis, et filiæ principis Edwardi senioris, Mucilda reginâ Elfreda ducissâ Marchiæ et Ethelswythæ infantulæ genitrice suadentibus, Edwardo patre ejusdem Elfredæ infantulæ annuente, suum manerium in Wyltonia, cum omnibus suis libertatibus, dedit in perpetuam elemosinam sanctimonialibus, per illum in prædicto monasterio mox facto institutus, impetuum duraturum.

PRIMUS fundator abbatiæ de Wileton erat Alfredus, junior filius Æthelwolphi regis, qui concessit manerium suum in Wiltonia dicto monasterio. Secundus fundator fuit Edwardus senior, filius Alfredi regis. Tertius, Æthelstanus filius Edwardi senioris. Quartus, Edwardus frater Athelstani. Quintus, Edredus frater suus. Sextus, Gulielmus Conquestor.

[Lelandi Collectan. vol. ii. p. 195.]

Ex chronico quodam Vilodunensi, Anglicis rithmis scripto, incerto tamen autore, hæc quæ sequuntur, me interprete, decerpta sunt.

ECBERTUS rex West-Saxonum frequenter egit Severiæ. Sancta Alburga, soror Ecberti regis, nata Viloduni.

Atwulphus rex, Ecberti filius, secundus fundator Vilodunensis monasterii. Atwulphus rex, salutata Roma, per Galliam domum rediens, filiam Caroli in uxorem accepit.

Ethelbright rex sepultus apud Winburne, et hic fuit tertius fundator Vilodunensis monasterii.

Wulstanus comes Vilodunensis contra Ethelmundum regem Merciorum pugnans, vicit; gravissimis tamen vulneribus acceptis, ex quibus ante annum periit. Hic quandam antiquam ecclesiam S. Mariæ Viloduni reparavit, antea per Danos tantum non destructam: instituitque in ea collegium sacerdotum qui preces, et pro Alquimundo patre suo, crudeliter ab Ethelmundo Merciorum rege interfecto, et pro se assidue funderent. Mortuo postea Wulstano comite, uxor ejus Alburga, soror Ecberti regis Visi-Saxonum, obtinuit à fratre, ut monasterium ibidem fieret sacrarum virginum, cujus primus fundator idem Ecbertus dictus. Propè hoc monasterium erant Wulstani comitis ædes, regiaque civitas in qua monasterium conditum fuit, Kinggesbyri dicebatur, quod nomen vel hodiè servat. Fundatum verò fuit monasterium anno Domini dccc. erantque duodecim sacrae virgines præter præsidem.

Elfred, puellula trium annorum temerè à nutrice in balneo relicta, quæ fugerat propter metum et strepitum pugnantium, periit, et sepulta fuit in monasterio S. Mariæ Viloduni.

Alfredus rex, devictis Danis, motu uxoris suæ Egwinæ, condidit novum monasterium Viloduni, eo loco ubi ipse primus habitaverat, et duodecim sacras virgines curæ Radegundis abbatissæ tradidit, transtulitque tredecim virgines monasterii sanctæ Mariæ in suum. Ita erant numero viginti et sex. Absolvit ecclesiam novam cum officinis in duobus annis, quam dedicavit D. Mariæ et sancto Bartolomeo.

In nomine Domini nostri Jesu Christi salvatoris cosmi, magnificentia concessionis divinæ sensibili nos instruens mentis devotione, ad bona foeliciter agenda, quatinus subrigamur instigat cotidie, cupiens clementi pietate extemporaliter nobis indultis redditibus versâ vice, quo ipsius sponsam ecclesiam, viz. orthodoxam certemus politæ decorositatis munere exornare, in cujus amplificatione sanctus Deus gaurizans lætatur per maximè; etenim dum pro modulo uniuscujusque possibilitatis, manente incolumitate corporis. In hujus operatione studii fallit, operam dare curaque omnimodis, præcipuè plaudente devotione interioris hominis, qui secundùm Deum diatim renovatur in agnitione deificæ veritatis agendum est nobis, quos Domini Jhesu salutaris dignatio solio sublimavit imperii regalis, atque dignè concessit quo manentia adipiscerentur præmia ex collatione terrenæ potestatis. Perpendens siquidem ego Eadgar sceptrifero dispositionis jure totius Britannici orbis basileus, juxta Salomonici verbi edictum, 'Generationem instantem ad ima delabi, tandemque humanitus reparari:' agnoscensque circa nos quanta divinitus prævisio maneat benigni Dei, ejus multiplici inspirante clementiâ sum provocatus, quatinus præsentē catervâ cunctorum regni nostri primatum sanctificatione principali sacratuſ, et sacri unguinis infusione fierem delibutus, ut ex materiali infusionis munere munimen et subsidium proveniret benedictionis calice, quod etiam actitari in famosæ celebritatis urbe, placuit serenitati vestræ cum ab aquis calentibus Bathan dudum est impositum vocabulum, ipso viz. 'Revolutionis die, quo cœlis Spiritus Sanctus adveniens cenaculo, residentibus apostolis diversa dona carismatum dignatus est ministrare.'

Undè nunc et deinceps comperiat omnis sexus, omnis ætas, omnisque conditio principalitatem nostram gratanti dapsilitate, qualiter cœnobium, quod ab atavo nostro Eadwardo, viz. in celebri loco, qui à solicolis noto Wiltun vocatur nomine, situm est; eliminans indè earum spurcitiis quæ Deum irritare, potiùs quam digno videbantur cultu venerari, cuidam venerabili abbatissæ Wulfthryth nomine, libens, cum omni mentis alacritate commendare, atque perpetuo libertatis privilegio, cum Cheolca cæterisque eodem ritè pertinentibus prædiis lætabundus beare decrevi, tribus exceptis, expeditione, pontis arcisvè constructione. Sic inconcussa hujus privilegii maneat libertas, quatinus dum sors irreparabilis extremæ horæ mundo exemerit abbatissam, provisoremque ipsarum vitæ illis quam potioſem in sanctitatis honestate reppererint, ex ipsis matrem sibi liceat substituere; nec sit extra consensus illarum scientiam, qui huic nostræ immo deificæ constitutioni aliquando conetur rebellis contrariusque existere. At si quem prophannum Deoque odibilem ita melancoliæ virus obsederit penitùs, ut hujus liberalitatis nostræ munimento hinc indè malit fieri adversarius, ab omni sanctitatis cœtu disparatus flegetontis, pœnas luens sit jugiter miserrimus, intra semet ni reversus fuerit quam citius, emendando prava cordis molimina devotus: filius autem matris ecclesiæ vires augmentando præbens in hac constitutione illud capessat benedictum, quod præcurrens derivatur de montibus collium supernorum lætus vitam degens, sic mistam quatinus sumat supernam.

IN

WILTSHIRE.

MESBURY, AMBROSE-BURY, AMBROSIA,^a or AMBRII CŒNOBIUM.^b Here, says Bishop Tanner, is said to have been an ancient British monastery for three hundred monks, founded, as some say, by Ambrius, an abbat,^c as others, by the famous Prince Ambrosius (who was therein buried^d); and destroyed by that cruel pagan Gurmundus,^e who over-ran all this country in the sixth century.^f

It has been thought, Bishop Tanner adds, that here was one of the two monasteries which were given to the learned Asserius by King Alfred.^g But it is more certain that, about the year 980, Alfrida, or Ethelfrida, the queen dowager of King Edgar, erected here a monastery for nuns, and commended it to the patronage of St. Mary, and St. Melorius, a Cornish saint whose relics were preserved here.^h

Alfrida, Ethelfrida, or Elfrida, is said to have erected both this and Wherwell monastery, in atonement for the murder of her son-in-law, King Edward.ⁱ

The house was of the Benedictine, and not, as is stated by Polydore Vergil, of the Cluniac order:^k and continued an independent Monastery till the time of Henry the Second.

The following appear to have been its possessions at the time of the formation of the Domesday Survey. In Berkshire, at Cheneteberie eleven hides of land, three hides and a half at Ceveslane, and five at Farellei. In Wiltshire, twelve hides at Bolintone, at Boscumbe four hides, four at Allentone, two hides and a half at Chelestanestone, six hides in Wintreburne, and four hides and a half in another Wintreburne. Making a total of fifty-two hides and a half; the rental at that time producing 55*l.* 15*s.*

From the entries in the Survey it appears that the number of hides in the Berkshire manors, in the time of King Edward the Confessor, was greater than at the taking of the inquest: but no reason whatever is assigned for the diminution. Two hides of land in Wintresleu, it appears, were held by the abbey "de victu monialium" both in the time of King Edward and in the early part of William's reign: but previously to the taking of the survey they had been unjustly seized by the earl of Moretaine.^l

A.D. 1177, the evil lives of the abbess and nuns drew upon them the royal displeasure. The abbess was more particularly charged with immoral conduct: in so much, that it was thought proper to dissolve the community. The nuns, about thirty in number, were dispersed in other monasteries; the abbess was allowed to go where she chose, with a pension of ten marks; and the house was made a cell to the abbey of Font-Ebrald, or Font-Everault, in Anjou: whence a prioress and twenty-four nuns were brought and established at Amesbury.^m

King John, as will be seen by the Instruments in the Appendix,ⁿ conferred upon the new foundation many important privileges, and confirmed all its former grants and possessions.

Eleanor, commonly called the damsel of Bretagne, sole daughter of Geoffrey earl of Bretagne, and sister of Earl Arthur, who was imprisoned in Bristol castle, first by King John and afterwards by King Henry the Third, on account of her title to the crown, was buried, according to her own request, at Amesbury, in 1241, the 25th

^e Autor Eulogii MS. citatus a Camd. et Usserio. Bishop Tanner says it was that Gurmund whom the British writers make the son of an African prince, and the Saxon authors call Ceaulin. Not Gurmund, or Guthran, the Dane, who was converted to Christianity in the time of King Alfred, about A.D. 890.

^m A.D. MCLXXVII. "Eodem etiam tempore quo dictus decanus de Waltham decanatum suum ibidem primo resignaverat, rex ad abbatiam monialium de Ambresbury Exoniensem et Wigornensem episcopos destinavit; qui per mandatum Alexandri papæ abbatissam ibidem, quæ postquam religionis habitum susceperat tres infantes peperisse comprobata fuerat, propter ipsius infamiam deposuerunt, et ipsam et sanctimoniales omnes ibidem quæ errorem et vitæ suæ turpitudinem relinquere et ordinem fontis Ebrardi tenere nolebant, a domo illa disperserunt. Quibus sic dispersis, rex in Andegaviam ad fontem Ebrardi pro uno conventu sanctarum monialium misit, quibus Abbathiam illam desiderabat feliciter commendare. Et ne prædicta abbatissa fame et inopia deperiret degradata, rex ei singulis annis x. marcas argenti spondens eam abire permisit libere quo volebat. Et postea eodem anno kal. Julii per diem dominicam Ricardus Cantuariensis archiepiscopus et quinque alii episcopi domino regi per ipsius mandatum apud dictam abbathiam de Ambresbury obviantes, in eadem xxiiij. sanctimoniales ordinis fontis Ebrardi, pro quibus dominus rex in Pictaviam miserat, induxerunt aliis propter vitæ turpitudinem expulsis, ut dictum est." of Henry the Third.^a Though Sandford seems mistaken in his assertion that she gave to the monastery the manor of Melkesham, with its appurtenances.^b

From this time the nunnery of Amesbury appears to have been one of the select retreats for females in the higher ranks of life.

Mary the sixth daughter of King Edward I. took the religious habit in the monastery of Amesbury in 1285, together with thirteen young ladies of noble families.^c Walsingham, in the Ypodigma Neustriæ, says, the king and queen were averse to this step, and that it was taken "ad instantiam matris regis."^d Several Instruments providing for the maintenance of the princess will be found in the Appendix.^e

Two years after this, A.D. 1287, Eleanor, the queen of Henry the Third and mother of King Edward I. herself took the veil at Amesbury:^f where she died and was buried in 1292.^g She had previously given to the monastery the manor of Chadeworth in Berkshire, to support the state of Eleanor, daughter of the duke of Bretagne, who had also become a nun there.^h

Amesbury finally became one of the richest Nunneries in England. How long it continued subject to the monastery of Fontevault we are not told. Bishop

Tanner says it was at length made denizen, and became again an abbey.ⁱ

The following names of the PRIORESSES, or AB-BESSES, subsequent to the time of King Henry the Second, have been preserved:

ISABELLA of LANCASTER, fourth daughter of Henry earl of Lancaster, and grand-daughter to Edmond Crouchback, son of Henry the Third, occurs prioress in 1202.^k

SIBILLA DE MONTACUTE died in 1420.^m

JOANE DARRELL was abbess at the time of the Dissolution. She surrendered her house to the king Dec. 4th, 32 Henry the Eighth, A.D. 1540. The revenues of the monastery at this time, according to Dugdale, amounting to 495*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.*: according to Speed, to 558*l.* 10*s.*ⁿ. The pensions granted on this occasion to the abbess and nuns will be found in the Appendix.^o The scite of the monastery was granted, in the month of April 1541, to Edward earl of Hertford.^p

No REGISTER of this monastery is now known to be extant.^q

Madox, in his chapter upon Tallage, and the revenue arising from it, in the History of the Exchequer, edit. 4to. Lond. 1769, vol. i. p. 753, says, "The prioress of Ambresbury alledged in her petition to the king, that the manor of Melkesham was ancient demesne of the crown of England, that she held it by charters of the king's progenitors in frankalmoigne, that whensoever the men of the said manor were tallaged they ought to be tallaged by the sheriff of Wiltshire, and their tallages be levied for the use of the prioress by her own bailiffs, that ever since the making of the said charters, the tallages of the said men were wont to be assessed and levied in that manner to the use of the prioress of that house, and that the assessors of the king's tallage in Wiltshire had lately assessed tallage upon the said men, intending to levy it to the king's use. Hereupon the king commands the barons to search the rolls and memoranda of his exchequer, and if they found the case to be as the prioress had set forth, to cause the said assessours to forbear assessing the said tallage to the king's use, and to let the same be assessed by the said sheriff and be levied to the use of the prioress by her own bailiffs." Benedictine Monastery of Middleton,

OR

Milton Abbats,

IN

DORSETSHIRE.^a

IDDLETON, or Milton, Abbey, dedicated to St. Mary, St. Michael, St. Sampson, and St. Brannwalader, was founded according to Bishop Tanner, about the year 933, by King Athelstan, to expiate the murder of his brother Edwin.^b The Register of this abbey, preserved in the King's Remembrancer's Office in the Exchequer, gives us a tedious and romantic account of the founder and foundation. King Athelstan, it is stated, at the beginning of his reign, upon false suggestions that his brother Edwin was concerting measures to destroy him, caused him to be sent to sea in an open boat, with only one attendant. The prince, overcome with despair at his danger, leaped overboard; but his attendant, after great difficulties, swam to shore at Witsand with his corpse. The king, repenting of his crime, confined himself by way of penance, at Lamport in the county of Somerset, seven years, founding the abbey of Michelney on this account, as well as Milton.^c

^a This abbey is reckoned by Speed among his Wiltshire monasteries, and it is also falsely placed in that county by Cressey; Church Hist. lib. xxxi. c. 10. So likewise in Anglia Sacra, vol. i. p. 159. "vii. Kal. Apr. 1287, monasterium de Middletona in Wiltechire ignis consumpsit." Tann. Notit. Mon. Dorset. xviii.

^b Bishop Tanner says, "Though all historians agree as to the royal founder of this abbey, yet the differences or mistakes in writing or printing the time of the foundation may teach the lovers of antiquities to be cautious in trusting at first sight to the dates, either of Saxon charters or histories, without further examination, and comparing the same, and the names of the parties and witnesses, with the most authentic chronicles. For instance, K. Ethelstan is well known to have begun his reign in A.D. 924, and to have died A.D. 940, yet the pretended charter of the foundation of the abbey, in the Monasticon, is said to have been executed A.D. 843, and the history, there also printed out of the leiger book of this abbey, makes that king to begin his reign A.D. 824, and the Rochester Annals (Leland. Collect. vol. iii. p. 71,) put this foundation in the year 839, others, (Leland. Collect. vol. i. p. 67,) place it A.D. 896. I have made it in the year 933, being the tenth year of K. Ethelstan, as expressly in Mon. Angl. (former edition) tom. i. p. 195, col. 1." Notit. Mon. ut supr.

The Harleian MS. 261, fol. 107 b, says, "Anno Domini dcccc^{mo}. xxxix. Rex Ethelstanus pro anima fratris sui Eadwyni quem pravo usus consilio in mari fecerat submergi duo cœnobîa, scilicet Middeltunensis et Mychelneyensis, construi præcepit et ea prædiis multis et possessionibus ampliavit."

^c See Num. II. William of Malmesbury uses the very words of the manuscript here quoted. De Gestis Regum Anglorum, lib. ij.

Hutchins, in the History of Dorsetshire, is wrong in stating that Florence of Worcester places the foundation of Middleton abbey in the year 940.^d The writer of the present article has sought in vain for the passage. Matthew of Westminster notices the foundation both of Middleton and Michelney abbeys under the year 939.^e

According to Athelstan's Charter, in the Saxon tongue, printed in the Appendix of Instruments, the following was the original endowment of the monastery: twenty-six hides of land at Muleburne, five at Wonlonde, three at Frome-mouth, three hides and a meadow at Clyve, three and a half at Liscombe, one at Burdalveston, one at Little Pudele, five hides at Cattestoke, six at Comptone, two at Widecomb, five at Osmyntone, six at Holeworth; a weir on the Avon at Twynham; the water within the shore of Waymouthe and half stream; twelve acres, for the support of the weir and the person who had the care of it, in Sussex; thirty hides at Sidemyntone, two at Chelmyntone, six at Hyfelde, and ten hides at Ercecombe to tymbeplonde.

According to the Saxon Chronicle, in 964, King Edgar expelled the secular clergy, who were first placed here, and introduced monks in their room.^f

In the number of hides the statement of the abbey property in the Domesday Survey is somewhat different edit. 1596, fol. 29. See also Joh. Bromton, col. 838. The Saxon Chronicle says, "An. dcccc. xxxiii. He ða aþronc Æðþine æþeling on fære." Edit. Gibs. p. 111. Simeon of Durham, Script. x. Twysd. col. 134. "Anno dcccc. xxxij. Rex Ethelstanus jussit Eadwinum fratrem suum submergi in mare." It is singular that Athelstan's Charter of foundation, Num. IV. makes not the least mention of Prince Edwin's death.

^d Hist. of Dors. Gough's edition, vol. iv. p. 214.

^e Matt. West. edit. Francof. 1602, p. 187. William of Malmesbury, speaking again of the foundation of Middleton abbey, De Gestis Pontif. Angl. fol. 143, says it was eminent for the great number of relicks of saints which were repositied in it. "Middeltunensem ecclesiam fecit rex Ethelstanus pro anima fratris sui Edwini, quem pravo corruptus consilio Anglia eiecit. Cujus qui fuerit finis aliâs non silvi. Ibi multas sanctorum reliquias ex Britannia transmarina emptas reposuit, inter quos eminent præcipuè beatissimi SAMPSONIS ossa, Dolensis quondam archiepiscopi sanctissimi, et planè Deo digni viri: cujus virtutes aliquas hîc referrem, nisi quia notæ sunt, et indigenarum sanctorum miraculis scribendis occupatus manus habeo."

Sampson, it will be remembered, was one of the saints to whom the abbey church was dedicated. This monastery also possessed an arm of St. Bradwalader, another of its tutelar saints. Compare the Account of the Relicks bestowed upon the Church by King Athelstan, Num. V.

^f "An. dcccc. lxiv. Hoc anno expulit Eadgarus rex presbyteros in Wentana de antiquo monasterio, etiamque de Novo Monasterio, et de Ceortesige, et de Middeltune, et in iis monachos collocavit; constituit etiam Æthelgarum abbatem in Novi Monasterii abbatem, et Ordbrýhtum [in abbatem] de Ceortesige, et Cyneweardum de Middeltune." Chron. Sax. edit. Gibs. pp. 120, 121.

from that in Athelstan's Charter. In Hampshire, in Egheiete hundred, the abbey is stated to have held twelve acres of land which had never paid geld. In Dorsetshire, twenty-nine hides at Sidelinge, the Sidemyntone of Ethelstan's Charter; in Middeltune, the "caput abbatiae," twenty-four hides; in Contone, five hides; in Stocche, ten hides; three hides in Pidele; two hides in Clive; ten hides in Osmontone; six hides in Widecome; three hides in Liscome; five hides in Winlande; two hides and a virgate in Wintreburne; five hides in Holverde; three in Ora; ten hides at Ertacomestocche, appropriated to the food and clothing of the monks; two hides at Pidre; and one hide and a half at Cerne. The total annual rents amounting to 67*l.* 5*s.* beside a rent from one manor, Holverde, of a sextary of honey.^a

King Henry the First's Charter of confirmation granted to the abbey, containing a Latin version of King Athelstan's Charter, will be found in the Appendix.^b

The destruction of the monastery of Middleton by fire has been already incidentally mentioned in a Note, but with a false date:^c the conflagration having really occurred in 1309. Hutchins, in the History of Dorsetshire, informs us, that in the fifth of Edward the Second the charters and muniments relating to the possessions of the convent having been destroyed by lightning,^d the monks obtained a Charter of confirmation, wherein all the lands noticed in Athelstan's Charter are recited, and also the following: two parts of the tithes of the demesnes of John de Milborn at Mulebarne, a messuage and two carucates of land at Holway, a messuage and one carucate of land at Bestedon, a messuage and two carucates of land at Knolle, a messuage and one carucate at Cleyhangre, a messuage and carucate at Ringsted, a messuage and eleven acres at Chalvedon Boys, a messuage and one carucate at Pulham, and lands at Hanleigh, Bakebere, Ekerdone, Winterbourne Stickland, Wolvern Wotton, Winterbourne Musterton, Dorchester, Melcombe, and Winterbourne Kingston.^e By this record, Hutchins adds, it appears that they had free warren in all their demesne lands in their manors by charter, 7 Edw. I.

I have seen, he continues, a long roll of parchment, intitled "MIDDLETON. Instaurum vivum, &c. una cum arrer. ballivorum, &c. terminat. ad festum sancti Michaelis anno regni 26 Hen. VI." Part of it, at the latter end, is lost; but a total account of their stock on their demesnes and farms is preserved, by which we may guess at their wealth: Horses and Colts, 79. Bulls and Oxen, 217. Cows, 77. Boviculi (steers), 27. Annates (yearlings), 17. Calves, 35. Multones (sheep), 5502. Hurtardi (rigsies or rams), 129. Matrices (ewes), 4015.

^d The following is the account of this accident, as given in Trivett's Annals, tom. ii. p. 7:

"A.D. 1309. 4 non. Sept. die Martis viz. in crast. S. Egidii abbat, sero paulo ante horam ignitegii visum est horribile fulgur et inauditum, quod quidem fulgur duravit mirabiliter per totam noctem sequentem cum magnis crebrisque tonitruis ictibus circa mediam noctem insequentibus, ita quod sepes plures et arbores in plerisque locis æstu fulguris viriditatem pene amiserunt et decorem. Eadem hora ecclesia de Middleton, in com. Dorsetiæ, Sarum diocesis cum clochero et campanis, ornamenta quoque ejusdem ecclesiæ, libri et munimenta monachorum dicti loci eodem fulgure, conventu ad matutinas astante, penitus combusta sunt et destructa. Pridie nonas ejusdem ortus est ventus validissimus, quo arbores innumerabiles prostrantur et fructus. Et campanile de Modford et Gevelton ad terram similiter ceciderunt."

Walsingham, Hist. Angl. edit. 1574, p. 72, places this fire A.D. 1311.

^f Hutchins, Hist. Dors. Gough's edit. vol. iv. p. 214.

In the Customary of Milton it appears that in all or most of the manors belonging to the convent, their tenants were quite slaves, and prohibited to educate a son in learning to receive the tonsure, "ita quod percipiat coronam," nor marry a daughter out of the manor without licence. This manuscript, Hutchins adds, is entitled "Customarius Abbathie de Milton," and was in the hands of the late Mr. John Bailey, rector of South Cadbury in Somersetshire. It is an original, written on parchment, and contains the customs and customary payments of the manors belonging to the abbey. The first leaves are un-

Hoggastri et Agni, 2744. Hogs, Sows, Boars, and young Pigs, 203. Capons, Cocks, and Hens, 87. Money in arrear, 300*l.* 1*s.* 1*d.*

Amongst the manors and farms of the monastery were reckoned Frome and Stafford, Upton, East Ringsted, Holeway, Stikelane, and La Lee.^f

The original number of monks here, according to an anonymous author in the Cotton library, was forty, which was afterwards reduced to twelve. At the election of abbat Bruton there were fifteen: at the Dissolution twelve: but in both these cases there might be more, and these be only the numbers of those who concurred in that election and the surrender.^g

ABBATS OF MIDDLETON.

CYNEWWARD, or CYNEWARD, was constituted abbat by King Edgar, upon his introducing monks, and expelling the secular clergy, A.D. 964.^h He was made bishop of Wells in 974: and died the following year.

AGELRICUS, or EGELRIC, abbat of Middleton, was deposed at a council at Westminster, held in 1102; together with the abbats of Pershore, Ramsey, Tavistock, &c.ⁱ

R. occurs abbat in the time of Henry the First.^k

A. occurs in the reign of Henry the Second.^l

EUSTACE, sacrist of Middleton, was made abbat in 1198.^m

WILLIAM DE STOKES was elected abbat in 1222.ⁿ

WILLIAM DE TAUNTON was elected in 1256, 41 Hen. III.^o He had before been chosen prior of Winchester in 1249, and was elected bishop by the convent there in 1261: but the pope refusing to confirm him, he desisted from his right.^p He died in 1272.^q Upon his death, the king gave licence, April 15th, 1273, to the monks of Middleton to elect another abbat; and on May 19th following his consent to the election of JOHN STEPHENS, alias BRADLEY, a monk of the house, was elected Middleton's successor. The Instrument by which the temporalities of the abbey were put into his hands is printed in Rymer, dated June 16th, 1525.^m He was consecrated suffragan bishop of Shaftsbury March 23, 1538.

On the 11th of March, 1539, abbat Stephens, with twelve monks, surrendered the monastery to the king. The List of Pensions granted on this occasion will be found in the Appendix.ⁿ

The scite of the abbey was granted in the 31st Hen. VIII. to Sir John Tregonwell, together with the church, belfry, bells, and church-yard, the advowson of the vicarage, manor, and rectory, with the chapels of Wolland, Lyscombe, and Wydcombe, the tithes of the demesnes in Milton, Huish, Churchcombe, and a portion of tithes in Milborne St. Andrew, to be held in chief by knights-service, as the tenth part of a knight's fee, paying yearly 12*l.* 4*d.*

As far as has been ascertained, no REGISTER, or LEIGER-BOOK, of Middleton abbey, except that in the office of the King's Remembrancer in the Exchequer, is now remaining.^o

The presumed matrix of the ABBEY SEAL, which was found about fifty years ago in the neighbourhood of the monastery, was explained by Dr. Samuel Pegge, in 1771, in a letter addressed to the Rev. Mr. Norris, at that time secretary of the Society of Antiquaries.^p earl of Warwick, and is the property of Mr. John Bowle, rector of Idmerstone, Wilts.

"It was termed, when first I heard of it, the Seal of King Athelstan, who acceded to the throne of Wessex, or the Saxon kingdom, A.D. 925, and left it by death A.D. 941; and the inscription, in the first apprehension, seems to betoken as much:

"Hoc Athelstanus ago quod præsens signat imago;"

importing, that the deed or instrument attested by this signature is the real act of one King Athelstan. For though Athelstan was a known and common name among the Saxons, yet the king, who stands en sovereign in the principal tabernacle of the obverse, is indisputably intended. But though this first and most obvious sense seems to accommodate to the nature and design of a seal, yet no one, I imagine, that is tolerably versed in our antiquities, can esteem this to be the real seal of that great and illustrious prince. Seals, in the first place, were not in use here in the tenth century. Secondly, coats of arms, of which there are two on the obverse, were things unknown in that age. Thirdly, no crowns of the form of those on the obverse and reverse, viz. with three fleurs de lis, occur upon any genuine monument of that high date. (See Pere Daniel, Hist. de France, tom. i. p. 253; also Seld. Tit. of Hon.) And lastly, for I would not be prolix upon a matter which I think so clear as almost to be self-evident, the characters of the legends on both sides are not Saxon, as might justly be expected in King Athelstan's reign, but the old black letter, not introduced till many ages after.

"The question then arises, to whom did this seal belong, if not to King Athelstan, whose image it so plainly bears? But before I attempt to answer this question, you must give me leave, Sir, to describe the seal.

"The king sits en sovereign in the middle or principal tabernacle. In that on his right hand is a dragon displayed on a shield; and in that on his left the arms of Mercia and Wessex are combined on another shield. The inscription on this side is,

"Hoc Athelstanus ago quod præsens signat imago."

"The reverse exhibits a Madonna with the bambino in the front, with an angel in the dexter tabernacle, and a monk in the sinister. The legend here,

"Virgo rogo pro me totum semper tibi do me."

"Quære, by the way, whether a direct address to the Virgin, as here, could possibly be made in King Athelstan's time in this island? *

"In the first place, then, I take this to be a monastic seal belonging to some religious house of King Athelstan's foundation, and of the invocation of the Virgin Mary. Athelstanus on the obverse, by an usual metonymy, standing or being put for the convent, or the house he had founded. An interpretation implying that the instrument under such seal is the act of that house or convent.

"Now, on inspecting Bishop Tanner's Notitia, King Athelstan, I find, was the reputed founder of the Augustinian canons at Bodmin, in Cornwall, which was a rich foundation, and styled at the Dissolution the priory of St. Mary and St. Petroc. This king again is reported, on good authority, to have founded a considerable monastery at Exeter, sacred to the Virgin-mother and St. Peter; but as this house afterwards, and long before the age of our seal, (on which a conjecture shall be

^p It was as follows:

"DEAR SIR,

"The Seal of which you have done me the honour to send me the impressions is truly most fine and perfect, both in the obverse and reverse, and is highly valuable on that account, even were it not so in other respects. It was found, I am informed, not far from Milton, or Middleton, in Dorsetshire, and has been engraved at the expense of the

Hutchins informs us that the whole of the MONASTIC BUILDINGS of Milton, except the hall and the abbey church, were taken down in 1771. They stood on the west part of what was then the town, upon a rising ground, close by the Church; and formed a long square.

Hutchins, speaking of the state of the buildings about ninety years ago, says:

"The north front was a very low antient range of building, with small narrow windows, perhaps the dormitory or cells of the monks. You entered by a large gate into a small court, whose old buildings were all very irregular in form and height, as indeed was the old fabric: under a window opposite the porch was a W. with a crown over it, and an M. with a crozier through it, and between them 1529. Under a window on the west a shield with the arms and crest of Tregonwell impaling Kelway.

"At the east end of the court was the old abbey kitchen, pulled down in 1737. The roof was vaulted with stone, and supported by a massy stone pillar, and it had two very large chimnies at each end. The western side seems to have been the abbat's lodgings."

The cloisters were placed between the south end of this court and the lower part of the north aisle. The last remain appears to have been taken down in 1730.

"Opposite the great north gate was a building called the Still House: perhaps, by its being placed at a distance from the abbey, it might be the Infirmary. On it was a W. with a crozier through it, a mill on a offered in the sequel), became the cathedral of Exeter, consisting of a dean and twenty-four prebendaries, had the seal belonged to it, this would assuredly have been known long before this day. Pilton, thirdly, a Benedictine priory in Devonshire, dedicated to the Virgin, was likewise founded by this king. And fourthly, Midleton in Dorsetshire, patronized by St. Mary, St. Michael, St. Sampson, and St. Branwalader,* was of this prince's erection.

"I presume, that in all seals the owners or proprietors of them are expressed; and here King Athelstan represents the foundation at Milton, which otherwise would want a proper designation. And it was equally usual in the monkish times for the blessed Virgin to be joined in dedication with other saints. In Mr. Drake's Plate p. c. No. 8, is the arms of St. Mary York, with a king in the centre; on which he says, 'the king in the centre, I suppose, was given to denote the royal foundation of this abbey.'

"There also, No. 15, the founders Vesci and Percy (see p. 309.) are expressed under the saints. So is the seal of the college of Wye in Kent; Cardinal Kempe, the founder, is kneeling at the bottom.

"These particulars will neither of them be disputed. Some one therefore of the above foundations, especially numbers 1, 3, and 4. may be supposed to have a claim to the seal; and, for my next, I conceive, as the seal is so magnificent, that the greatest probability lies on the side of Middleton, this being far the most wealthy foundation of the three, and indeed it was a rich house, being valued, 26 Hen. VIII. at 578*l.* or, as Speed has it, 720*l.*

"There are two particulars that appear to me to confirm this appropriation. First, the angel may well be thought to represent St. Michael, the second saint of this house in dignity, and placed consequently in the dexter tabernacle or compartment. As to the monk in the other compartment, he may either stand for a mere monk, or for one of the other two saints, St. Sampson or St. Branwalader, there not being room for both; probably St. Sampson the more eminent of the two,† and whose relicks were most numerous at this place.‡ In regard to this, it may be said, there is no glory to intimate a saintship: this is very true; but neither has St. Michael any splendour about his head; this objection is therefore of no force. The second particular is this; there are two tuns perforated in the middle by two mill-hoppers, as they appear to me, in the principal compartment, and held by the angel and the monk. Now the orthography of the place was doubtless MIDDLETON, but the pronunciation Milton; this device therefore may seem to be a rebus, expressive of the name of the place, MILTON, according to the vogue of the time when the seal was contrived and fabricated, the point next to be considered.

"To judge from the form of the letters in the legends, one cannot deem this seal to be older than the reign of King Henry IV. and please to observe that the disposition of the seal, consisting of three tabernacles with the king in the middle, and a shield of arms on each side of him, resembles much the great seal of King Richard II. in Sandford;

tun, several roses, and the date 1515. This was pulled down in 1753.

"Under the garden wall, by the road that leads from the town to the abbey, was a foot walk walled, called Ambry Wall: perhaps it was the way to the almonry, where the poor received their alms of the abbey. Near this was the antient abbey barn, which had two porches or threshing floors projecting beyond it. It was 16 goad, or 250 feet 8 inches long, (each goad 15 feet 8 inches) and 32 feet broad. It was all tiled, and much of it rebuilt in 1751."^a

On the inner side of a beautiful Gothic Screen of wood, at the lower end of the Hall, is the date,

Anno dñi 1898

The same date occurs upon a ledge beneath the roof at the south-west corner of the hall. This also was the work of abbat Middleton.

The magnificent mansion, in the pointed style, erected by Sir William Chambers upon the scite of the abbey house, about 1771, was built at the expense of Joseph the first earl of Dorchester. It is at present the residence of Lady Caroline Damer. At the time of the building of the mansion, the earl of Dorchester destroyed the old town, erecting a new village at a considerable distance, together with a church for the accommodation of the inhabitants; which latter was dedicated to St. James in 1786. The church of the abbey became, in consequence, the private chapel of the mansion.

and that the crown, sceptre, and sword correspond with those on the seals of King Henry IV. and V. Particulars which, along with the characters, may seem to assure the seal, almost infallibly, to the fifteenth century. Something also may perhaps be inferred from the roses that appear intermixed in the legends; as this badge did not come into vogue till that century. The rose is seen for the first time on the seal of Henry IV. where, and it is a remarkable circumstance, it is accompanied by a dexter hand, as here on our seal. Roses occur afterwards numerous on the seals of Henry V. and his queen. I may add, that the leonine or rhyming verses in the legends were more the offspring of this century, than of King Athelstan's age, when, it is presumed, they were little known or used.

"After thus appropriating the seal, and ascertaining its age, which seem to be the two main points, I shall detain you no longer, Sir, than whilst I make two short observations on the shields of the obverse.

"The artist has with strict propriety, though escutcheons or shields with arms were not in vogue in King Athelstan's time, charged the dexter shield with a dragon displayed, this being the undoubted standard of that King, as was formerly evinced in a memoir on a coin of King Egbert, addressed to the Hon. Daines Barrington Esq. § It is agreed by all who have viewed the seal, that the device or charge on that seal is a dragon, for though it differs in shape and form from other figures of that imaginary animal, from those in particular on the coin, and on the ring referred to in the note; yet this is of no consequence, since poets, painters, engravers, and statuaries, ever thought themselves at liberty in describing or depicting such subjects of the fancy; besides, there would necessarily be a mighty dissimilitude, as to appearance, between a dragon displayed, as here, and the same when given in profile.

"The second observation is, that as King Athelstan was clearly and fully possessed of the kingdom of Mercia, as well as that of Wessex, it was not ill imagined by the designer of the seal to give him on the other shield, what were taken to be, in the fifteenth century, the arms of Mercia and Wessex, viz. the saltire surmounted with a cross fleurée. For though these devices were unknown as coat armour in King Athelstan's time, our artists had probably appropriated them respectively to those kingdoms long before the reign of King Henry IV.

"It is possible, Sir, that some of the matters advanced in this paper may appear too conjectural. I acknowledge, the arguments do not always carry demonstration. But in these affairs we must be allowed to advance such kinds of proofs as the nature of the subject will admit of, and to have recourse consequently to plausibilities. A declaration, which as I pretend not to prescribe or to dictate, ought to be a sufficient apology for me to all those who may happen to think differently from me.

De Nativitate Regis Athelstani Fundatoris Abbathiæ de Middeltone.

[Ex Registro Cartarum Abbathiæ de Middleton in Scaccario penes Remem. Regis, fol. 3 a.]

ERAT in quadam villa opilionis filia, elegantis speciei puella, quæ quod non contulissent natales formæ mercabatur gratia. Huic per visum demonstratur prodigium, lunam de suo ventre splendere, et hoc lumine totam Angliam illustrari. Quod cum mane ad sodales ludo detulisset, ab illis non joculariter exceptum, confestim villicæ auribus quæ filios reges nutrire solebat insonuit. Illa rem examinans, puellam intra lares suos receptam filiæ loco habuit, cultioribus cibis, delicatioribus vestimentis, gestibus facetioribus virgunculam informans. Non multò post, filius regis Elfredi Edwardus, itineris casu per villam transiens, ad domum divertit infantilium olim rudimentorum consciam. Neque enim integrum famæ suæ rebatur si nutricem visitare fastidiret. Ubi visæ virginis amore captus, noctem petiit. Ipsa uno complexu gravidata cum peperisset filium Athelstanum sompni fidem absolvit, nam cum ille pueritia mortua in adolescentiam evaderet, magnam spem regiæ indolis dabat præclaris facinoribus approbatus. Itaque patre defuncto, Edwardus ex legitima conjugē creatus concita morte secutus est. Tunc omnium speciebus in Athelstanum erectis, solus Elfredus, magnæ insolentiæ homo, cum suis clam restitit, quoad potuit, dedignans subdi dominio quem suo non delegisset arbitrio. Fuerunt quidam qui fratrem regis Athelstani, nomine Edwynum, insidiarum insimularent; scelus horrendum et fœdum, quod sedulitatem fraternam sinistra interpretatione turbarent. Edwynus per se et per germanos fidem inplorans germani, et licet sacramento delationem infirmans, in exilium actus est: tamen quorundum mussitatio apud animum in multas curas distentum valuit, ut ephebum etiam exterius miserandum, oblitus consanguineæ necessitudinis, expelleret, inaudito sanè crudelitatis modo, ut solus cum armigero navem conscendere juberetur remige et remigio vacuum, præterea vetustate quassam. Diu laboravit fortuna ut insontem terræ restitueret, sed cum tandem in medio mari furorem ventorum vela non sustinerent, ille adolescens et vitæ in talibus pertæsus, voluntario in aquas præcipitio mortem conscivit. Armiger saniori consilio passus animam producere, modò adversus fluctus eludendo, modo pedibus subrenigando domini corpus ad terram detulit, angusto scilicet à Doveria in Withsand mari.

cum proximam ecclesiam Michelniensem humili statu compactam videret, vovisse plusquam semel dicitur, ut si unquam exiret, eam in sublime culmen eveheret. Sed hæc quomodocumque se habeant, illud reverà constat, quod sicut in cartis ejusdem ecclesiæ legitur, rex Athelstanus ecclesiam Michelniensem sancto Petro excelsiorem fecit, multis redditibus villarum et reliquiarum exhenniis habitatores consolatus. Est enim aditu difficili, permeaturque æstate pede vel equo plerumque, yeme nunquam. Nec illud vacat à gloria quod in delatorem fratris, si tamen credimus, animosè ultus est. Erat enim pincerna regis, et per hoc ad suadenda quæ excogitasset accommodus. Itaque cum fortè die solempni vinum propinaret, in medio triclinio uno pede lapsus altero se recollectit. Tunc occasione arrepta, fatale sibi verbum emisit, sic frater fratrem adjuvat. Quo rex audito, perfidum obtruncari præcepit, sæpius auxilium germani si videret increpitans, et mortem ingemescens. Hæc de fratris nece etsi verisimilia videntur, eo minus corroboro, quod admirabilem suæ pietatis indulgentiam in reliquos fratres intenderit, quos cum pater puerulos admodum reliquisset, parvos magna dulcedine et adultos consortes regni faciens, nunquam eorum intuitu dare operam matrimonio curavit. De sororibus autem quinque quas pater indotatas et innuptas reliquerat, quanta eas majestate provexerit, liber de gestis Anglorum satis expressè narrat.

Unde rex Athelstanus postquam ecclesiam Michelniensem, ut superius lectum est, humili statu compactam in sublime culmen eveheret, eadem illectus causa, Middeltuniensem ecclesiam in decimo regni sui anno, in pago Dorsetiæ, pro anima fratris sui Edwyni, de quo superius satis commemorat, fundavit, eoque plus quod monachi liberiùs cœlestibus possint excubare secretis, quo minùs frequentabantur hominum conventiculis; similiaque contulit et villarum et possessionum exennia, et etiam reliquias de transmarina Britannia et aliis locis, magna cura, magno labore magnarumque divitiarum suarum expensione emptas, monasterio suo de Middeltone misit, quo loco monasterium à fundamentis procuderat.

Fundatio Abbathiæ de Middeltone.

Anno Dominicæ incarnationis dcccxxiiij. Adelstanus, primogenitus regis Edwardi primi, filii regis Elfredi, regnare cœpit, omnes antecessores suos devotione mentis, et omnes eorum titulos triumphorum suorum splendore obnubilans, omnem fere Angliam solo nominis terrore sibi subjugavit præter Northanhumbros, cum quorum rege Dano, Sithrico, data ei sorore sua, fœdus iniit. Quo post annum mortuo, Northanhumbria totam sibi subjugavit, expulso Adulpho, qui rebellabat. Judwallum verò regem omnium Wallensium, et Constantinum regem Scotorum cedere regnis compulit. Quos tamen non multò post miseratione infractus, in antiquum statum sub se regnatos constituit, pronuncians gloriosius esse regem facere quam regem esse. Post hæc Analaphus quidam rex Dacus, prædicti Sithrici filius, juvenis audacissimus, cum prædicto Constantino rege Scotorum iterum rebellante, cum multis copiis militum et peditum spe invadendi in Angliam processerat. paratus, sed cum ad locum congregiendi pervenissent, accidit infortunium grande regi Adelstano, quod gladius suus ex vagina excidit. Tunc rex ratione infortunii formidatus, invocato Deo, sanctoque Sampson, atque sancto Aldelmo, reducta ad vaginam manu, invenit ensem, qui usque hodie in thesauro regum pro miraculo servatur. Ut igitur Adelstanus, sicut superius dictum est, ensem invenit, socios hortabatur totam spem suam in filium Dei ponere, hostes inde suos audacter invadere, et pro patria unanimiter pugnare. Dispositis tandem Anglorum cuneis, congregiuntur acies, mutuos ictus ingeminant, cruorem non minimum diffundunt. Ceciderunt ibi prædictus Constantinus rex Scotorum, aliique reges quinque, comites duodecim, omnisque pene Dacorum atque Scotorum exercitus. Et dum talem decertationem facerent, nitebatur semper Adelstanus rex habere aditum congregiendi cum Analapho, sed non habuit; nam Analaphus, ut vidit suos subcumbere, Anglos verò nutu Dei prevalere, confestim diffugit, petivitque Hiberniam. Imperaverat enim rex Adelstanus ut præda in castris prædictorum Analaphi et Constantini reperta, ac omnia alia conquesita, vel monasteriis regni sui, vel fidelibus suis largirentur. Deinde Northwalensium, id est Brittonum, regulos ad deditionem et ad annuum tributum solvendum coëgit.

Postea Cornwalenses Brittones ab Excestria, quam cum Anglis jure inhabitarent, cedere compulit, atque terminum provinciae suae citra Tambram flumen constituit. Et sic Adelstanus fuit primus rex Anglorum, qui monarchiam totius insulae Britanniae optinuit. Hic Adelstanus rex habuit filium nomine Aluredum qui parum vixit. Fueruntque regi Adelstano tres fratres, videlicet Edmundus, Eadredus, et Edwynus; quorum Edmundus et Eadredus post regem Adelstanum, alter post alterum, diadema regni susceperunt. Contigit autem in anno regni regis Adelstani nono, quod Edwynus frater ejus quartus, per quendam delatorem apud ipsum graviter fuerat accusatus. Causam accusationis et accusatores hîc scribere dissimulo, ne fortè prolixitate lecturæ legentes graverentur. Rex autem pravo corruptus consilio, Edwynum ab Anglia ejecit, inaudito crudelitatis modo, ut solus cum armigero apud Doveriam navem intraret remige et remigio vacuam, præterea vetustate quassam. Diu laboravit fortuna ut insontem terræ restitueret; sed cum tandem in medio mari furorem ventorum vela non sustinerent, Edwynus adolescens voluntariè in aquas se misit et mortem conscivit. Armiger verò saniori usus consilio, modò adversus fluctus eludendo, modò pedibus subremigando, domini sui corpus ab aquis extraxit et in Wythsand ad terram detulit. Cumque id regi nunciatum fuisset, postquam ira deferbuit, animo sedato factum exhorruit, sæpius auxilium Edwyni fratris sui, si viveret, increpitans et mortem ingemiscens. Deinde rex Adelstanus in decimo regni sui anno, in pago Dorsetiæ, eo quod in festivitate sancti Sampsonis archipræsulis victoria de rege Analapho et ejus satellitibus in loco quo nunc sua capella est sanctæ Katerinæ divinitus ei præmonstrata fuit, et etiam de morte fratris sui Edwyni reminiscens, et ingemescendo in culpa se extitisse dampnabili, contra dictum regem Analaphum victoria belli habita, pro dicti fratris sui Edwyni anima monasterium de Middelton in puram et perpetuam elemosinam fundavit, ita quod nullum omnino servitium inde fieret nisi tantum orationes. Ibidem etiam monachos nigros constituit, atque præfatum monasterium multis donariis villarum et aliarum possessionum ditando honoravit, et illud in honore sanctæ Mariæ sanctique Sampsonis dedicare fecit. Paulo post Amphelisa mater regis Adelstani ab hoc seculo migravit, cujus corpus rex jussit regio more parari, paratumque corpus ad monasterium suum de Middelton deferri, ut ibidem à pontificibus et clero regni honorificè sepeliretur. Hic Adelstanus, rex gloriosus ac Deo devotus, multa bona monasteria construxit, quia scribitur, quod nobilis animus semper incitatus ad ampliora conatur. Vixque fuit in tota Anglia aliquod vetustum quod non vel ædificiis vel ornamentis aut libris aut prædiis decoravit. Inter quæ monasterium suum de Middelton,

in qua salvator noster pro salute mundi pependit. Et crucem magnam ex auro et argento atque lapidibus preciosis fabricatam. Brachium et plura ossa sancti Sampsonis archipræsulis, super cujus scapulam columna de supernis celitus missa dum ipse sacros ordines, videlicet diaconatus et presbiteratus susciperet, immobilis stetit usquequo officium ordinationis ejus completum fuisset. Quod miraculum sanctus Dubricius archiepiscopus, ejus consecrator et omnes qui aderant se vidisse testabantur. Item brachium sancti Branwaladri episcopi, et etiam plures alias reliquias in quinque scriniis adhuc firmiter clausis. Omnes istas reliquias prænominatus rex Adelstanus a sancta Romana ecclesia, et ex Britannia transmarina, et à multis aliis locis magna cura, magno labore magnaue divitiarum suarum expensione emptas monasterio suo de Middeltone, pro animabus fratris sui Edwyni et matris suæ, quæ in eodem monasterio jacet sepulta contulit, et in scriniis deauratis, ut prædictum est, locare fecit.

Hic Adelstanus rex gloriosus, sanctæ exaltator ecclesiæ, gentilitatis humiliator pravæ, regni sui speculum, totius bonitatis exemplum, dissipator hostium, pater monachorum et clericorum, adjutor gentium, reformator omnium, sanctorum innovator Anglorum, multum splenduit in vita sua, qui à fortissimis bellatoribus potuit lacesiri, sed nunquam potuit vinci. Post sextumdecimum regni sui annum rex Adelstanus Glocestriæ diem clausit extremum. Exuviæ triumphales Malmesburyæ fuerunt delatæ, et sub altari magno tumulatæ. Ante corpus portata fuere multa in argento et auro donaria. In talibus enim thesauros patris quos ille diu coacervatos et intactos reliquerat consumpsit, sompno ut fertur admonitus, vir qui parum vixit mundo, multum gloriæ, cujus Deus propicietur animæ.

ABBAS de Myddelton summonitus fuit ad respondendum domino regi quo waranto subtraxit domino rege sectam de Holeworth et Reggestede debitam ad hundredum suum de Wynfrede, et etiam quo waranto clamat habere wrekkum maris, furcas, pyllorium, tumberellum, emendas panis et cervisiæ, assisæ fractæ, et liberam warennam in terris suis in comitatu isto, sine licentia et voluntate domini regis et prædecessorum suorum regum Angliæ; et unde Willielmus de Gyselham, qui sequitur pro domino rege, dicit quod ipse tenet prædictas libertates subtractas, &c.

Et abbas venit et quoad dictam sectam ad prædictum hundredum dicit quod nulla subtractio domini regis inde fieri potest, quia dicit quod prædictum hundredum non est domini regis, immo cujusdam Johannis de Newburgh, qui præsens est, et dicit quod ipse tenuit prædictum hundredum de domino rege in capite. Ideo prædictus abbas quoad hoc inde sine die, et quoad tumberellum, emendas panis et cervisiæ, et warennam, dicit quod ipse habet libertates illas ex concessione regis Henrici, patris domini regis, nunc per cartam suam quam profert, et quæ hoc testatur quod concessit et carta sua confirmavit abbati et conventui de Myddleton, liberam warennam in omnibus dominicis terris suis quæ habent in comitatu Dorset, dum tenementa et terræ illæ non sint infra metas forestæ nostræ, concessit etiam quod habeant unum mercatum in manerio suo de Myddleton singulis septimanis per diem Jovis, et similiter unam feriam in manerio suo de Scotlaunde singulis annis per tres dies duraturam, et quicquid ad feriam pertinet; et quoad wreccum maris dicit, quod ipse et omnes prædecessores sui a tempore quo non extat memoria, usi sunt prædictum wreccum percipiendum.

Michelney Abbey,

IN

SOMERSETSHIRE.

MICHELNEY, Mochelney, or Muchenay Abbey was erroneously placed by Dugdale, in the former edition of the Monasticon, in Dorsetshire. It is really situated in Somersetshire, in the village of its name, about two miles south of Langport: surrounded by moorland.

The particulars of the foundation of this abbey by King Æthelstan in 939,^a have been already given in the Account of Middleton monastery.^b It was dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul.^c Collinson says, many monarchs were benefactors to it both before and after the Norman Conquest.^d

The possessions of this monastery, at the time of the Domesday Survey, consisted of four carucates of land in the three islands of Michelenie, Midelenie, and Torleie; two hides and a half at Cipestaple; twenty hides in Ileminstre; five hides in Ile; a detached hide and half in Ile; twenty hides in Draitune; ten hides in Camelle; and a hide and a half in Cathangre; all in Somersetshire. Among the minutiae of their possessions, we find an arpent of vineyard noticed within the three islands, and a market belonging to the monks at Ilminster. The produce of the rents of the different manors appears to have amounted to 51*l.* 16*s.*^e

Collinson says, beside what is mentioned in Domesday, the abbat and convent had afterwards the manors of Downhead, Middle-Chilcombe, West Earnshill, and East Earnshill; lands in Drayton, Burton, Bere, Ilford, Martock, and other places;^f with the churches of Mu-chelney, Chipstaple, Somerton, Isle-Abbots, Five-head Meriot, Ilminster, and the chapel of Drayton.^g

In the 12th of Hen. II. the abbat certified to the king that he, in like manner with his predecessors in the monastery, held his lands by the service of one knight's fee, which was then partly held by Richard Revel, and partly by Margaret daughter of Ralph Tabuel.^h

In the time of King John the abbat was, by an order from the crown, dispossessed of his lands and chattels, and gave three marks of gold to have restoration of the abbey and its possessions.ⁱ

In the 14th of Hen. III. the abbat paid three marks for one knight's fee, to the aid of the king's first passage into Brittany;^k and, in the 38th Hen. III. the same sum to the aid for making the king's eldest son a knight.^l

ABBATS of MICHELNEY.

LIUWARDUS is mentioned, in the Domesday Survey, as abbat in the time of Edward the Confessor.^m

RICHARD abbat of Michelney occurs in the 7th of King John, A.D. 1205.ⁿ Hearne, in his Preface to Adam of Domerham, says: "Richardus, nescio quis, occurrit anno xii. Henrici III." Another

RICHARD, sacrist of the monastery, was elected abbat in the 19th Hen. III. A.D. 1235, upon the death of R. late abbat.^o A vacancy in the abbacy occurred in the 21st of Hen. III.^p when, probably,

WALTER was elected. Hearne speaks of Walter as abbat in 1248.^q

JOHN DE BARNEVILL, a monk of the monastery, received the royal assent to his election 29th June, 36 Hen. III. A.D. 1251.^r

^a In one part of Leland's Collectanea the date of the foundation, as ascribed to Athelstan, is A.D. 839: as Bishop Tanner supposes by the omission of one of the numeral C's. In a second passage of the Collectanea, edit. 1770, tom. i. p. 26, the foundation is ascribed to King Alfred: "Ecclesiæ de Ethelingey, Shaftesbury, et Muchelney, ab Aluredo rege fundatæ." In a third passage, tom. i. p. 78, it is said, "Ina rex fundator."

^b See p. 344.

^c The symbols of St. Peter and St. Paul, as represented in the initial Letter of the present Account, formed at least one of the coats of arms belonging to the abbey of Michelney. The seal of Michelney abbey, appendant to the Surrender still preserved in the Augmentation Office, has for a device, two figures beneath Gothic canopies; one representing St. Peter, crowned, in a rich cope; his right hand uplifted, in the act of benediction, his left holding the crossed staff as pope: the other representing St. Paul, with a book and sword. At the sides are angels holding shields; that on the right of the seal charged with the keys and sword, that on the left with a saltier. The inscription round, as far as it remains, is ABBATIS & CONVENTVS MO DE MOCHELNEY.

WILLIAM DE GYVELE was the next abbat. The royal assent was given to his election Sept. 27th, 1274, and the temporalities were restored on the 8th of October following.^a After his death, the king's licence was granted, 19 Jan. 1293, to proceed to a new election, when

RALPH DE MUCHELNEY was elected. The royal assent was given to his election July 3d, and the temporalities of the abbey were restored Aug. 5th, 1293.^b On Jan. 19th, 1303, upon the death of Abbat Ralph, a licence for a fresh election was granted, when

JOHN DE HENTONE was chosen abbat. The king consented to the election on the 1st of March; and, on the 1st of April, the temporalities were restored. In his time, A.D. 1315, the bishop of Bath and Wells commissioned Thomas de Dilitone, D.D., and Richard de Forde, to visit the abbey.^c In 1317 the office of the sacristary was appropriated to the convent for a year.^d John de Hentone died on the 9th of June, 1334.^e Licence was granted 21st June following; and, on the 8th of July, the royal assent was given to the election of

JOHN DE SOMERTON, to whom the temporalities were restored July 24th.^f Hearne, in his Preface to Adam de Domerham, p. xxix. says, he was confirmed by the bishop of Bath and Wells, on the 14th of the kalends of August, that is, July 19th, 1334. In 1335 the monastery was again visited.^g

THOMAS DE OVERTON occurs abbat in the 27th Edward III. A.D. 1353;^h upon whose death a licence was granted for an election Nov. 21, 1371. On the 1st December following the royal assent was given to the election of

WILLIAM DE SHEPTON, and the temporalities were restored Dec. 19th.ⁱ Upon his death a licence was obtained for choosing a successor Feb. 23d, 1397,^k when

NICHOLAS DE STROTTON became abbat.

JOHN BRUTON was elected abbat in the month of August, 1400, and had the temporalities restored Sept. 13th following.^l

JOHN CHERDE had the temporalities restored to him 28th April, 1433.^m He was also prebendary of Ilminster in the church of Wells.ⁿ He died Sept. 10th, 1463.^o

THOMAS PIPE, or PIPPE, was elected abbat Sept.

20th, and confirmed October 3d, 1463.^p There were fourteen monks then in the abbey.^q

WILLIAM CROKEHORN, or CRUKERN, had the temporalities restored to him as abbat July 23d, 1466.^r Upon his death,

JOHN BRACY succeeded; to whose election the royal assent was given April 7th, 1470.^s He was present at the election of John Gunthorp, dean of Wells, A.D. 1472. He died May 16th, 1489.^t

WILLIAM WIK, or WYKE, was elected abbat June 15th following.^u Fifteen monks were then in the abbey, and two absent. Wyke died in the month of October, 1504.^x

THOMAS BROKE was confirmed abbat Jan. 21, 1504.^y Upon whose death,

JOHN SHIRBORN, or SCHERBORNE, was elected Oct. 10th, 1522, having previously been prior of the monastery for many years.^z

THOMAS YVE was the last abbat, who, with Richard Coscob prior, John Montague, and eight others, subscribed to the king's supremacy July 2d, 1534, 26 Hen. VIII. and afterwards to the surrender Jan. 3d, 1538, 29 Hen. VIII.^a

The revenues of this abbey were valued, according to Collinson, in 1444, at no more than 97*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* According to Dugdale, in 1534, they amounted to 447*l.* 5*s.*: and, according to Speed, at 498*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.*^b The abbat was allowed the mitre, but had no seat in parliament.^c

In the 30th of Henry VIII. the king granted to Edward earl of Hertford the monastery and manor of Muchelney, with the manors of Drayton and Weston, Middeney, Langport and Othery, Yarnhill, West-Camel, Downshead, Isle Abbots, Ilminster, Ilcombe, Fivehead, Chipstaple, Ivell, Ilchester, Milton, and Marston, most of them belonging to this monastery.^d

The abbey is said to have been a large and fine structure. The following are the dimensions of it, as preserved in William of Worcester's Itinerary:

"Longitudo ecclesiæ Mochelly continet 104 steppys.

Longitudo Capellæ Beatæ Mariæ continet . . .

Latitudo Claustri continet 54 steppys."^e

It stood adjoining to the present church-yard.^f

^f Hist. Somers. vol. iii. p. 136. Collinson says, the Parish Church of Muchelney was valued in 1292 at nine marks. "In 1308 there was an ordination of the vicarage by Walter Haselschaw, bishop of Bath and Wells, by which it was articulated that the Vicar for the time being should have all that house and curtilage then occupied by Rich. Baldwyne of Martock, vicar of the said church, that he should have from the abbey cellar, every day, one of the monks' large loaves, and two pitchers of the best conventual ale, and from the abbey kitchen, twice a week, viz. Sundays and Tuesdays, a dish of meat; but the rest of the week only a dish of eggs or fish, at the pleasure of the kitchen steward. The vicar and his successors were to receive yearly from the sexton of Muchelney, for the time being, at the four usual quarters of the year, four pounds of silver to defray charges; also all the money offered on sabbath days, as well at Muchelney as in the chapel at Drayton annexed thereto, as also all the money offered at funeral solemnities as well at first as second mass; also legacies left, and mass-pence offered for the deceased; also all the bread and eggs, and other oblations at the cross, on Whitsunday and Easter day, in the church at Muchelney and the chapel of Drayton, as also all confessional oblations, and gifts at purifications. The abbat and convent to receive all tithes, great and small, belonging to both Muchelney and Drayton, and every other perquisite not above specified; and the vicar to sustain all episcopal, archidiaconal, and other charges, besides archdeacon's procurations, and to find a proper chaplain to officiate in the chapel of Drayton." This ordination is dated at Chew, Dec. 2d, A.D. 1308. Collinson, vol. iii. p. 137. See also Hearne, Append. ad Præf. Ad. de Domerham, p. lxxxiii.

"The buildings," Collinson says, "are now mostly taken down, and the remaining part converted into a farm-house, still distinguished by the appellation of The Abbey. Most of the house and offices now standing have an ancient appearance, being in the gothic stile, with battlements, fine arched windows, stone staircases, and large quoins. In several of the windows there are the fragments of what once was finely painted glass. In the adjoining orchard the foundations of the ancient structure may easily be traced to a great extent. It is surrounded by old venerable elms, and seems to have been a place well adapted to contemplation."

No REGISTER of Michelney abbey has, as yet, been made known to the collectors of our monastic antiquities:^a but several Charters, two of them with the abbey SEAL^b attached, are preserved among the Records in the Augmentation Office.^c

Benedictine Nunnery of Pollesworth,

IN

WARWICKSHIRE.

POLLESWORTH, in a passage of Leland's Collectanea, is corruptly called Pollesbyria.^a There is no mention of this place in the Conqueror's Survey. A roll in old English, formerly belonging to John Ferrers, Esq. of Tamworth Castle, transcribed by Dugdale in 1640, gives the legendary tale of its foundation in the ninth century by King Egbert, at the instance of Modwenna, daughter of the king of Connaught in Ireland. Egbert is stated to have consecrated it to the honour of Our Lady, and to have placed in it his daughter Editha as abbess; who being afterwards canonized, the Monastery was dedicated to her. John of Tine-mouth, however, ascribes the foundation to Athulph, or Ethelwolf, son to King Edgar, whose son Alured, grandson to King Edgar, was cured by St. Modwenna of some infirmity.^b

In the legendary Account just quoted, the whole of which will be found in the Appendix,^c the Nuns are stated to have been dispossessed of all their lands, some little time after the Conquest, by Robert de Marmion, and to have been obliged to retire to their cell called Oldbury.

Robert de Marmion, and Milicent his wife, in the time of K. Stephen, are said to have brought the Nuns back to Pollesworth, and to have restored to them their churches and estates.^d "Hence it is," says Dugdale, "as I guess, that this Robert Marmion and his wife are by the learned Leland accounted to have been founders thereof; in which repute I shall leave them, forasmuch as it also appears^e that they gave the town of Pollesworth totally thereto, with their whole demesne in Waverton; all which were confirmed by King Stephen."

In the supposition that Egbert was the founder, the nunnery of Pollesworth would rank as the oldest religious house in Warwickshire.

The following is Sir William Dugdale's account of the subsequent endowment of this monastery.

"I shall now descend to such other benefactors as these nuns had; the next and chiefest whereof was one

Walter de Hastings, who gave Oldbury unto them^f (it being a cell to this monastery). After which, they had, by Robert Marmion, son to the before-specified Robert and Milicent, the church of Queinton in Gloucestershire^g (which in 12 Ric. II. they procured to be appropriate to them).^h As also the mill at Kingsburie, called Hemlingford Mill, with certain meadow-ground and other lands, by Robert Fitzwalter and Amabil his wife, one of the coheirs unto Osbert de Arden:ⁱ and moreover, a mill ad Hurley, given by Alice, sister to the said Amabil, then wife of Simon de Harecurt:^k both which were confirmed by Raphe de Bracebrigge, afterwards lord of that manor. In Draiton, in com. Leic. they had a good proportion of land given by Picot Archer^l in H. II. time, and confirmed by Robert then earl of Leicester;^m with a further augmentation by William de Trumpinton.ⁿ In Burdingburie, in Warwickshire, certain lands by Edelina, sister to Robert Boteler of Ingleby, for the soul's health of Walter de Somerville her husband.^o The church of Barwell, in Leicestershire, by Erneburga, the mother of William de Hastings:^p the church of Ansley, in Warwickshire, by William the son of Robert de Hardreshull:^q certain lands in Bromcote by William Fitz-Walkeline of Bromcote,^r which were confirmed by Robert his son and heir, in consideration that these nuns allowed him to have a chantry in his chapel at Bromcote; whereunto Robert de Grendon, in 32 Edw. I. added a yard-land and certain messuages lying in the same village.^s

"All those lands called Coppenhull, near Shutter-ton, given by William Burdet;^t which Hugh, his son, confirmed temp. Hen. II. A yard-land in Sirescote by Roger the son of Walter de Sumervile.^u Certain lands in Snarkeston, com. Leic. which William de Appilby gave,^x together with his body to sepulture in this monastery, and which were confirmed by William de Charnells and Clementia his wife.^y The mill of Freseley, and a proportion of land there, by Robert de Kaily;^z with addition of more by Sir Jordan de Whitacre knight, and William Savage,^a which William gave also certain lands in Dodenhale, as also all the ground he had in Povele-wood, where the chapel above St. Edith's well was built.^b In Bromcote they had a yearly rent of xx^s. given to them by Eustace de Mortein, for the health of his soul, and the soul of Hillaria his wife; upon condition that if they did enjoy those lands in Shotswell whereof he made them a grant, that then they should not challenge this annuity.^a From Raphe Lord Basset of Drayton, they had an annual rent of a mark of silver, for the enlarging of their diet upon the day of St. John the Baptist, in honour of that festival.^b In Norton (now Hoggs Norton) a carucate of land given by Robert de Gresele,^c and a yard-land by Geoffrey de Greseley, with certain rents, as also the homage and services of sundry persons:^d and in Harlaston the rent of v^s. yearly, given by William de Vernun, for the maintenance of a lamp to burn every night in the chapter-house here at Polesworth.^e

"The chapel of Hoo, with a certain proportion of land thereto belonging, and set forth by metes and bounds, given by Robert de Grendon lord of Grendon, in consideration whereof the said nuns were to find two priests to celebrate divine service therein, for the health of his soul, and for the soul of William de Bray his grandfather, and for all the faithful deceased.^f In Anstrey they had lands given to them by Hugh de Hatton.^g In Nether Whitacre a yard-land by Robert Marmion lord of that manor.^h In Glascote, a good proportion by William le Franceis.ⁱ In Sutton, by Thomas de Overton.^k In Pakinton by Cicely de Limsie, and Robert de Sumervile.^l In Durand's Thorpe by Geoffrey de Bec.^m In Appilby, by Margaret Banaster.ⁿ In Suarkeston by Robert de Motun.^o The church of Eiton (scil. Church Eiton in com. Staff.) given by Robert de Brienton, heir to Edelina, by the consent of Eve his wife.^p A rent of two marks per annum issuing out of Coventry given by Ranulph earl of Chester.^q Five shillings rent per annum in Shukborough by Isabel de Sumervile.^r A mesuage with a yard-land and a cottage, lying in Whichnovre, by Robert de Sumervile.^s In Badsley a mesuage with half a yard-land given to the chapel there (belonging to those nuns) by Richard de Herthull.^t The mill at Swebston by William de Charnells:^u and of later time, six mesuages, lx. acres of land, and three acres of meadow, lying in Polesworth, Dodenhale, and Bromcote, given by Richard de Dodenhale merchant of Coventry.^x But sundry other petty parcels, in several other places, for brevity's sake I omit.^y

"And that there might be nothing wanting to them, as well for their conveniencies as necessities, they obtained a special Charter from King Henry III.^z for a weekly market here at Polesworth, upon the Thursday, and a fair once every year, to last for three days, beginning on the eve of St. Margaret (scil. 13 kal. Julii) with immunity for themselves, their servants and tenants, from attendance at the county or hundred-courts;^a as also the sheriff's turn, with power to hold a court-leet for all their tenants owing suit to the court at Polesworth; and other privileges.^b

"All which lands, rents, &c. before specified, by the Survey made in 26 Hen. VIII. were valued at 109*l*. 6*s*. 8*d*.^c but of which 26*s*. 8*d*. yearly, being deducted for almes given to the poor, on Maunday Thursday, at the washing of their feet; and 26*s*. per annum for three bushels of rye at 6*d*. a bushel, made into bread, and distributed weekly, throughout the year, to poor people at the gate of the monastery; and 30*s*. per annum for the fee of Sir John Willoughby knight, then high steward thereof; and several other constant payments, viz. of rents, wages, and pensions, which altogether amounted to 21*l*. 10*s*. 3*d*. left the clear yearly value, as the commissioners at that time certified, no more than 87*l*. 16*s*. 3*d*. So that being under 200*l*. it was by the statute of 27 Hen. VIII. then liable to dissolution, yet for some respects it was permitted to stand till the general destruction of all the great Houses in 30 Hen. VIII. at which time the nuns here being, subscribed an Instrument, dated ult. Jan. 30 Hen. VIII. whereunto their conventual seal was affixed,^d by which they surrendered their monastery.

The delay in the surrender will probably be best accounted for by the following letter, addressed, in 1537, by the king's commissioners to Lord Cromwell. The original is still preserved among the Cottonian manuscripts in the British Museum.^e

"After oure dueties of humble recommendacon unto youre good lordship hade, it may please the same to be advertysed that we have surveyed the monasterie or nonnery of Pollesworth in the countye of Warwik, wherein ys an abbas namyd dame Alice Fitzherbert, of the age of lx. yeres, a very sadde, discrete, and relygyous woman, and hath byn heed and governor their xxvij yeres; and in the same howse vnder her rule ar xij. vertuous and religyous nonnes and of good conversacon, as far as we can here or perceyve, as well by our examinacons as by the open fame and report of all the countrey; and never one of the nonnes that will leyve nor forsake their habite and relygyon. Wherefore in our opynions, yf it myght so stande with your lordships pleasure, ye mought doo a right good and meryetoryous dede to be a medyator to the kings highnes for the said house to stande and remayn unsuppressed. For, as we thinke, ye shall not speke in the preferment of a better Nonnery nor of better women. And in the towne of Pollesworth ar xliij. tenements and never a plough but one: the resydue be artifycers, laborers, and vitellers, and lyve in effect by the said house: and the repayre and resorte that ys made to the gentylmens childern and studiounts that ther doo lif to the nombre sometyme of xxx^{ti}. and sometyme xl^{ti}. and moo, that their be right vertuously brought upp. And the Towne and Nonnery standith in a harde soile and barren ground, and to our estymacions, yf the nonnery be suppressed, the towne will shortely after fall to ruine and dekaye, and the people therin to the nombre of vj or vij^{xx}. score persones are nott unlike to preserve your lordshippe in good lif and longe, with encrease of honor. SIR William Dugdale having placed the Instruments relating to in the Account of Pollesworth, in the old Monasticon, it seems unnecessary, as well as deviating from his plan, to make distinct articles of them in the present edition. Speaking of a Roman camp at Oldbury, in the neighbouring parish of Manceter, he says:

"On the south side of this fort, had the nuns of Pollesworth very antiently a Cell, as appeareth by part of a chapel yet standing, which was dedicated to St. Laurence: and if we may credit that old historical manuscript vouched in my discourse of that monastery, it must not be denied but that it was theirs before the Norman Conquest. 'Tis true that in King Henry the First's time Walter de Hastings and Athawis his wife did by their special Charter, in the presence of Roger de Clinton, then bishop of this diocese, grant unto these nuns, Osanna being then the prioress, the site of this Oldburie, and all Stipershull, in fields and woods, down to the midst of the valley on that side Manceter: as also a certain part of the wood lying south-east of Oldburie, and extending to the rivulet which comes from Hardreshull. And moreover all those grounds called Calve-croft, and Birchley, lying betwixt these two ways, sc. Mere-street and Birchley-street, unto Hugh's wood,^y in circumference.^z

"But this I do not account to be any other than in the nature of a confirmation, which was very fit for these nuns to have, considering that notwithstanding the Conqueror by those laws he made in the fourth year of his reign,^a seemed favourable to religious persons, yet by the preamble to those of King Henry the First,^b there is an acknowledgement of manifold oppressions; which had there not been, how expedient it was for them to obtain some good assurance from their new lords, will easily be judged: and that this, though it pass by the words 'dedit et confirmavit,' was no other than a ratification, seems likely to me, both by his declaratory Instrument made thereupon,^c and that of Walcheline de Mancestre, who having the first grant of Mancestre (within the territories whereof this place lieth) from the said Walter de Hastings, in his Charter to the said nuns, which could be no other than for corroboration, hath the words 'concessi et confirmavi,' expressing all the lands, with the bounds as abovesaid.^d

"Other particulars (wherewith I have met) which specially relate to this place, were, briefly these; that the nuns here residing had two yard land in Waverton, given to them by Raphe Boteler of Tamworth with his daughter, whom he there placed to be a votresse: as also that a special Indulgence for release of xv. days penance, was granted, by Robert bishop of Hereford, to all such as should contribute to these nuns, towards their buildings here:^e and lastly, that after much controversy betwixt the nuns of Pollesworth and the parson of Manceter (about the beginning of Edward the First's time) for the right to all oblations made in the chapel of St. Laurence, at this place, and the tithe-corn of two pieces of inclosed ground, one lying on the south part of the house and the other on the north, they grew at length to this conclusion, for themselves and their successors; viz. that the said nuns should totally have the benefit of them; in consideration whereof they were yearly, every Michaelmas day, to bring to the church of Manceter three pounds of wax, and there, before noon, deliver the same to the parson for the time being, upon the high altar. Provided nevertheless, if it did happen in time to come, that God should work any strange miracles here, by reason whereof there might be a more than ordinary confluence of people to this chapel, and so consequently a multitude of offerings, that then all such extraordinary offerings to be divided equally betwixt the said nuns and the parson: and also provided that the priest so celebrating divine service here, should not admit any of the parishioners of Manceter thither, on Sundays or holy-days, either to the sacrament or divine service, without the express license

Of the Foundation of the Nunnery of Pollesworth.

[Ex Rotulo pervetusto penes Johannem Ferrers de castro Tamworthense armigerum, an. 1640.]

IN the wolde tyme the londe of Englonde was departyde abowt in many kinges: for one kinges toward the west, that had the name Egbright, that was king of the countyes of Warwyke, Worsyttur, Colchestur, Arforte, Salysbery, Stafford, Darbyshire, Chiesturshire, Lancasturshire.

This Egbright the kinge had on son his eyre that had the name Arnulfe, and a dowhtur that had the name Edith. This Arnulfe the son of the kinge was a lepur and taken with many sore syknysse that hee himselfe might uneth meve: wherefore the kynge his fadur and his lords made ryght greyt sorrow and sowhten meydissons all abowyt, and nothyng aveyled. Bott at the last there came a boschoppe from Hyrelond towards the kings cowrte that spake with the kynge Egbright, and cownsylde him that hee shuld send his son Arnulfe that was taken with soe many sicknysys into Hyrelond to a wolly lady a nune that was the dowgtur of the kinge of Cunoke, and was callyd Modwen, that heylyd all maner of syknysse of folke that to hur came. And the kynge Egbright, did after his consill to send his sone Arnulfe into Hyrelond to sent Modwen that him reseyyd full gladly and hylde him with hur a yeare and more in Hyrelond, and him heylyd by the grace of Gode of all maner of syknysse and send him agyne into Englonde to his fadyr kinge Egbright on the ferist chyld in all the world. And the kinge Egbrygt send to sent Modwen that and she wold come into Englonde to him hee wold gyffe to hure londs and tenements with the wech shee hurselpe myght make an abbey for hur ond hure sisters; and sowne aftur thys sendynge the kynge of Hyrelond and thoyse of Hyrelond fowgton togedur and ich one of them dystryde and sluue odur; soe that the howys of sent Modwen in Hyrelond was bronyd and dystride, and all the country about, for the wych cause sent Modwen toke with hur two of hur sisturs and came into Englonde to kinge Egbryht and fonde Arnulfe that shee hadde helyde the kyngs sone one of the feyryst kneytys of the worlde, and the king Egbryht for the wellenesse that was in sent Modwen betoke to hure his dowgtur Edyth to norych and to kepe and to informe hur aftur the reule of sent Benett, and aftur to veyle his dowgtur of the boschoppe of Chestur, and gaffe to the seyde sent Modwen a dwellynge place in the forest of Ardurne, that was callyd Trensale, there where sent Edyth and sent Lyne and sent Osythe were dwellyng togedur, ledinge wolly live, and sone aftur sent Modwen send to the kynge Egbrygt by Arnulfe his sone that he wold come at the leyst every ere on tyme for them to vesyt, and that hee wold giffe to his dowgtur Edythe londes and tenements and a dwelling place worwythe sche and hur sisters might be susteyned God to serve; for many dowgters of good folke were veyled in her company, and they had not worwyth they might bee susteyned. Wherefore the kynge Egbrygt made for to make a dwellyng place not far from Trensale there where sent Modwyn dwelled undyr a revar that was callyd Ancur upon a depness of watur that was callyd Poll and Worth, that is a worde of wold English that is as much to say as wonyng: so that of this Poll and Worth was callyd Pollysworth: and there the kynge foundyt an abbey in the honor of our Lady, and gaffe to the seid sent Edyth his dowhtur and to hur systers certyn londys and tenements for them to susteyne at all deyes and so werin in the wold tyme and yet byn callyd in a booke that is callyd Domisdey. There were all the wolde townes of Englonde byn namyd, soe as the abbey of Pollysworth with the apurtenauns namyd the lond of seynt Edyth without odyr thinge there namyd. Then made the kynge Egbrygt to make his said dowhtur abbys of Pollysworth, and from that tyme the seyde sent Edyth unto the conquest of Englonde of William Bastorde fro abbys to abbys were the possessions of ther howys holden fre and pure and perpetuall all deyes to them to holde.

the kynge of Englonde and the greatest party of the folke of this lond, so made hee to seyt a parlement at London, and ordeyned there pees to make in his londe: and to mayntene that pees, he gaffe diverse londs and tenements to the folke that him served; among the which there were two knyghts swarne bredur, to the weche the kinge gave, that is to wytt, to Sir Robert Marmyon the castyll of Tomworth and the forren londys without, and the town of Tomworth that was in the tyme of the conquest a wolrich at the watur wend; and soe hee steide in the grace of the kynge that hee him granted the towne of Tomworth and all the home that is called Wyggynton-home the terme of his live. And for that that the aforeseyde abbey of Pollesworth was within the pursute of the londys that the kyng him had gyffyn, so put out the seyde Sir Robarte and schasyd away the abbys Oseyth and all the ladyes of the howys of Pollesworth out of theyre abbey, so that the seyde abbys and hur nunns the went unto ther cell of Woldbyry and dwellyd there well nigh a yere. And the tothyr swarne brodyr of Sir Robert Marmyon was callyd monsieur Galtere of Somervile, to whom the kinge gave Wychynore and Barton with apurtenauns, so that hit hapannyd within a yere aftur that the seyde Sir Robert Marmyon made a greyte gedyringe at his castill of Tomworth of yourlys and barons, and made to send for his swarne brodyr monsieur Galtere of Somervile that he schulde come to him, and when the dey of the fest was passyd, and ichon went to theire reyst, and the Lord Marmion was leyd in slepyng: so there came byfore him that him was avysed a nunne with a croyse in hur honde and seyde to hyme, yelde to me and to my sisturs my londys and my tenements, the wech the King Egbricht my fadyr me gaffe, or you shall have an evill ende, soe schall you goe into hell. And for that you ne schuld this thinge forgeytt; the seyde lady him smotte undyr the side with the poynt of hur croyse, so vanished away, and the seyde Robert cryde with a right feyrefull cry, and continually cryde as a woyde man unto they lordys that arboryd en his castyll and his swarne brodyr of Somervyle came unto him, and hee seyde to them the aventure that was befallen to him by slepyng, and they foundon his shetys bloody of the syde of him that was woundyt be the croyse, as if hee had byn at a mortall batyll, for the wiche wonde he might have no rest. Warfore they made him to be confessyd of a pryst and sethyn to avow to restore to seynt Edith and bringe ageyne to the seyde ladyes what that he had of them takynne and borne away. And when hee had makyn the avow his pennys seyssed, and they made him to lye in a new beyde, and he slepyd anon, and when hee wakinnyde he feyld no manner of grevans. And the wonde that hee had in his side of the croyse of sent Edyth was all woll without blemych, for why the seyde Sir Robert Marmyon and all the odyr greyte lordys that were at that gedyryng leght upon their horses on the morrow betyme, and soe whent they unto the cell of Woldbyrre and broght agyn the abbys Oseyth and hur sisturs unto theire abbey of Pollesworth and restowryd unto them there londys and tenements that he had of them unto the leyst alpurth of godys that he had takyn from them, and preyd them of pardon and absolution: and moreover he preyed them that hee and his sworne brodyr of Somervyle myght be bredur and myntenars of there howys from that dey furth, and that hee and his heyrys might be byrreyd there, and his brodyr of Somervile and his heyrys, for why Sir Robert Marmyon chayse his bereyng place for him and his heyrys in the chapitur of Pollesworth, and monsieur Galtere of Somervile his berryng for him and his heyrys in the clowstur, soe that the Marmyons and the Somervyles have theire bereynges before namyd, for there frendys byn byrreyde in the quere, and in the chappyll of Our Lady and so indured Sir Robert Marmyon and Somervyle as avowes of the howys all the tyme of the lyve of William the Bastarde. Bot aftur the deth of William the Bastard, William his sone that was kinge, after that he was cronyd kynge soe hylde hee a parlement at London and chalynchyd dyverse of his barons there foundations, and there avowes of all the howson in Englonde of relygion there were they had don croyses, ne that the seyde howson might not be put from the crone. Then hee preyde to his lordys that his crone might be restoryd of that that was wrongfully takynn away in the tyme of his fadyr William the Bastard, and grantyd was by the lordys then to the seyde Kynge William and to his heyrys that all the howson of religion there where the had don croyssys belongyd to the kynge and to his heyrys as avowes of the seyde howys, and that the seide kinge and his heyris schulde have the avoydons and the vantagysis if hit were without a pleyt unto the pleyt were reseyyd of the kinge. And soe in thys manner was the Lord Marmyon put fro the foundation and the avoery of the howys of Pollesworth, and all the grettyst lordys of the lond in the same maner from there avoreys there where the haddyn croyses: but that time there was nothyng spokyn of the croyses of whyte monkys for that that there was not at that tyme in this lond bot few howson of that religion, and never the wodyr hytt was foundon that the were not abbotts perpetuall, bot at the will of there covynt resonabull. And for that this law and custome is not in the croyssys of whyte monkys all be they of the foundation of the kinge himselfe or of odyr lordys, nothyng ne have they to doe, ne to take away any thinge in the tyme when the whyte abbotts dyne or beyng put done. And in the same maner it is in the croyssys of whyte chanons that the kinge ne non odyr lorde hath nothyng with them to medyll in the tyme of the avoydons of the abbot of that seyde releygion.

Benedictine Abbey of St. Werburgh,

SINCE MADE THE

Cathedral of Chester.

ISHOP Tanner, in his Notitia Monastica, speaking of Chester, says, "Though this city is deservedly famous on account of its antiquity, being unquestionably a colony of the Romans and the station of one of their legions,^a yet the building of a cathedral church here to the honour of St. Peter and St. Paul, in the time of King Lucius,^b must be looked upon as a fiction of later writers.

"Of not much better authority is the tradition concerning Wulphere (who was the first Christian king of Mercia) founding here, about the year 670, a Nunnery for his daughter Werburgh,^c and other virgins disposed to lead monastic lives.

"It is more certain, that, before the end of the seventh century,^d an episcopal see for part of the Mercian dominions was placed in this city. This was sometime under different, but, for the most part, under the same bishops with Lichfield, and to that at length was united; but, after the Conquest, Bishop Peter and his successor Robert de Limesy^e removing wholly from Lichfield, fixed their residence for almost thirty years here at Chester in St. John's church, where Bishop Peter was buried, till A.D. 1102, when Bishop Robert, taking greater liking to the rich monastery of Coventry, made that one of his cathedrals, and left Chester. Though afterward, several of the bishops of Lichfield and Coventry wrote themselves, and are styled by others, bishops of Chester.^f

"In this city," Bishop Tanner continues, "there was pretty early in the Saxon times, a religious House, probably a Nunnery,^g and dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul,^h whither, as to a place of safety, the remains of St. Werburgh were brought from Heanburgh, A.D. 875.ⁱ But this monastery was ruined by the wars or injury of time, and in the reign of King Ethelstan re-edified for secular Canons^k by the noble Elfreda countess of Mercia,^l and afterwards it was more amply endowed by the munificence of King Edmund,^m King Edgar,ⁿ Earl Leofric,^o and other benefactors, in honour of the above-mentioned royal virgin St. Werburgh."^p

All authorities, says Mr. Ormerod, agree that in the reign of King Athelstan, a monastery of secular Canons was established here in honour of St. Werburgh and St. Oswald; and the Chronicle of the House states^q that, in 1057, Leofric earl of Chester (as he is styled) repaired the buildings of the convent, and bestowed upon it additional privileges.^r

The canons of St. Werburgh, at the time of making the Domesday Survey, held thirteen houses free from tax of any kind in Chester, one appropriated to the warden of the church, the rest belonging to the canons. Mr. Ormerod thinks this entry indicates the precise number of which the ecclesiastical body consisted. In ⁿ "The spurious foundation Charter," Bishop Tanner adds, in a Note, "printed in the Monasticon, vol. i. p. 200," [See Num. II.] "led me (and Mr. Willis, and the editor of the Magna Britannia Antiqua et Nova, who followed me) into a great mistake about the restoration of this church by King Edgar to the honour of St. Werburgh, several years before the translation of her bones hither, or that king was born."

In truth, however, the ancient copy of this Charter preserved in the Harleian manuscript 1965 has the date of 958, not of 858, as printed by Dugdale. The readings of the Harleian copy, also, inserted in the margin of the present edition, render the text of the Charter more intelligible. King Edgar's endowment is stated to have consisted of the lands of seventeen "manentes" in Hodeshlid, Ceofanlea, Huntingdon, Hupton, Easton, and Barve. It is singular that the copy of Edgar's Charter, preserved among Randle Holmes' manuscripts, Harl. MS. 2060, fol. 66, should also have the date of 858.

^p William of Malmesbury makes St. Werburgh to have been a nun, or abbess, at Chester; but Capgrave and all other historians and writers of her life are silent in this particular, though they specify other places of her abode, viz. Ely, Wedon, and Trikingham, where she died, and Heanbury, where she was buried; from which last place, (as has been already noticed) almost two hundred years after, her reliques were translated to Chester. *Tann. Dudestan hundred they held two hides in Saltone, three in Cavelea, three in Hunditone, three in Bocstone, and half a hide in Pulford; in Riseton hundred, one hide at Etingehalle; in Wilaveston hundred, a hide and two parts of another hide in Wivevrene, one hide in Crostone, one at Wisdelea, one at Sudtone, one at Salhare, one at Sotowiche, a third of two hides at Nestone, and half a hide at Rabie; in Roelav hundred, one hide at Trosford, and three at Inise; in Tunendune hundred, one hide at Midestune, and one at Clistune; in Exestan hundred, half a hide at Odeslei; at Atiscros hundred, two parts of a hide in Wepre, and a virgate of land at Leche: making a total of twenty-five hides and a half, two parts of a hide in two distinct places, and a third of two hides, as has been already mentioned, at Nestone; all of which are called "hidæ geldantes," as if the returns were of such of the canons' lands only as paid tax. The annual value of the property appears to have been much diminished at the time of forming the Survey. In Edward the Confessor's time the total amount had been 14*l.* 19*s.* which, at the time of the Survey, was reduced to 13*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.* although three places are mentioned as yielding rent in the time of King William which had been waste in the time of the Confessor. The two parts of a hide in Wepre, and the virgate at Leche, have no value specified.^a

Among the inferior tenantry upon the canons' lands, at Crostone and Clistune, we find radmen. These were the same with the radchenistri mentioned in some other counties of Domesday. Their principal duty, and whence they were supposed to derive their name, was the accompanying their lord from one manor to another on horseback, in order to protect his person when riding about the country. So Bracton, lib. ii. c. 35, n. 6. "Discuntur radknights, qui debent equitare cum domino suo de manerio in manerium, vel cum domini uxore."^b Bovarii, neat-herds, occur upon the canons' lands under Midestune and Clistune; and Ancilla, a female of servile condition, under Trosford. The words "navicula et rete," under Cavelea and Hunditone, imply fisheries upon two of their manors.

From an entry under Earl Hugh's lands, in Domesday, it should seem as if the canons of St. Werburgh suffered somewhat in their property after the arrival of the Normans. Fol. 264. "Ipse comes tenet STANEL.—Ibi i. hida geld." "De hac terra quinta acra fuit et esse debet in ecclesia S. Wareburg. teste comitatu. Canonici calumpniantur quia injuste perdunt." And again, fol. 864 b, under BURWARDESLEI, among the lands held of Earl Hugh by Rob. fil. Hugonis. "Ibi iii. hidæ." "De hac terra i. hida fuit ablata ab æcclesia S. Warburgæ. Hanc vendiderunt præpositi comitum Edwini et Morcar cuidam Ravechil."

In the year 1093, at the instigation of Anselm, afterwards archbishop of Canterbury, Hugh Lupus earl of Chester expelled the secular canons from St. Werburgh's church, and established in it an Abbat and convent of Benedictine monks from Bec in Normandy. Earl Hugh's Charter of foundation, in which his countess Ermentruda joined, is given in the Appendix of Instruments.^c Anselm, who was at that time abbat of Bec, recommended his own chaplain,

RICHARD, to Earl Hugh, as a fit person to be the superior of the monastery: and he was accordingly appointed the first abbat.^d

It is singular that Earl Hugh's Charter, in specifying the confirmation of the former endowment of the monastery, includes the lands at Stanei and Burwardeslei, which had been usurped—"terciam partem de Stanea—et tertiam partem de Berewardeslei." He added to the monastic property in Chester the Northgate street, from the gate to the church; he also gave a mill-site near the bridge; two manors in Anglesi, one in Ros, and one in Wirhale called Erbery; he also gave ten bovates in Lindsei, with the reversion of Weston in Derbyshire. He gave the tithe of the manor of Weston, and the church of Eston, with two carucates of land, and the tithe not only of corn, but of every titheable article in his manors of Etthon, Frodesham, Weweresham, Leche, Roceestre, Haurdine, Coleshul, Bissopestred, Uppetune, Campeden, and Esteham; the tithe of the fisheries of Frodesham, Rodelent, Angleshei, and Etthone, with the tithe of all fish taken in the river Dee, and the liberty of having a boat upon that river free from any payment of custom. To these grants he added the church and tithes of Deneford, with liberty to each of his principal barons to give land, to the value of a hundred shillings, to the abbey; and to his other tenants to give, each, as much as they were able or willing to bestow: and further, that each of his barons and knights might bequeath their bodies to sepulture in the church, giving to the monastery the third part of their substance; which privilege he also allowed to his burgesses and freemen.

Of Earl Hugh's barons, or tenants in capite, William Malbanc gave Witeby, the third part of Wepre, the church and tithe of Tattenhale, a salt-work in Wich, two bovates of land, and the tithe of Salchale, Claiton, and Yraduc; Robert Fitz Hugh gave the chapel of Crinstentune, with the land belonging to it, a field at Cryn, a salt-work at Fulewich, two manses in Chester, and a small quantity of land in Botechetunestan; Hugh and Ralph Fitz Norman gave all their land in Lostoch, the church of Cotintune, with the tithe of that village, and also of Lay; Richard de Vernon gave the tithe of Estone and Pichtone; Richard de Rullos gave the church and tithes of Wavertone, Hettone, and Clotone, with the mill of Clotone; Billeheld, the wife of Baldric, gave Pecfortune; Ralph the huntsman gave three carucates in Brochetune; Hugh de Mara gave Reddeclive. Earl Hugh, moreover, gave the tithe of Calders, which grant Robert Fitz Serlo confirmed when the lordship was given to him: he also gave the tithes of Storton and Gravesbiri, which Nigel de Burceio confirmed, adding, of his own gift, eight bovates in Gravesbiri. Ralph the son of Ermiwin gave eight bovates in Wudechurche, with the tithes of Berleston in Wirhale, and of Werveleston in Wischesfeld, as also of all his mares. Robert de Fremouz gave Fideluestan. Walcheline, nephew of Walter de Vernon, gave certain lands in Nesse, the whole of the tithes of Preston in Levedesham, and the third part of his and his wife's goods. Seward gave the chapel of Bevintone, with four bovates, and the tithe of the manor; the tithes of Bromhale, Walei, Maynes, Weston, and Willne; and after the death of himself and his wife, the third part of their substance in Cheshire and at Maynes. Gilbert de Venables gave the church of Estburi, with a moiety of the wood and plain and other appurtenances at Neobold. Geoffrey de Sartes gave the tithe of Withtricastun. Richard de Mesnilwaren gave the tithes of every thing titheable in Blachanot. Robert Pultrel gave a carucate of land in Masclesfeld. Walter de Vernon gave the tithe of his mares.

Earl Hugh, moreover, gave the monks the privilege of fishing, with one vessel and ten nets, in Anglisi: he also gave them the toll and all the profits of the fair at the feast of St. Werburgh, for three days; ordering that for all forfeitures in the fair the pleas should be held in the court of St. Werburgh, for the benefit of the monks: and that any malefactor coming to the fair should not be attachable while it lasted, provided he was guilty of no new offence.^e

Earl Hugh died on the 6th of the kalends of August, A. D. 1101; having been, three days before, professed a monk of the monastery.^f His body was first buried in the cemetery of the abbey, but was afterwards removed to the chapter-house by Randal Meschines, on which occasion the latter gave the manor of Upton to the monks.^a

Abbat Richard died April 26th, 1117, and was buried in the east angle of the south cloister.^b

WILLIAM, the second abbat of Chester, is stated not to have been elected to the office till the year 1121. Mr. Ormerod supposes the government of the monastery to have been intermediately confided to Robert, the prior of the house, who died in 1120. During this intermediate government, Richard (son of Hugh Lupus), the second earl of Chester after the Conquest, granted his Charter of confirmation, A. D. 1119: adding to the possessions of the monastery, which his father had given, certain lands in North-gate at Chester, with the mill of Beche, and three manses. Earl Richard also confirmed some other donations from his barons, the principal of which were the lordships of Neutone, Gosetre, Lantrene, Cenoctirne, the church and lordship of Norwrdine, Plumley, the church of Haliwell, the church of St. Olave, and the lordship and church of Buttanari: adding the tenth salmon taken at the bridge of the city, a site for a mill below the bridge, and the tithe of his mill above it: allowing the monks to hold their court for pleas and forfeitures, in as full a manner as the earl's; provided that the abbat should not implead any person in matters beyond the jurisdiction of his own court.^c

Earl Richard is said, in the Polychronicon, and by Knighton, to have been only seven years old at his father's death;^d but his signature and cross occur at the end of the foundation Charter of 1093. He was drowned, with the sons of Henry the First, while returning from Harfleur, on the 7th of the kalends of Dec. A. D. 1119. Mr. Ormerod, in a note on Leycester's Prolegomena, says he was unpopular with the monks of Chester. His donations, he adds, were small; and he is said to have threatened to wrest Saughton Grange from the abbat, if he had returned safe from his voyage to Normandy.^e

Randle, or Ranulph, surnamed de Meschines, nephew of Hugh Lupus, had succeeded to the earldom of Chester before abbat William's election. His translation of Earl Hugh's body to the chapter-house of the monastery has been already noticed. His Charter, exclusive of the manor of Upton, contains a confirmation of the church of Dissart, which his brother William de Meschines had given to the monks, a confirmation of the church of Turstaniston, which had been given by Matthew de Ruelent, and of numerous smaller donations by other persons.^f The Polychronicon places his death in 1128. Ranulph, or Randle, his son, succeeded him in the earldom of Chester.

Abbat William died on the 11th of the nones of October, A. D. 1140, and was buried at the head of his predecessor.^g

RALPH, the third abbat of Chester, was elected on the 11th kal. of February following.^h

During his time, the four Charters of Earl Ranulph Gernons, the son of Ranulph de Meschines, appear to have been granted. Sir Peter Leycester places the last of these about the year 1152. The first Charter contains the confirmation of the privilege of holding a fair and market before the abbey gate.ⁱ The second conveys the tithe of the earl's rents in Chester, the Charter having been laid, by his own hand, upon the altar of the church.^k The third Charter confirms all the donations made by former earls of tithes, with the addition of the tithes of all mills belonging to the earldom in Cheshire, and those of the mill of Leec.^l By the fourth Charter, he gave to the church of St. Werburgh, as a satisfaction for evils done by him to it, the manors of Estham and Bruneburgh.^m The death of this earl is placed in 1153.ⁿ

The Charter of Richard and Robert de Rullos, confirming their father's gift of Gravesbi, in Wirhale,^o is probably to be ascribed to this period.

ROBERT FITZ-NIGEL, the fourth abbat, is supposed to have been of the family of the barons of Halton.^p He is said to have been elected on St. Nicholas's day, A. D. 1157, and to have received the benediction at Lichfield.^q He died in the month of February, 1174: on the third of the nones of which month

ROBERT, the fifth abbat, was elected. He received the benediction at Chester, on the feast of St. Agatha.^r This abbat obtained a bull from Pope Clement, confirming the ecclesiastical possessions of the abbey, and granting various privileges.^s He died on the 2d of the kalends of September, 1184: on which the king took the abbey into his hands, and committed the custody of it to Thomas Hupeburne.^t

It was probably in the time of this abbat that Ranulph, or Randal, the third earl of Chester of his name, surnamed Blundevill, granted his Charter of confirmation.^u This Ranulph succeeded his father in the earldom A. D. 1181. He died in 1232.

ROBERT DE HASTINGES, or HASTINGS, the sixth abbat, was appointed to his office by King Henry the Second and Baldwin archbishop of Canterbury in 1186.^x Mr. Ormerod says, "He received the benediction at Canterbury from the hands of Baldwin, whom he had the honour of entertaining as legate, at Chester, in the next year, from St. John's day to the following Sunday." This appointment, however, was opposed by Earl Randal; and, after much and long controversy before Hubert archbishop of Canterbury, Hastings was deposed, upon condition that Geoffrey, who was elected in his room, should pay him an annual pension of twenty marks. Abbat Hastings was buried at the heads of his predecessors, William and Ralph, in the south cloister.^y

GEOFFREY, the seventh abbat, was confirmed on the deposition of Hastings in 1194.^z

Mr. Ormerod says, the situation (from a document contained in the Red Book of the abbey) appears not to have been particularly enviable at this period. The greater part of the church was in ruins, and the rebuilding had proceeded no further than the choir, from want of money. The inroads of the Welsh had deprived the monks of a valuable rectory and two manors, and the inundations of the sea had been equally fatal in

Wirral and Ince. Abbat Geoffrey died May 7th, 1208, and was buried in the chapter-house, on the left hand of the entrance, near the door.^a

HUGH GRYLLE, the eighth abbat, was elected in 1208.^b He occurs as a witness to the marriage covenant of John earl of Chester with Helen daughter of Llewellyn prince of Wales: and many grants to the monastery were made in his time. Mr. Ormerod considers it probable that the repairs of the church in this abbat's time were completed, and the affairs of the monks in a more prosperous state generally, as Earl Randle, the third of the name, grants to this abbat and his convent a permission to extend their buildings in the direction of the north gate. Abbat Grylle died April 21, 1226, and was buried in the chapter-house, under the second arch from the door, on the left hand side, at the feet of Geoffrey.^c

WILLIAM MARMIUN, the ninth abbat, was elected on the Sunday after the feast of St. James, A. D. 1226, and the next day received benediction from the bishop in the church of St. John Chester.^d He died in 1228. His place of interment is stated to have been in the cloister, close to Robert Fitz-Nigell, on the left hand side of him. The name of this abbat, Mr. Ormerod adds, occurs in a very curious document relative to the office of hereditary master-cook of the abbey.^e

WALTER PINCEBECH, the tenth abbat, received the benediction in London, on Michaelmas-day, 1228. He was one of the witnesses to a contract between Randle Blundeville and Roger de Maresey, respecting the lands between the Ribble and the Mersey, A. D. 1232: and held the abbacy till his death in 1240, when he was interred in the chapter-house, at the head of abbat Hugh Grylle. A short time before his death he appropriated the rectory of Church Shotwick to support the increase of the kitchen expenses of the convent, occasioned by adding six monks to the previous number.^f

ROGER FREND, the eleventh abbat, was consecrated at Coventry by Hugh de Pateshul, bishop of that see, on St. Matthew's day, 1240.^g He died in 1249, and was buried in the chapter-house, under the second arch on the right hand of the door. This abbat added the appropriation of the chapel of Wervin to the funds of the kitchen, in consequence of having increased the number of his monks to forty.^h

THOMAS CAPENHURST, who had previously been prior of the house, became the twelfth abbat, upon Frend's death, in 1249. Mr. Ormerod says, he was of the family of the mesne lords of Capenhurst, and had to struggle with a series of powerful enemies of the convent. The first was Roger de Montalt, justiciary of Chester, who endeavoured, by means of the additional power which he enjoyed by his office, to wrest from the abbey restitution of the manors of Lawton and Goosetrey, and the churches of Bruera, Neston, and Codrington, which had been given by his ancestors to the abbey. A portion of these possessions was occupied by an armed force, and the business was only compromised by severe sacrifices on the part of the monks. The resignation of Bretton manor is the only one noticed in the Chronicle of the abbey, but the Chartulary mentions several other losses;ⁱ to which may certainly be added that of Lea in Broxton hundred, of which the Montalts had afterwards possession. The Chronicle does not fail to notice the judgments of Heaven on Roger de Montalt; that his eldest son died within fifteen days after the compromise, and that Roger himself died in want, his burial-place remaining unknown to the common people.^k A similar attempt to recover Astbury was made by Roger Venables in 1259, and, according to the Chronicle, was attended with an equal interposition of Providence, the baron of Kinderton dying the year after. In 1263 another contest arose between the abbat and William la Zuche, justiciary, who occupied the abbey with an armed force, and proceeded to extremities of insult; which occasioned all the churches of Chester to be laid under an interdict. In the next year the gardens and buildings of the abbey in Baggelton were destroyed, to facilitate the strengthening of Chester against a siege, which was apprehended from the barons and the Welshmen. Capenhurst survived this last grievance only one year, and dying 4 kal. May, 1265, was buried at the head of his predecessor, on the right hand of the entrance into the chapter-house.^l

"SIMON DE ALBO MONASTERIO, or WHITCHURCH, who had previously been a monk of this abbey, succeeded as thirteenth abbat, and, if we may judge from the frequent occurrence of his name in the Abbey-Chartulary, was one of the most active heads which this monastery ever had. He was regularly elected by the entire convent on the 15th of the kal. of May, 1265, in the forty-fifth year of his age, and the 22d after his assuming the cowl; Simon de Montfort being then usurper of the earldom of Chester. His admission was opposed by Lucas de Taney, justiciary of Chester, who kept the abbacy open for three weeks, and, taking the revenues into his hands, wasted them by the most scandalous profligacy. Simon de Montfort, however, much to his honour, on hearing the circumstances, admitted the abbat, and directed Lucas de Taney to make ample compensation to the abbey: after which, Roger de Meuland, then bishop of Coventry and Lichfield, confirmed his election at Tachebrook, on Whit-Monday; and Simon de Montfort having invested him with the temporalities at Hereford the Monday following, the new abbat received the benediction from his before-mentioned diocesan, at Tachebrook, on Trinity Sunday. On this same day the partizans of Prince Edward laid siege to Chester castle, and a reverse of fortune speedily taking place, the election of the abbat was declared void by the lawful earl, as having been unratified by himself. The abbat, however, made his peace with Prince Edward at Beeston; and compensation was made to him, at the instance of James de Audley, justiciary, even to the replacing, from the stores in the castle, two casks of wine which had been consumed by the prince's attendants during this deposition.^m

"The struggles between the laity and the clergy, which are particularly observable in the documents of Vale Royal and this monastery about this period, and had so peculiarly disquieted the abbacy of Thomas de Capenhurst, were continued in that of his successor. Philip Burnel, and his wife Isabella, baroness of Malpas, attempted to recover the manors of Saighton, Huntington, Cheveley, and Boughton, a domain as desirable to the abbey from its richness as its contiguity to Chester. After a protracted contest, the claimants released their right to abbat Simon in the king's court at Westminster in 1281, in the royal presence, but the monks purchased the compliance by a bond for the payment of 200*l.* sterling. The Chartulary states, that the influence of Robert Burnel, bishop of Bath and Wells, and uncle to the claimant, was corruptly used in extorting this bond: payment was, however, never made, for the abbat had

^h Hist. Chesh. ut supr. Mr. Ormerod says, in a Note, "If this increase was equal to the preceding one, the monks in the time of William Marmion could have been only twenty-eight. Yet the master-cook held his place as an honorary office, was allied to considerable families, held lands in several manors by this tenure, and had kitchen perquisites worth a regular recovery in the Portmote Court. These circumstances can only be accounted for by supposing an immense number of dependants, and the most splendid and constant hospitality."

shortly afterwards the address to procure a release, on stipulating for the maintenance of two chaplains to pray for the soul of the said Philip Burnel for ever.^a

"Among the following donations by the family of Burnel, was the grant of a fountain at Christleton, which was, doubtless, of high importance. A cistern, twenty feet square, was made at Christleton, and another formed within the cloisters, and a communication established by pipes, which a patent from Edw. I. enabled the monks to carry through all intervening lands, permitting even the city walls to be taken down for the purpose.^b It is observable that a forester of Delamere, Randle de Merton, whose estate was trespassed on in consequence of this order, ventured on cutting off the pipes which the abbat had laid, for which he was ordered to make reparation by a royal mandate, 13 Edw. I.^c

"This abbat died April 24, 1289, aged 69, and was buried in the chapter-house, on the south side, under a marble stone, within an arch supported by six marble pillars.

"During this abbacy, the monastery, or a considerable portion thereof, was rebuilt, as appears by precepts directed to Reginald de Grey, 12 Edw. I. to allow venison from the forests of Delamere and Wirral for the support of the monks then occupied 'on the great work of the building of the church.' Abbat Simon also appropriated a large share of the revenues of the abbey to the several uses of the infirmary, the kitchen, the refectory, and the distribution of alms, as specified in the Chartulary."^d

After the death of Simon de Whitechurch, the king retained the abbey in his hands two years.^e

THOMAS DE BURCHELES, or BYRCHE-HYLLES, was the fourteenth abbat. He had been chaplain to his predecessor. He succeeded in the month of March, 1291.^f The temporalities appear to have been delivered to him on March the 18th. He died in 1323, and was buried on the south side of the choir, above the bishop's throne, nearly in the line of the pillars. On his grave-stone was a brass plate, with his effigies; and in this spot his body was found, in almost complete preservation, on opening a grave for the remains of Dean Smith, in 1787.^g It was in the time of this abbat that the agreement with the mayor and citizens of Chester was made, respecting the annual fair before the abbey gate.^h

WILLIAM DE BEBINGTON, who had previously been prior of the monastery, was elected the fifteenth abbat Feb. 5th, 1324. In 1345 he obtained the mitre for himself and his successors, and, in the following year, an exemption from the bishop's visitation. He died Nov. 20th, 1349, and was buried on the right side of his predecessors.ⁱ

elected in 1349. In 1359 he stated the privileges of his abbey in a plea of Quo warranto, of which a copy is given by Mr. Ormerod among the documents subjoined to his Account of the Abbey of St. Werburgh, transcribed from the original in the exchequer of the palatinate.^k

In 1362, about the feast of the Annunciation, the abbat of St. Alban's, provincial president of the Benedictines, the prior of Coventry, and the sub-prior of St. Alban's, visited Chester abbey as commissioners deputed by the abbat of Evesham. In consequence of this visitation, Richard de Seynesbury, who (according to the Chronicle) was fearful of a scrutiny into his offences and excessive dilapidations, resigned his abbacy into the hands of the pope, as the abbey, being an exempt foundation, was under the papal protection. An inquiry into his conduct was instituted at Rome, and in the following year Pope Urban admitted the abbat's resignation, and conferred the office on his successor. This abbat is stated to have died in Lombardy.^l

THOMAS DE NEWPORT, the seventeenth abbat, received the benediction in the papal court on the feast of the Annunciation, and was installed at Chester on the day of St. Remigius following, A. D. 1363. This abbat died at his house of Little Sutton in Wirral June 1st, 1385, and was interred in the chapter-house, within the inner door, with his effigy in brass upon the stone.^m

WILLIAM DE MERSHTON, or MERSTON, a monk of the convent, was elected the eighteenth abbat July 30th, 1385. He died on the 13th of January following, and was buried without the choir, on the right of William de Bebington, in the south aisle.ⁿ The name of this abbat, as well as that of his successor, was unknown to Willis.

HENRY DE SUTTON was the next and nineteenth abbat. The king's consent was given to his election Feb. 28th, 1386.^o He occurs in 1410, in the pleas of the abbey, holden that year over the monastery gate, before Nicholas Fare, the abbat's seneschal. This abbat was, for a time, justice of Chester; and, in 1399, had licence to fortify his three principal manor houses at Little Sutton, Saighton, and Ince. He died May 8th, 1413.^p and was buried in the broad aisle, close to the north side of the south pillar, next to the entrance into the choir, before a painting formerly called the Piety of St. Mary.^q

THOMAS YERDESLEY, or ERDELEY, the twentieth abbat, had the king's assent to his election Sept. 18th, 1413.^r He occurs in several portmote pleadings of the 7th Hen. Vth. and is mentioned also several times in the reign of Hen. VIth. He was one of the justices in commission to hold assizes for the county; and, dying in 1434, was buried under a marble stone on the north side of the choir, above the shrine of St. Werburgh.^s

JOHN SALGHALL, the twenty-first abbat, received

^c Red Book of St. Werburgh, Harl. MS. 2071, fol. 75. This, Mr. Ormerod adds, is not the only dealing which this active abbat had with the foresters of Delamere. In the 55th of Hen. III. he was presented for an unlawful chase on the moors of Onston, and taking two of the earl's deer.

^d Ormerod, Hist. Chesh. vol. i. pp. 214, 215. It was in the early part of abbat Whitechurch's time that the convent had a licence to hold a fair in their manor of Bromburg. "Anno 6 Edw. I. m. 18. Rex. concessit abb. et monachis sanctæ Werburgæ Cestr. unum mercatum singulis annis per diem Lunæ in manerio suo de Bromburg in com. et unam feriam ibidem singulis annis viz. in vigil. in die et in crastino sancti Barnabi Apostoli nisi &c." Harl. MS. 2074, fol. 202.

In 1281, abbat Whitechurch having by his own liberality furnished the king, in his expedition to Wales, with men and carriages, the king granted him this patent for his future indemnity, that it should not infringe his charters and privileges for time to come. RICHARD OLDON, or OLDHAM, the twenty-second abbat, had the royal assent June 2d, 1453.^c About twenty years afterwards he was promoted to the bishoprick of the Isle of Man; and dying Oct. 13th, 1485, was buried at Chester abbey: a short time before which he was indicted in the Portmote Court for removing the city boundaries about the North-gate; and, at the same time (21 Edw. IV.), "divers wymen" were indicted, who were the paramours "of the monkes of Chester."^d

SIMON RIPLEY, or DE RIPLEY, was the next and twenty-third abbat. He rebuilt the nave, tower, and south transept of the abbey, and, Mr. Ormerod thinks, commenced the great plan of alterations and improvements which were interrupted by the Reformation. This abbat, also, rebuilt or considerably improved the great manor-house at Saighton, the embattled tower of which is yet remaining. He died at Warwick, Aug. 30th, 1492,^e and was buried in the collegiate church there. On the north side of the north-east large pillar, supporting the central tower of Chester cathedral, was formerly painted the history of the Transfiguration, in which was introduced a figure of this abbat under a canopy, with a book in one hand, the other lifted up in the act of blessing, and the ring upon the fourth finger. An imperfect sketch of the painting is preserved in the Harleian manuscript 2151.^f

JOHN BIRCHENSHAW was appointed the twenty-fourth abbat by the pope Oct. 4th, 1493. He is supposed by Willis to have been a native of Wales, from his name appearing in an inscription on the great bell of Conway church. His attention, like that of his predecessor, was turned to restoring the magnificence of the buildings of the abbey. The beautiful western entrance is his work; and he doubtless intended to have added two western towers to this great entrance, of one of which he laid the foundations in 1508. The hall of Ince manor-house is apparently in the style of this abbat's time; and for the further improvement of Saighton manor-house, which had already been sumptuously restored by his predecessor, he obtained, 6 Hen. VIII., the royal licence to impark a thousand acres in Huntington, Cheveley, and Saighton. At the same time he had a charter of free warren granted in all his lands in Cheshire, not being parcel of the king's forests.^g

In the year 1511, in the mayoralty of Thomas Smith, violent dissensions had arisen between the city and this abbat.^h THOMAS HYPHILE and THOMAS MARSHALL were successively appointed, and acted as abbats

^h The following is the account of the award made between the abbat and the city of Chester, by commissioners appointed for the purpose, in the 1st Hen. VIII. A.D. 1509, as given in one of the volumes of the Holme Collections, Harl. MS. 1989, fol. 454.

"In continewance of tyme many greate dissensions and controversies did arise betweene the abbot and covent of Chester upon the one partie and the maior and citizens of Chester upon th'other partie, concernge the graunts, priviledges, customs, and jurisdictions claymed by either parties for the appeasinge whereof (namelie of such controversies as were in question about the first yeare of the raigne of King Henry the viij.) some speciall and worthie persons by name Sir Charles Booth, Sir William Uvedall, knights, and George Bromley, esquior, three of the kinges commissioners, and Anthony Fitzherbert sarjant at lawe and William Rudell the queenes attorney, were by the said parties indifferently named and chosen to be arbitrators between them. Who upon the hearinge and debatinge of the matters in controversie, did sett downe their decree and award bearing date the vijth. day of August anno primo Henrici octavi.

"The chiefest matters agreed upon in the said award (as in the same may at large appeare) were these that followe.

1. That the aforesaid parties should bee good frends, and from thenceforth should so remaine.

2. That St. Warburge faire or any other fayre court should not thenceforth be kept by the abbot.

3. That the abbot and his successors should at all tymes give such assurance unto the maior for the performance of his award as by counsell learned should be advised.

4. That the maior should give the like assurance unto the said abbot or his successors within three yeares next after the date of the said Award.

5. That the abbot should keepe all other courts within the precincts of the monasterie in manner as formerlie they have beene accustomed.

6. That the abbot nor any monk should be arrested in the precincts of the monasterie for any offence.

7. That the abbots servants or ministers should not be arrested within the precinct of the said monasterie, except it were for treason, murder, felony, or debt.

8. That the abbots servants and ministers should come to answer any plaint or suit entered before the maior or sheriffes of Chester within xxiiij. howres after they shall be sent for by the maior or sheriffs, and in default of their appearance to be attached in the monasterie.

9. That upon any affray committed by any inhabitants in the monasterie, within the citie, the offender, beinge sent for before the maior, he shall be sent unto him. And if he come not within xxiiij. howres, then the offender to be attached in the monasterie.

in his room. After a contest, however, which lasted many years, BIRCHENSHAW was restored, about 1530, and is supposed to have enjoyed his abbacy to the time of his death, which happened about seven years afterwards.^a

In 1516, a commission was issued at Rome to Thomas cardinal of York, to hear and make award between Geoffrey bishop of Lichfield and this abbat, respecting the use of the mitre, crosier, and other pontificals, and the giving the blessing.^b

THOMAS HYPHILE and THOMAS MARSHALL ranking as the twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth abbats,

JOHN CLARKE, who was elected about 1537, is here reckoned as the twenty-seventh. Little more is known of him than that he readily complied with the wishes of the king in surrendering the monastery at the Dissolution: on which account he was suffered to retain the government of the dissolved abbey, under the character of Dean of the new cathedral.^c

At the Dissolution, the yearly revenue of this monastery amounted, according to Dugdale, to 1003*l.* 5*s.* 11*d.*: Speed says, 1073*l.* 17*s.* 7½*d.* Mr. Ormerod, on the authority of an official document, states the clear yearly value to have been 889*l.* 18*s.* He says, the monks had also the patronage of several rich unappropriated rectories. Their lands extended over various parts of Cheshire and other counties, but in Wirral created an overwhelming influence, and extended in an almost unbroken ring round the city of Chester. Many considerable families held lands by the tenure of various offices in the abbey. The hereditary master-cook has been already noticed; the manerial lord of Burwardsley was their champion; and a valuable rectory (Ince) was appropriated to the uses of the almoner. The earl of Derby was seneschal at the time of the Dissolution.^d

By a Charter of one of the earls, of the name of Randle, the abbats were directed at an early period to have their manor-houses fitted up in a state fit to receive the abbat's retinue, and to be the seats of the courts; and, by licence from the bishop of Lichfield, oratories were also established in these manor-houses. Irby, Bromborough, Sutton, and Salughton, appear to have been the principal ones at an early period. The three first were the original seats of the courts held for the Wirral manors, and Salughton occurs in a licence for fortifying by Edward I. noticed in the Chartulary. By a subsequent licence for fortifying, 19 Ric. II. it appears that Sutton, Salughton, and Ince, had then become the principal manerial residences; and these continued such to the Dissolution.^e

The jurisdiction of the abbat's courts is stated at large in the plea to a Quo warranto, already referred to, of the 31st Edw. III. The omission, Mr. Ormerod remarks, of the privilege of outfangtheof, which the abbats of Vale Royal enjoyed, is observable; and it is also remarkable, that during Chester fair, which was originally a right of the abbey and not of the city, the abbat had the exclusive criminal jurisdiction in all cases, excepting trials for murder; and that where capital conviction followed, contrary to the ordinary custom of the city, the criminal was executed on the earl's gallows by the officers of the abbat.^f

The abbey of St. Werburgh was surrendered, with all its lands, Jan. 20th, 31 Hen. VIII. under the convent seal: a valuation being made of the estates.^g Two years after which, in the 33d of Henry the Eighth, the king, by his letters patent, dated at Walden Aug. 4th, 1541, founded within the scite of the dissolved monastery an episcopal see and cathedral church, for a bishop, dean, and six prebendaries. The church was ordered to be thenceforth styled the church of Christ and the blessed Virgin Mary: the king declaring by the same, that the vill of Chester should thenceforth for ever be a city, and that the county and city of Chester should be exempt from the jurisdiction of the bishop of Coventry and Lichfield. By these letters patent the king also translated to, and confirmed as bishop in the said see, John Byrde bishop of Bangor; and annexed to the said bishoprick the archdeaconries of Richmond and Chester, then lately resigned to the king by William Knyght doctor of laws: enumerating among the appurtenances of the archdeaconry of Richmond, the rectory and church of Bolton in Lonsdale in Lancashire, the rectories and churches of Clapham, Easingwold, and Thornton Stuart, in the county of York, and the chapel or chantry of Rastall; with all the tithes, &c. belonging to the said churches: and among the appurtenances of the archdeaconry of Chester, the prebend of Bolton-le-Moors in the cathedral church of Lichfield. A specified portion of the abbey-buildings was also granted as a palace for the bishops of Chester. The subsequent provisions of the letters patent grant to the bishops of Chester the same ecclesiastical authority which other bishops enjoy in their respective sees: place the entire see within the province of Canterbury: and make the bishop a body corporate in himself, with all privileges of suing, &c. Then follow the several nominations of Thomas Clerk as first dean, William Walle first prebendary, Nicholas Bucksye second prebendary, Thomas Newton third prebendary, John Huet fourth prebendary, Thomas Radford fifth prebendary, and Roger Smyth sixth prebendary of the church: which dean and prebendaries were to rule themselves according to a Charter afterwards to be given; they were to be the chapter of the new cathedral, with the same powers as those enjoyed by the chapter of the diocese of Coventry and Lichfield; they were to be a body corporate, with all privileges of suing, a common seal, &c. The letters patent next grant to the chapter the scite and precinct of the dissolved abbey, excepting that part which had been granted to the bishop; further giving them the power of appointing or removing all the inferior officers of the cathedral, reserving to the crown the appointment of the successors of the said dean and prebendaries. The final provision removes the archdeaconries of Richmond and Chester from the dioceses of York, and of Coventry and Lichfield, annexing them to the bishoprick of Chester, and subjecting them to the episcopal jurisdiction of the bishop of that see, reserving the metropolitanical and archiepiscopal prerogative of the archbishop of Canterbury.^h

By a subsequent act of parliament passed in the same year of the king, the see of Chester was placed within the province of York.ⁱ

The Particular of the exchange of temporalities

^f Ibid. At an early period, Mr. Ormerod adds, the abbat used the trial by battle in his court, as appears in the confirmation of Burwardsley by Roger de Hastings to Roger de Cumbrey. (See Hist. Chesh. Burwardsley, Broxton Hundred. p. 392.) The powers of the court, by the Charters of Earls Hugh and Richard, were made equal, within the abbat's jurisdiction, to those of the earl himself; and after the confirmation of this privilege by his successor, Randle I. there is this very remarkable addition, "et ut ego comes Ranulfus dare exemplum posteris, veni ipse propter unum placitum in curiam abbatis, audiens et suscipiens ibi meum judicium, non a meis sed a iudicibus abbatis, ut in omnibus haberet beata Werburga jus suæ dignitatis in perpetuum." Ib.

The form of the oath which was taken by the abbat after his election is preserved in the Harleian MS. 7032, p. 288, ex MS. Cai. Conv. cui titulus Miscel. Collect. Roberti Hare, vol. i. p. 36.

between the bishop and King Henry the Eighth, in 1546, will be found in the Appendix, transcribed from a manuscript in the Harleian library.^a Mr. Ormerod's extract from the patent in the Rolls' Chapel, instead of Sept. 28th, bears the subsequent date of Jan. 8th. 38 Hen. VIII. It has, moreover, the addition of lands in Morley in the county of Derby, and also mentions messuages in Fleshmonger-lane in Chester, and in the parishes of Mancote and Hawarden, together with tenements in Crabwall, Heath House, near Newton, St. Oswald Chester, Podington, Burton, Pulton Lancelyn, and Bebington, none of which occur in the Particular above referred to. In other respects it is full in point of information.

Mr. Ormerod says, "Besides the original dotation of the bishoprick, 33 Hen. VIII. and the exchange of the temporalities, 38 Hen. VIII. there was a grant, 4 & 5 Phil. and Mary, of St. Bees and Cartmel, and of the patronage of the Prebends of Chester, in recompense of the rectory of Wirklington, which had been granted, 38 Hen. VIII. but which had been before granted to Robert Brocklesby and John Dion. In 3d Eliz. another grant of Cartmell and Childwall. In 6 Jac. the like. In 4 Eliz. a pension of 26*l.* 12*s.* 2*d.* from the earl of Chester was confirmed. There are also some minor grants, which do not appear worthy of enumeration."^b

Mr. Ormerod says, "He was the compiler of a valuable work relating to the ecclesiastical history of the diocese, now deposited in the episcopal registry, and usually denominated Bishop Bridgeman's Leger."^c He died during the period of the great rebellion. His son Sir Orlando Bridgeman became lord keeper in 1667.

FRANCIS GASTRELL, D. D., was consecrated April 14th, 1714, in Somerset House chapel. He held a canonry of Christ church Oxford in commendam with his see. Mr. Ormerod informs us, that the MS. Cheshire collections of the Randle Holmes, now in the British Museum, after being rejected by the corporation of Chester, were purchased, through the interference of Bishop Gastrell, by the earl of Oxford, and thus preserved for the public. From these and his episcopal registers, Bishop Gastrell compiled his excellent MS. compendium of documents relating to the benefices of the diocese, entitled "Notitia Cestriensis."^e He died Nov. 24th, 1725.

AFTER the bishoprick of Chester had been founded; out of the residue of the estates belonging to St. Werburgh's abbey, King Henry the Eighth endowed the DEAN and CHAPTER of the Cathedral, by a Charter dated August 5th, 1546. This Charter, which will be found in the Appendix,^a contained an ample provision; but was unfortunately void from the omission of the word "Cestriæ" after "concedimus decano et capitulo ecclesiæ Christi et beatæ Mariæ Virginis;" notwithstanding which omission, the dean and chapter continued to receive the rents for a considerable time, as if the lands had been properly granted.^b

The following is the account of the dispute on this occasion, as given by Mr. Ormerod:

"In the 1st year of Edward VI. Dean Cliffe and two of the prebends were imprisoned in the Fleet, by procurement of Sir Richard Cotton, comptroller of the king's household, and under intimidation granted to him most of their lands for the yearly rent of 603*l.* 17*s.* the old rent being above 700*l.* Sir Richard died seized of these manors and estates Oct. 2d, 3 and 4 Ph. and Mary, leaving George Cotton, Esq. his heir.

MS. 2159, fol. 78; and copies occur of the time of Henry the Eighth, both in Latin and English, in the Harl. MS. 2103.

^c "According to your lordship's letter the 18th of this last month, we have considered of the question and doubt therein mentioned, concerning the dean and chapter of Chester their patent from King Henry the VIII. which we think very meet to be tried by course of the common law, whereupon we shall be ready to show our opinions, for the judgement thereof as cause shall require, when time shall aptly serve to do the same.

And albeit the lands he lying in the county palatine, yet by an action of intrusion, to be brought on her majesty's behalf against some of the occupiers of some parts of those lands, the matter may have trial at Westminster, whereof we have also considered with her majesty's attorney general, for the manner and speedy doing thereof, who is ready and willing to procure the same as shall appertain: trusting that by your lordship's good means, her highness will accept thus much from us this time, and to pardon the setting down of our further opinions,

"This grant was opposed by Walker, the next dean, on the grounds of the insufficiency of the rent, the manifest compulsion, and the act not having been that of the entire body; upon which George Cotton, aware of the badness of his title, granted the greater part of these lands at two years rent to several gentlemen of the county, whose names are given in Elizabeth's confirmation to the fee-farmers. In this dilemma, the right of the lands lost by this flaw being supposed to be vested in the crown, the earl of Leicester applied to the three principal judges for instructions, and received for answer the letter subjoined,^c recommending an action of intrusion as the proper mode of determining the dispute, and declining an extrajudicial opinion. Accordingly, 19 Eliz. an information of intrusion was brought against Sir Hugh Cholmondeley, Sir George Calveley, Richard Hurleston, Esq. and others of the fee-farmers, into the Exchequer at Westminster, whereby the title came in question between her majesty and the fee-farmers. The cause was argued twice in Easter term, 20th Eliz.; and on another day being appointed for Serjeant Gaudge to argue the case on her majesty's behalf, it was put off by the fee-farmers, who were assured by Mr. Egerton that the law was against them.

"The earl of Leicester is next stated, positively, to have been bribed by the fee-farmers with six years rent of the abbey lands. In consequence of this, he obtained a special commission for hearing the cause; and both parties having surrendered their rights into the queen's hands, anno 21 Eliz. an award was made by the earl, in consequence of which the lands were confirmed to the fee-farmers, subject to certain rents issuing therefrom, which continue to be paid to the dean and chapter to the present day,^d and which having necessarily remained stationary, whilst all other landed revenues were increasing, are far from fulfilling the intentions of the royal founder of the see."^e which we do forbear, because the party aggrieved in this case will not be satisfied with an opinion, but object we should vindicate the judgments of the law by unorderly means.

And nevertheless since it appeareth by your lordship her majesty is so gracious unto the estate of the church, if it shall please her highness to make a new grant of the lands unto the dean and chapter, containing the right name of that corporation, in such manner as that, that lacketh, 'Chester,' that, the same, will put them in good security for the maintenance of their house thenceforth, and so we most humbly take our leave,

At the Serjeants Inn this first of December, 1576.

^d "A claim to these lands was also made by Peter Grey and his second son Edward, under a grant of concealed lands made them by the queen. This interest was sold by the Greys to Laurence Bostock, and Launcelot Hitchcock, March 19th, 19 Eliz. whose rights were purchased by some of the fee-farmers to strengthen their title; among these purchasers were Thomas Venables baron of Kinderton, Thomas Wilbraham Esq. Henry Mainwaring of Barnshaw Esq. John Hurleston of Picton Esq. George Beverley of Huntington, and others. The principal fee-farmers who did not purchase were Lady Egerton, relict of Thomas Leigh, of Adlington Esq. Sir Rowland Stanley, Hugh Calveley of Lea Esq. William Glazier Esq. Abstract of the Grant of the Dean and Chapter Lands to the Fee-Farmers.

(Pat. 22 Eliz.)

Elizabeth D.G. &c. grants by letters patent to Sir Geo. Calveley, Kt. George Cotton, Hugh Cholmeley, Thomas Leighe, Henry Maynwaringe, John Nuthall, and Richard Hurleston, Esquires, the manors of Huntington, Sutton in Wirral, Upton, Brombrorow, Irby, Ince, Salgh-ton, Barnshawe, and Fernell, in com. that the shortness of many of the abstracts seems to show that they were not taken to remain in the monastery as copies of the deeds, but rather to serve the abstracts as memorandums on occasion. The MS. in number 2062 is in folio, written in different hands. That which forms 1965 is in the quarto size. Mr. Ormerod has given an elaborate enumeration of the titles of the Charters, as they stand in the manuscript, principally from their rubrics.^a It has been already noticed, that at folio 1 b of this manuscript a copy of King Edgar's Charter is preserved, in a hand of the middle age. The monks appear only to have interested themselves with Hugh Lupus's, and the subsequent Charters to the monastery. They seem to have been indifferent to the preservation of any documents relating to the previous endowment of their church. At the end of the copy of "Sanctorum Prisca," in the manuscript 2062, is a detached Instrument: "Conventio inter dominum Thomam abbatem Cestr. et Ricardum de Wetenhale et Petrum fil. ejus de vasto de Tideliston."

The Harleian manuscript 2148 contains a thin manuscript in folio, on vellum, written by different hands, to which Wanley, in the Catalogue of the Collection, has given the following title: "Apographa Litterarum atque Brevium, una cum Regesto Placitorum forensium ad amplissimam Abbatiam S. Werburgæ Cestrensis, variis temporibus spectantium." At the beginning and end are modern indexes of persons and places mentioned in the manuscript, in the hand-writing of the third Randle Holme.^a

The Harleian manuscript 2071, fol. 24, contains two leaves of a Chartulary of St. Werburgh's abbey, distinct from the Sanctorum Prisca, written in a hand of the fourteenth century. The titles of the Instruments they contain will be found in the Note.^b

Abridged extracts from the Sanctorum Prisca occur in the Harleian manuscript 2060, and a complete transcript in art. 13 of 2071. Scattered in different manuscripts also of the same Collection are a few Instruments and other Records, the titles of the more important of which will be found below.^c

"The CONVENTUAL BUILDINGS," says Mr. Ormerod, "occupied nearly, if not wholly, one fourth of the city, and were bounded by the city walls on the north and east, and (with perhaps some slight exceptions) by the Northgate and Eastgate streets on the remaining sides.^d The principal entrance was from the Northgate street, under the greater Abbey-gate still remaining, which led into a space nearly co-extensive with the present Abbey-square, surrounded on three sides with offices of the convent, and on the fourth by the abbat's house, standing on the scite of the present episcopal palace. In the north-east angle of this square was St. Thomas's chapel, now the dean's house, and in the north-west angle another entrance from the city by the Little Abbey-gate still existing. East of the refectory was another quadrangle nearly co-extensive with the present Little Abbey-court, and probably occupied by the domestics; and south-west of the great church was the chapel of St. Nicholas, perfectly detached from the general mass of buildings. Of this part of the monastery there only now remain fragments of the walls and arches of the chapel of St. Nicholas, worked into the buildings which occupy the scite; the Little Abbey-gate, a detached arch near the Northgate; and the Great Abbey-gate, consisting of a lofty pointed arch, with a postern at the side, both of which are included in a larger obtuse one. The interior of the gateway is vaulted with stone, with ribs, and carved key-stones at the intersections; and the rooms over, now used as the registry, were originally approached by a spiral staircase. On the south side was the porter's lodge, and on the other St. Thomas's Court, to which the tenants of several abbey manors still render suit and service. Before this gate were anciently ranged the booths for the merchants frequenting the abbat's fair, covered with reeds, which the monks were empowered by an especial Charter to gather from Stanlaw marsh; and here also the performers in the Chester mysteries commenced the exhibitions of their pageants."^a South-east of the square of offices to which the gate just mentioned formed the entrance, was the CONVENTUAL CHURCH, now the CATHEDRAL.

^d Among the Holme Collections in the British Museum, Harl. MS. 2073, is a plan of the buildings of the monastery, as they remained a short time after its dissolution, drawn with a pen. The different parts of the church are referred to by the letters of the alphabet, the conventual offices by figures. This plan has been engraved by the Messrs. Lysons in their account of Cheshire in the new Magna Britannia, vol. II. pt. ii. p. 452; in which work, also, p. 574, is an engraved plan of the present remains: and in Mr. Ormerod's Hist. of Chesh. is a plan of the present cathedral, incorporated with one of the existing conventual buildings and the vestiges of such as do not now exist, but had their foundations laid bare by the late Dean Cholmondeley.

It consists of a nave and choir, separated from their respective aisles by clustered columns; a central tower resting on four massive piers; transepts; and a Lady-chapel to the east. An ambulatory passing above the arches not only of the nave, but of the choir and transepts. The western entrance is by a pointed door-way, from which two descents, by steps, lead into the nave. On one side is the bishop's Consistory Court; on the other, an entrance to the bishop's palace. These were intended to have formed the bases of two western towers, and the foundation of them was laid with much ceremony by abbat Birchenshaw in 1508. The south porch of the church is in the style of the same period. The transepts are of very unequal proportions: being uniform neither in size nor appearance. The north transept has an ornamented oak roof, supported by angels holding emblems of the crucifixion. At the south-east angle of this transept is an ancient vestry, in a style of very early Norman architecture. The south transept, which is by far the larger of the two, is used as the parish church of St. Oswald. In the choir opposite to the pulpit is the stone case which formerly surrounded the shrine of St. Werburgh, now shortened, and used as the bishop's throne. It exhibits a rich specimen of Gothic architecture, in the style of the early part of the fourteenth century. Under the east window of the choir is an arch opening to the Lady-chapel.

The Cloisters, situated on the north side of the nave, form a quadrangle of about a hundred and ten feet square. The centre formerly contained a cistern for water, which was brought in pipes from Christleton.^b These cloisters originally consisted of four vaulted walks, of which the south walk is destroyed. In the church wall, in the south walk, are six semicircular arches, resting on short pillars; the three eastern ones have ornamented pillars. These indicate the places of sepulture of the Norman abbats. The west walk opens to the nave by an early Norman arch at the south end; and by another, now closed, it formerly opened to a passage leading to the great square of conventual offices. Another door-way, opposite to the south walk (closed by a pillar placed before it to support the present vaulting), led to an arched passage, forming the abbat's way to the church. Along the rest of this walk extends a kind of crypt, consisting of a double row of circular arches, sprung, with one exception, from short cylindrical columns.^c The north walk contained the chief entrance into the refectory of the convent under a rich semi-circular arch; and at the east end was a door-way leading to the culinary offices and to the stair-case of the dormitory. Along the greater part of the north side ranged the refectory, a noble apartment, ninety-eight feet in length and thirty-four in height, with a roof of oak resting on brackets, which was removed about 1804.

The chapter-house, entered from the east side of the cloister, by a vaulted passage, or vestibule, extends eastward, parallel with the choir of the cathedral. The inner apartment, or chapter-room, is thirty-five feet high, fifty feet long, and twenty-six in breadth; with lancet-headed windows, and a vaulted roof.

The only other remains of the conventual buildings are portions of the abbat's cellars existing in the episcopal palace.

Some circular arches against the north wall of the nave, on the outside, where the south cloister formerly stood; a cellar of the bishop's palace, adjoining the west end of the north aisle of the nave: and the cellar under what was formerly the abbat's hall; are considered by the authors of the new Magna Britannia to be as ancient as the time of Earl Leofric, by whom the church was repaired in the eleventh century.^d

The north aisle of the choir; the chapter-house; and the frater, or ancient refectory of the convent, now changed to a school-room, are referred, by the same authority, to the early part of the thirteenth century. The central tower is said to have been finished in 1210.^e

A very large portion of the rest of the cathedral belongs to the fourteenth century. The western entrance, the upper part of the nave, and the south transept, are supposed to have been the work of abbat Simon Ripley; to whom, also, the choir has been ascribed.

The general style of the cloisters is that of the fifteenth century. From certain circumstances, however, enumerated by Mr. Ormerod, it seems obvious that the present cloisters are only a restoration of an earlier building. This restoration, he adds, is usually ascribed to abbat Ripley; some portions are, however, of the time of Henry VIII.

At the intersection of one of the beams in the oak roof of the north transept are the arms of Wolsey.

Chester cathedral suffered great injury during the civil war, and continued in a very dilapidated state in 1656.^f

Its length from east to west is three hundred and forty-eight feet. The width of the choir and nave is seventy-four feet six inches.

At the time the duke of Monmouth was at Chester, in 1683, the mob forced the doors of the cathedral church, and destroyed most of the painted glass; they also injured the font, pulled down some monuments, attempted to demolish the organ, and committed other outrages.

Leland, in his Itinerary, vol. v. p. 56, speaks of BIRKENHEAD priory, in Cheshire, as subordinate to the abbey of Chester: but Bishop Tanner doubts the fact.^g

^a A beautiful engraving of the abbey-gate of Chester has been prefixed by J. H. Markland, Esq. to two of the "Chester Mysteries: De Deluvio Noe: De Occisione Innocentium," 4to. Lond. 1818; a few copies only of which were printed, for presentations to the members of the Roxburghe club. The engraving also represents the performance of the latter of these Mysteries, with the moveable theatre, as described by Dugdale in the History of Warwickshire.

The series of Mysteries performed at Chester, and usually attributed to Randle, or Ralph Higden, a monk of St. Werburgh's abbey, although not the most numerous, has been considered both as the most ancient and most complete collection of the kind now in existence. The date usually assigned to their composition is the year 1327. Mr. Markland, however, ascribes them to an earlier time and another author. Indeed, he thinks it by no means improbable that in the composition of these plays, two, or even a greater number of monks, might have been concerned. Two or three manuscripts of these interludes are still extant, each containing twenty-four Mysteries, comprehending a representation of the most striking incidents recorded in the Old and New Testament, from the creation of the world to the last judgment.

^c "This building was probably used as a depository for the imported stores of the abbey, of which we may form no mean idea from a Charter from the king of the Isles to the abbat of St. Werburgh, granting ingress and egress to the vessels of the monks of the abbey of St. Werburgh, with sale and purchase of goods toll free, and right of fishery upon his coasts. Carta regis Insularum de navigiis, et mercibus, et navigationibus monasterii. Harl. MS. 1965, fol. 16 a." Ormerod, Hist. Chesh. vol. i. p. 218.

^d The Annales Cestrie, quoted in Bishop Gastrell's Notitia, say "A. D. 1057. Leofricus comes Cestrie reparavit ecclesiam S. Johannis Baptistae ac ecclesiam S. Werburgae infra civitatem situatam, ac privilegiis decoravit."

^e Ormerod, Hist. Chest. vol. i. p. 217, from Stone's MSS.

^f Dean Arderne, by will, dated Oct. 27th, 1688, and proved at Chester, bequeathed (excepting a trifling legacy) "his whole estate to the glory of God and the service of the cathedral church of Chester, more particularly for a small beginning of a public library of books:"—and, "if this doe not take place," for the further use, to keep it as a stock "to defend the rights and privileges of this ecclesiastical corporation," and "to defray the expenses of an act of parliament" for the disposal of a certain lease in such a manner as should be most conducive to the welfare of this cathedral and the public good. When the dean made this will, his own property was very small. The value of the bequest consisted in an unexpected reversion of one sixth part of the Done property, including the sixth turn of Tarperley rectory, which the dean and chapter obtained by subsequent litigation. The particulars are given in the History of Cheshire, under Alvanley, Edisburg Hund. p. 40, and under Utkinton, in the same Hund. pp. 134, 135.

— IN urbe fuit ex antiquo sanctimonialium monasterium: nunc per Hugonem, Cestrensem comitem, monachis repletum. Predicatur ibi Wereburga virgo, filia Wlferii regis Merciorum.

[Cron. anonym. Evesham. Cœnobii, MS. in Biblioth. Bodleiana, fol. 9 b.]

ANNO mxcv. Anselmus, rogatu Hugonis comitis, fundavit monasterium Cestriæ in honorem sanctæ Werburgæ. Monachos de canonicis ibidem inventis tonsoravit, Ricardum capellanum suum abbatem fecit, et in redeundo archiepiscopus Cantuar. consecratus est.

LEOFRICUS reparavit monasterium S. Werburgæ Cestriæ.

Hugo Lupus, filius ducis Britanniae, et nepos Gulielmi magni ex sorore, factus est comes Cestriæ, et postea, vocato Anselmo mutavit collegium S. Werburgæ ubi erant canonici et prebendarii, in collegium monachorum, ubi primus abbas erat Richardus Beccensis monachus per Anselmum designatus.

Sanctæ Werburgæ Prædia et Possessiones, ex Dono Hugonis Comitis Cestren. et aliorum.

[Ex ipso Autographo penes Decanum et Capitulum Ecclesiæ Cathedralis Cestren. an. 1640. Vide etiam Cart. 2 H. v. parte I. m. 26.]

SANCTORUM prisca autoritate patrum, qui in nomine Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti, in sancta ecclesia regiminis gubernacula hactenus tenuerunt, quique suos adjuutores, sanctæque ecclesiæ fundatores, sua nobis industria, suorumque scriptorum longa traditione cognitos reddiderunt, admoneri videmur, ut ea quæ à temporaneis nostris in sanctæ ecclesiæ matris exaltatione facta sunt, præsentibus per nos manifestentur, posterisque dinoscenda nobis scribentibus reserventur.

Nos igitur, majorum imitantes exempla, jam quæ-dam pietatis opera referamus, quæ in Anglica terra gesta sunt à Hugone, Cestrensi comite, anno ab incarnatione Domini millesimo nonagesimo tertio, regnante potentissimo rege Willielmo, atque in archiepiscopatu Cantuariensi pontificante Anselmo, atque in Eboracensi pon-tificante Thoma.

Volumus verò ut religiosi atque fideles Christiani cognoscant, quia idcirco nobis ista describere placuit, ut qui ea relegerint vel audierint, dominum supplicabili affectu pro sanctæ ecclesiæ fundatorum salute implorent, et ut præsentibus ad regna cœlestia tendentes etiam inter ætatis hujus primates quos sequantur inveniant.

Igitur ad honorem et gloriam summæ et individue Trinitatis, atque incomprehensibilis Divinitatis, jam proferamus quæ nos dicere spopondimus: Hugo comes Cestrensis atque Ermentrudis comitissa, devotioni reli-giosè pia mente subditi, piissimæque Dei visitatione inspirati, in quadam ecclesia quæ constructa est in honore sanctæ Werburgæ virginis in civitate Cestriæ, monachos religiosè viventes posuerunt, (concedente rege Willielmo) qui dominum assidue exorarent tam pro utilitate animæ regis Willielmi, et Willielmi patris ejus nobilissimi regis, et Mathildis reginæ matris ejus, fratrum et sororum ejus, atque regis Edwardi, quàm pro animarum suarum salute, et pro animabus patrum, et matrum, et antecessorum, hæredum, parentum, et baronum suorum omniumque Christianorum tam vivorum quàm defunc-torum.

Huic verò ecclesiæ sanctæ Werburgæ, Hugo supradictus comes, et Ermentrudis comitissa, possessiones pri-ores liberas imperpetuum et quietas concesserunt, et de suis augmentaverunt, habitationique monachorum habilem reddiderunt, eamque abbatiam nulli omnino abbatiæ subditam fecerunt. Postea in ea monachos et abbatem, Deo donante, et supradicto rege Willielmo concedente, constituerunt. Hanc etiam et quicquid ad eam pertinet abbati et monachis dederunt: videlicet Ynes, Saltho-

Et quando nos hanc chartam confirmavimus, nullum opus, nullum servicium, nullam consuetudinem, nullam omnino rem præter orationem in terra sanctæ Werburgæ retinimus præter hoc solum, quod si abbas hujus loci superbia inflatus nollet facere rectum vicinis suis, comes constringeret eum ad rectum faciendum, et hoc in curia sanctæ Werburgæ, quia volumus ut sancta Werburga habeat per omnia curiam suam, sicut comes suam.

Et ut hæc omnia essent rata et stabilia imperpetuùm, ego comes Hugo, et mei barones confirmavimus ista omnia coram Anselmo archiepiscopo, non solùm sigillo meo, sed etiam sigillo Dei omnipotentis, id est, signo sanctæ crucis ✠ ita quod singuli nostrum propria manu in testimonium posteris signum in modum crucis facerent ✠. UNIVERSIS matris ecclesiæ filiis, Ranulphus comes Cestriæ salutem. Notum sit vobis pariter me concesssisse quando feci transferri corpus Hugonis comitis avunculi mei à cimiterio in capitulum, ut in die meæ mortis darem simul cum corpore meo ecclesiæ sanctæ Werburgæ Uptunam solutam et quietam ab omni re, ut elemosinam liberam, sicut ego ipse in illa die haberem eam in terris, in hominibus, in planis, in pascuis, in pratis, in placitis, et in omnibus pertinentiis suis, pro anima ipsius Hugonis comitis, et pro salute animæ meæ et animarum omnium parentum meorum. Item quoniam comes Hugo concesserat antea ecclesiæ sanctæ Werburgæ theoloneum et omnes redditus nundinarum trium dierum, id est a nona vigiliarum sanctæ Werburgæ usque ad vesperam sequentis diei post solemnitatem, ego comes Ranulphus illud idem concedo et confirmo, constituens sicut ipse constituerat, ut sive latro sive roberator, sive aliquis malefactor venerit ad solemnitatem habeat firmam pacem dum fuerit in nundinis nisi fortè forisfecerit in illis; et si fortè aliquis forisfecerit in nundinis, omne placitum et forisfactum et justitia à ministris abbatis et à vicecomite civitatis tractabuntur in curia sanctæ Werburgæ virginis; et ut vicecomes intentiùs et fidelius hoc agat, computeter et tallietur ei à meis camerariis in suam firmam quicquid monachi ex hiis omnibus acceperint. Willielmus Meschin frater meus dedit Deo et ecclesiæ sanctæ Werburgæ ecclesiam de Dissard cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, consensu Ranulphi comitis et Ranulphi filii sui. T. Willielmo clerico de Ruelant, Willielmo Flandrensi, multisque aliis. Matheus de Ruelant dedit ecclesiam de Turstemestone cum suis pertinentiis quando Simon frater ejus factus est monachus. Teste Roberto de Petraponte, multisque aliis. Hugo filius Osberni dedit unam mansuram in Cestria et unum pratum quod vocatur Kingeseya. Suueyn de Wethenhale factus monachus dedit ij. bovatas in Wethenhale concedentibus filiis suis. Ricardus de Cruce dedit unam mansuram in Cestria in vico apud pontem, et partem terræ quam habuit in Morcetone cum vellet monachus fieri. T. Normanno filio suo multisque aliis. Leticia de Malpas dedit Deo et sanctæ Werburgæ unam mansuram versus portam Clippe. T. et concedente Ricardo domino suo, et fratre suo Ricardo Maillard, Nigello Chaundel, multisque aliis. Willielmus filius Andreæ dedit cum filio suo monacho facto unam magnam soppam inter domum Wyneband et Hammit in foro.

Hæc sunt itaque dona quæ data sunt à me et à meis hominibus ecclesiæ sanctæ Werburgæ in meo tempore; quapropter concedimus et confirmamus tam ego quam homines mei, non solum hæc supradicta set et ea omnia quæ comes Hugo meus avunculus, vel Ricardus comes ejus filius aut eorum homines dederunt ecclesiæ sanctæ Werburgæ; deprecantes et præcipientes cunctis nostris amicis et hominibus, tam præsentibus quam futuris, quatinus ea omnia sint stabilia soluta et quietata, et ut elemosina ob omni re ita libera ut nichil libertatis possit eis addi ulterius, quia nichil retinemus in hiis exceptis orationibus. Adhuc etiam concedimus et confirmamus sicut prædicti comites et eorum homines antea confirmaverunt, ut beata Werburga habeat de cunctis rebus curiam suam, ita quod abbas illius loci non placitet usquam contra aliquem de aliqua re ad ecclesiam pertinente extra curiam suam. Et ut ego comes darem exemplum posteris veni ipse propter unum placitum in curiam abbatis, audiens et suscipiens ibi meum iudicium, non à meis sed à iudicibus abbatis, ut in omnibus haberet beata Werburga jus suæ dignitatis imperpetuum. Ut igitur sic sint omnia sicut supradictum est libera, confirmamus ea hinc sanctæ crucis signo ✠ hinc meo sigillo, hinc horum virorum testimonio, scilicet Willielmi Meschini, Willielmi constabularii, et Radulfi dapiferi, Hugonis Malbanc, Ricardi Banastre, Hugonis filii Osberni, Osberni filii Hugonis, Roberti de Maci, Roberti filii Bigoti, Adæ de Praers, Gaufridi capellani, Gurgicii doctoris, Ricardi filii Nigelli. RANULPHUS comes Cestriae constabulario, dapifero &c. Universitati vestrae notum facio me concessisse in elemosina imperpetuum Deo et sanctae Mariae et monachis ecclesiae sanctae Werburgae pro salute animae meae, et pro salute animarum omnium meorum antecessorum, nundinas et tentoria mercatoria, atque forum omnium venalium fieri ante portam eorum monachorum, ita verò quod ipsi monachi faciant ex suo tentoria mercatorum, conducentes ea postea mercatoribus in quantum poterint ad proficuum ecclesiae eorum. Quapropter prohibeo super amorem meum, ut nec mercator nec institor nec permentarius, nec corvesarius, nec ullus minister volens vendere vel emere, non vendat nec emat aliquid alicubi nisi ibi quamdiu nundinae duraverint; et si quisquam deprehensus fuerit, et vendere vel emere aliquid alias extra hunc locum, praecipio vicecomiti civitatis quicumque fuerit super amorem meum et forisfactum meum, ut ipsi et ministri abbatis cum eo eant et accipiant ipsum mercatorem cum sua mercatione retinentes eum donec inveniatur fidejussores faciendi rectum in curia S. Werburgae. Volo etiam atque firmiter praecipio, ut super omnia haec elemosina bene et integritate manuteneatur, ne mea oblacio quam ego ipse optuli super altare S. Werburgae coram meis baronibus in aliqua re disturbetur; ego enim optuli eam propria manu super altare coram testibus.

Si quis autem vestrum infelix hanc elemosinam, à me manu mea super altare S. Confirmatio Clementis Papae

[Harl. MS. 1965, fol. 7 b.]

CLEMENS episcopus, servus servorum Dei, dilectis filiis Roberto abbati sanctae Werburgae Cestr. ejusdemque fratribus, tam presentibus quam futuris, regularem vitam professis in perpetuum. Quoties id a nobis expetitur quod religioni et honestati convenire videtur, animo nos decet libenti concedere, et petentium desideriis congruum suffragium impertiri, ea propter, dilecti in Domino filii, vestris justis postulationibus clementer annuimus, et praefatam ecclesiam in qua divino mancipati estis obsequio, sub beati Petri, et nostra protectione suscipimus, et praesentis scripti privilegio communimus.

in eadem ecclesia nascitur institutus, perpetuis ibidem temporibus inviolabiliter observetur. Præterea quascunque possessiones quæcunque bona eadem ecclesia in præsentiarum juste et canonice possidet, aut in futurum concessione pontificum, largitione regum, aut oblatione fidelium, seu aliis justis modis præstante Domino poterit adipisci, firma vobis vestrisque successoribus et illibata permaneant, in quibus hæc propriis duximus exprimenda vocabulis: nundinas sanctæ Werburgæ, sicut continetur in cartis donatorum, decimas reddituum civitatis Cestriæ, decimas omnium piscium qui capiuntur in Dee, Ynes et ecclesiam, Salghton et ecclesiam de Bruer', Huntindon, Cheuel, Sutton, Bochton, Wirvena, Crocton, Trocford, dimid. Raby, terciam partem de Saluhale, Idinchal, Soctewic et ejus ecclesiam, Irreby, in Maltebi terram x. boum et unum molend. Weston et ejus ecclesiam, Eston et ejus ecclesiam, et decimam de omnibus rebus unde decima debet dari de dominio in hiis maneriis: Heton, Frodesham, Weverham, Lech, Rovestr. Harwardin, Colshull, Campeden, et de Frodesham, decimam piscium piscinariarum, et decimam de piscinaria de Heton. Ecclesiam de Daneford cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, ecclesiam de Estham, ecclesiam de Neston, ecclesiam de Eston in Derbisir', et decim. de molendino et de dominio de omnibus rebus unde decima dari debet. Witebi et ecclesiam de Tatenhal, unam salinam in Wico, ecclesiam de Cristelton, molendinum de Staneford, et Cotham Ordrici, ecclesiam de Cotinton, Cruwe, et capellam de Waverton, Brocton, Radeclivam, Tidulvestan, Gravesby, Cnoctyrum, et dona omnia quæ Hugo comes fundator loci illius et hæredes sui concesserint et cartis suis confirmaverint. Sane novalium vestrorum quæ propriis manibus ac sumptibus colitis sive de nutrimentis vestrorum animalium, nullus a vobis omnino exigere decimas vel extorquere præsumat.

Statuimus etiam ut nulli episcoporum vel ministris eorum, indebitas aut injustas exactiones in ecclesiis, vel in terris vestris liceat exercere. Liceat quoque vobis seu fratribus vestris in ecclesiis presbyteros eligere, ita tamen ut ab episcopis vel episcoporum vicariis animarum curam absque venalitate suscipiant, quam si committere illi, quod absit, ex pravitate noluerint, tunc presbiteri ex apostolicæ sedis benignitate officia celebrandi licentiam consequitur. Crisma vero, oleum sanctum, consecrationes altarium seu basilicarum, ordinationes clericorum qui ad sacros ordines fuerint promovendi a diocesano, suscipiatis episcopo, siquidem catholicus fuerit, et gratiam atque communionem apostolicæ sedis habuerit, et ea gratis absque pravitate vobis voluerit exhibere: alioquin liceat vobis catholicum quem malueritis adire antistitem, qui nimirum nostra fultus auctoritate, quod postulatur indulgeat.

Præterea cum generale interdictum fuerit, liceat vobis in ecclesia vestra, exclusis excommunicatis et interdictis non pulsatis campanis, suppressa voce divina officia celebrare. Sepulturam quoque loci illius liberam esse decrevimus, ut eorum devotioni et extremæ voluntati, qui se illic sepeliri delibuerint, nisi forte excommunicati vel interdicti sint, nullus obsistat; salva tamen justiciâ illarum ecclesiarum a quibus mortuorum corpora assumentur. Obeunte vero te, nec ejusdem loci abbate, vel tuorum quolibet successorum, nullus ibi quâvis surreptionis astutiâ seu violentiâ præponatur, nisi cum fratres communi consensu, vel fratrum pars consilii sanioris, secundum Deum et beati Benedicti regulam, providerint eligendum, atque ad eum ordinandum, qualemcumque illis placuerit, episcopus advoc. Prohibemus autem ut nulli fratrum vestrorum prius factam in eodem loco, professionem liceat absque abbatis licentia de claustris discedere; discedentem vero absque litterarum communi cautione, nullus audeat retinere.

Decrevimus ergo ut nulli omnium hominum liceat præfatam ecclesiam temere perturbare, ac ejus possessiones auferre, vel ablata retinere, minuire, seu quibuslibet vexationibus fatigare: sed omnia integra conserventur eorum pro quorum gubernatione ac sustentatione concessa sunt, usibus omnibus profutura, salva sedis apostolicæ auctoritate, et diocesani episcopi canonica justitia. Si quis igitur in futurum ecclesiastica sæcularisve persona hanc nostram constit. paginam sciens, contra eam temere venire temptaverit, secundo tertiove communita, nisi reatum suum congrua satisfactione correxerit, potestatis honorisque sui dignitate careat, reamque se judicio existere de perpetrata iniquitate cognoscat, et a sanctissimo corpore et sanguine Dei et Domini nostri aliena fiat, atque in extremo examine districtæ ultioni subjaceat.

Finalis Concordia de Nundinis in Vico juxta Abbatiam, 17 Edw. I.

[Plac. de Com. Cestr. MS. Harl. 2148, fol. 28.]

HÆC est finalis concordia facta in pleno scaccario Cestr. die Jovis prox. post festum sancti Hillari anno regni regis Edwardi xvii^o. coram Reg. de Grey justiciario Cestriæ, Priore de Birkheued, Radulpho de Vernun, Johanne de sancto Petro, Patricio de Hesilwelle, Ricardo de Sondbache, Ricardo de Masey, Rogero Dunvill, Johanne de Boydel, milit. et pluribus aliis domini regis fidelibus tunc ibidem præsentibus inter dominum Simonem abbatem sanctæ Werburgæ Cestr. et ejusdem loci conventum ex una parte, et maiorem et cives Cestr. ex altera parte; videlicet, quod cum prædicti abbas et conventus habere clamant situm Nundinarum Nativit. sancti Johannis Baptistæ in civitate prædicta ante portam abbatiae prædictæ, tam in seldis suis propriis prope portam prædictam, quam alibi in vico juxta abbatiam suam; ita quod omnes res venales ibidem non alibi venditioni exponi debent durantibus nundinis illis, secundum donationem et concessionem quondam comitum Cestriæ eidem abbati et successoribus suis inde confectam: ac prædicti maior et cives reclamando opponunt, asserentes se licite posse mercandisas suas alibi facere quibuscunque locis in prædicta civitate pro libito suæ voluntatis, non obstantibus donacione et concessione prædictis durantibus nundinis illis. Conquieverunt et convenerunt in hac forma subscripta dum tamen curia regia ipsam formam stabilem duxerit et acceptam. Videlicet quod prædictus abbas et conventus pro se et successoribus suis in perpetuum, quantum in eis est, concesserunt quod prædicti cives et eorum hæredes vel assignati prædictam civitatem inhabitantes, habeant et teneant situm nundinarum prædictarum, et seldas et ementoria, singulis annis, tempore nundinarum illarum sumptibus illorum civium construere possint in placea illa quæ se extendit a porta cimiterii usque ad domos ipsius abbatis, in longitudine sub muro ipsius cimiterii, et alibi ex opposito illarum seldarum, et alibi in vico illo prout sibi magis viderint expedire, excepta placea illa qua se extendit a porta abbatiae usque ad portam cimiterii prædicti; ita quod nec introitus nec exitus ipsarum portarum nec accessus ad domos ipsius abbatis, nec ad domos vicinas in vico illo impediuntur vel artentur aliter quam solebat esse tempore nundinarum prædictarum. Et quod cives ipsi in seldis sic constructis, durantibus nundinis illis, commodum suum faciant in omnibus. Ita tamen quod statim, finitis nundinis illis, prædictæ seldæ et ementoria constructa sic per prædictos cives penitus amoveantur, vel per ipsum abbatem et successores suos in ipsorum civium defectum. Conventum etiam et concordatum est quod prædicti abbas et conventus non locabunt domos suas in ipsis nundinis quas habent in vico juxta abbatiam aliquibus mercatoribus ejusdem civitatis dummodo prædictæ seldæ seu bothæ per ipsos cives sic constructæ non extiterint locatæ. Bene tamen licebit ipsis abbati et conventui et eorum successoribus domos suas prædictas mercatoribus extraneis ibidem venientibus, et domos illas locare volentibus, locare secundum quod sibi viderint expedire, et etiam mercatoribus ipsius civitatis si prædictæ seldæ per prædictos cives constructæ mercatoribus intrinsecis non possint sufficere, sine impedimento vel inquietatione, fraude seu dolo civium prædictorum. Prædicti vero abbas et conventus concesserunt pro se et successoribus suis, quod prædicti cives et eorum hæredes vel assignati percipiant et habeant singulis annis tempore nundinarum prædictarum stallagium per totam civitatem prædictam sicut prædicti abbas et conventus stallagium illud temporibus prædictis percipere et habere consueverunt et debuerunt.

Pro hac autem concessione et dimissione, pace, fine, et concordia, prædicti cives et eorum hæredes et assignati prædictam civitatem inhabitantes vel inhabitaturi præfatis abbati et conventui et eorum successoribus in ecclesia sua conventuali Cestriæ, die translationis sanctæ Werburgæ virginis, quadraginta et sex solidos et octo denarios solvent singulis annis in perpetuum. Convent. etiam concorditer inter partes prædictas quod si curia regia dictam formam pacis admiserit et acceptaverit, tunc utraque pars illarum ordinationi et considerationi ejusdem curiæ regis parebit. Et ad prædictam pacem confirmandam et ratificandam fideliter se intromittet et procurabit bona fide. Et si pendente prædictæ pacis securitate et confirmatione Nundinæ prædictæ supervenerint, prædicti burgenses solvent prædictis abbati et conventui prædictos xl. sex^s. viij^d. sicut prædictum est. In quorum solutionem si defecerint ministri domini regis similiter cum ballivis ipsius abbatis ipsos burgenses per totam civitatem Cestr. distringent ad solutionem prædictam faciendam. Et si curia regia prædictam formam pacis non admiserit, nec prædictis abbati et conventui per prædictas concessiones et dimissiones nec ipsis civibus per prædictas soluciones fiat præjudicium aliquale, quominus status utriusque partis integer sit et salvus aut in aliquo derogatus aliter quam ante prædictæ pacis provisionem. Et cum prædicti abbas et conventus pro pace ista ratificanda nuncium suum ad curiam domini regis transmiserint, prædicti cives nuncium suum cum nuncio abbatis transmittent communibus sumptibus utriusque partis inter ipsas æqualiter dividend.

WHEREAS the kynges highnes of his most gracious goodnes as well for the aduancement of Christis religion as for the better instruction of his subiectes in the lawes of God, hath by his letters patentes, bearynge date the xvi. daye of July, in the xxxiii. yere of his noble reigne, erected, founded, and established in the late monastery of St. Werberge, in the cite of Chester, a Cathedral Church, or bishop's see, wylling the same to be named and callid the bysshopriche or bishops see of Chester, and to the same hath appoynted limites and boundes of one perfect and entier diocese, ordeyning and wylling the same to be named and called the diocese of Chester. And amonges other thynges hath appropriated, vnited, and annexed to the said diocese of Chester the archedeaconry of Richemont, and all the jurisdiction thereof, whiche archedeaconry was of late parcell of the diocese of Yorke, and moreover hath the same hole and entier diocese of Chester, with all the lymittes and boundes, and all thinges annexed, appropriated, and united to the same, decreed, ordeyned and establyshed to be of the province of the archebyshoppe of Canterbury, and under the jurisdiction metropolitically of the same, as in the same letteres patentes doth more largely appere. For as moche as his sayde highnes graciously considereth, that the sayd archebishop of Canturbury hath a sufficient number of diocesses and suffraganes vnder hym and in his province, and that the archebushop of Yorke hath within the realme of England onelye two suffraganes, and more over that if the sayde diocese shulde remayne vnder the sayde archebyshoppe of Canterbury, that than all his highnes subjectes of all that diocese of Chester, and so of the archedeaconry of Richemount, shulde be constrayned for appeles to resort to the audience of Canterbury, whiche thyng to many of the sayde diocese, and specially to them of the archedeaconry of Richemount, shoulde be by reason of longe journey of almoste iii. C. myles frome some places thereof, intollerable fatigation, and importable charges, and therefore tenderly, lyke a mooste gracious prince studieng and carynge for his sayde subjectes most commoditie, quietnes, and ease, uppon further deliberation hath with the advise of his most honorabyl counsayl determined and ordeyned to remoue and disseuer the sayd byshoppryche and dioces of Chester, from the sayd prouynce and archbishoppryche of Canterburye, and to unite and annexe the same to the province and archbyshopriche of Yorke, as a dioces membre and byshopprych of the same :

Be it therfore ordeyned, enacted, and establyshed by the kynges highnes, and by the consente of the lordes spirituall and temporall, and the commons in this present parliament assembled, and by the auctoritie of the same, that the sayd hole and entyre diocese or byshoppryche of Chester, and every parcell and member therof, be from hensforth vnyted and annexed to the provynce and archebysshoppryche of Yorke, as a diocese and bishoppryche of the same. And that from henseforth the sayd diocese of Chester, and every parcell therof, exempte as well as not exempte, be and be taken, named, and reputed to be of the province and archebysshoppryche of Yorke, and of the metropolitically jurisdiction of the same, to every effecte and purpose, according to the ecclesiastical lawes of this realme: and that the bishop of the same, that now is, and all other his successours, shall be suffraganes to the archebyshoppe of Yorke that now is, and his successours, and to the same shall owe theyr obedience, and be under the jurisdiction metropolitically of the same, as well they as the Deane and Chapter of Chester, and all the archdeacons and the hoole clergy, and all others the kynges subjectes, beyng within the lymittes and boundes of the sayde diocese, any thyng comprysed in the sayde letters patentes of the erection of the sayde diocese and byshopriche of Chester not withstandyng. And from henseforwarde nother the sayd byshoppe of Chester, nother the clergy, nor any others the kynges subjectes, beinge of the sayde diocese of Chester, shall recognise the archebishop of Caunterbury as theyr metropolitane, but onely the archebyshop of Yorke and his successours, and to the same shal obey in all thynges accordyng to the lawes, as well temporall as ecclesiasticall of this realme.

Be it also further enacted and establyshed by the kynges highnes, with the assent of the lordes spirituall and temporall, and the commons in this present perlyament assembled, and by the auctoritie of the same, that the bushopriche and diocesse of Manne, in the yle of Manne, be also annexed, adjoynd, and united to the said province and metropolitically jurisdiction of Yorke in all poyntes and to all pourposes and effectes, as the said bisshopriche of Chester is annexed, adjoynd, and united to the same.

Provided alwayes, and be it enacted by our soveraigne lorde the kyng, with the assent of the lordes spirituall and temporall, and the commons in this present parlyamente assembled, and by the auctoritie of the same, that this Act be not prejudiciall to the archebishop of Canterbury nowe beyng, nor to his successours, nor to the deane and chapter of the same, ne to any other bysshop or chapter of this realme, but that all places, landes, promotions, possessions, as well spirituall as temporall, beyng and lyenge without the boundes and limittes of the archedeconries of Richmont and Chester, and without the boundes and limites of the cite of Chester, and the county of the same, and the counties of Lancaster and Chester, or any of them, shalbe styl of the province of Canterbury, and of such dioces and diocesses as they were of afore the erection of the said byshoprich of Chester, and of the jurisdiction of the same, and not of the province of Yorke, ne shalbe accompted to be any parcel of the sayde dioces of Chester, any thyng in this presente acte, or in the boke of erection of the sayde byshoprich of Chester, notwithstandyng. Sauyng to the byshop of Chester and his successours, that his house at Weston, beyng within the dioces of Coventry and Lichfield, shal be accompted and taken to be of his dioces, and that he beyng resident in the same, shalbe taken and accompted as resident in his owne dioces, and for the tyme of his abode there shall have jurisdiction in the same, lyke wyse as all other busshopes have in the houses belongyng to theyr sees, wheresoeuer they lye, in any other bysshoppryche within this realme for the tyme of theyr abode in the same, any thinge in this present act and provision to the contrary thereof in any wyse notwithstandyng.

Athelney Monastery,

IN

SOMERSETSHIRE.

THELNEY, Ethelinge-aia, or Athelyngney, "Clittonum" or "Nobilium In-sula," as it is interpreted, was a spot, in ancient times, surrounded by almost impassable morasses:
situated in what is now the parish of East Ling in Somersetshire, and bounded on the north west by the river Tone. William of Malmesbury gives us a romantic account of this Island. He describes it as, in his time, inaccessible, except by a boat: covered with alder wood, and inhabited by wild animals: with scarcely more than two acres of firm land.^a Here, King Alfred, in the early part of his reign, found a refuge from the Danes; and here, according to the concurrent testimony of our historians, he founded an abbey for monks, A. D. 888.^b Reyner, in the copy of Alfred's Charter, quoted by Dugdale, fixes the foundation in 878.^c

Tanner says, this monastery was early of the Order of St. Benedict, and was dedicated to our blessed Saviour, St. Peter, and St. Paul. Thus the surrender, he adds; no mention there, or any where but in Malmesbury, of their patron St. Egelwine.

^f The following is Malmesbury's account of the dream; Script. post Bedam, fol. 157 a. "Erat rex Elfredus barbarorum infestatione ad hoc redactus inopia, ut in Insula quadam parvissima quae vocatur Adeligeri lateret inglorius. Dixi superius de hac insula in gestis pontificum Wellensium. Ibi ergo quadam die cum domi soporatus jaceret, (dolor enim animi somnum impetraverat) sociis per oram fluminis dispersis ecce Cuthbertus dormientem alloquitur. 'Ego sum Cuthbertus Lindisfarnensis quondam antistes. Misit me Deus, ut prospera tibi annuntiem quia enim Anglia jamdudum peccatorum poenas enormiter luit, modò tandem indigenarum sanctorum meritis super eum misericordiae suae oculo respexit. Tu quoque tam miserabiliter regno extorris gloriose post paucum tempus in solio reponeris. Atque adeo signum eximium tibi dabo. Venient hodie piscatores tui magnam vim grandium piscium corbis evelientes. Quod eo erit mirabilius quia his diebus gelante aqua stagnum asperatum nihil tale sperari permittet.

minute upon the History of the foundation;^e which appears to have been vowed by Alfred in thankfulness for the privacy he had enjoyed. The legends say, he vowed it in consequence of a dream, in which St. Cuthbert appeared to him, and gave him assurances of being restored to his crown and kingdom.^f

From Asser we learn, that the first monks whom Alfred placed in his monastery were foreigners, chiefly from France: JOHN, a native of Saxony, to whom Ingulphus gives the surname of Scotus, being made the first abbat.^g Malmesbury describes the church which Alfred built as small, but singular and novel in its construction: consisting of four piers which supported the fabric, surrounded by four circular chancels.^h Alfred's endowment consisted of ten cassates of land in Sudton, now Long-Sutton, with their appurtenances, free of royal tribute or other exaction, except the "trinoda necessitas."

At the time of forming the Domesday Survey, the abbey property in Somersetshire consisted of eight hides of land at Atiltone; ten hides at Sutune, four of which were in demesne; two hides at Seovenamentone; one hide at Hame; and one at Lege. The Earl of Moretaine is stated to hold two hides belonging to the manor of Atiltone, valued at thirty shillings, which in the time of Edward the Confessor was held by the abbey. Roger de Brito, it appears, held half a hide of the land in Sutune as an under tenant; and two hides, there, are stated to be held in the same manner by Roger de Corcel "invito abbate:" two thanes had held them of the church in King Edward's time. The Earl of Moretaine is stated to hold two hides in the abbat's manor in Aisselle; and Ralph de Limesi one hide in Bosintone. In Dorsetshire the monks held four hides and a virgate and a half in Candel, now Purse Candel, in the hundred of Shirburn; the four hides in demesne; the virgate

Super hæc gelido rore stillans aer omnium piscantium artem eludit. Verum tu fortunæ secundæ verè compos regaliter feceris, si adjutorem tuum Deum et me ejus nuncium competenti devotione demerueris.' Hæc dicens, Sanctus regem soporatum sollicitudinibus exiit, matremque propè cubantem ejusdem nuntii lætitia confortavit. Expecterecti ambo unum et se somniasse frequenti recursu verborum iterabant: cum piscatores ingressi copia innumerabili piscium fidem somnio fecere. Nec multò post ille regnum et regni gloriam suscepit, ut latius in gestis diximus."

Some allusion to this vision of St. Cuthbert is supposed to have been intended by a little jewel of gold and enamel, found in 1693, in Newton park, at some distance northward from the abbey, which had an inscription round the edge, in Saxon, intimating that it had been made by the order of Alfred: AELFRED MEC HEHT GEW: RCAN. A rude figure of a person crowned (holding a sceptre surmounted by a flower) on one side, was supposed by Dr. Hickes to represent St. Cuthbert. The other side was filled by a large flower. This singular relic is still preserved in the Ashmolean Museum at Oxford, to which it was given, in 1718, by Thomas Palmer, Esq., of Fairfield in Somersetshire. Compare Hickesii Thesaurus. Gram. Anglo-Sax. tom. i. pp. 142, 143.

and a half tenanted by Aluredus, who in the Exeter Domesday is called Aluredus Pincerna. The total amount of land held in chief by the abbey amounted to twenty-six hides, a virgate and a half, yielding an annual rent of 21*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*^a

From an entry in the account of the earl of Moretaine's lands, in a subsequent page of Domesday, it appears that in King Edward's time the abbey held the manor of Biscopestone, upon which the castle of Montacute was afterwards erected: in exchange for which the earl of Moretaine gave the monks the manor of Candel in Dorsetshire already mentioned. "Ipse comes tenet in dominio BISCOPESTONE, et ibi est castellum ejus quod vocatur MONTAGVD. Hoc manerium geldabat tempore regis Edwardi pro ix. hidis, et erat de abbatia de Adelingi, et pro eo dedit comes eidem ecclesie manerium quod CANDEL vocatur."^b

The Exeter Domesday, supposed to contain the original Rolls for the Western counties of England, adds the live stock upon the Somersetshire manors as it stood at the time of the returns. The abbat is there called Abbas de ALIENIA.^c

Of the history of this Abbey, from the end of the eleventh century to the Dissolution, less is known than of almost any other. There seems to have been a very early attempt to annex it, or render it subordinate, to Glastonbury. The detail of the transaction will be found in the Appendix of Instruments, given in the words of William of Malmesbury.^d

Savaric, bishop of Bath and Wells, about the year 1203, appears to have been a benefactor. He converted the parochial churches of Ilminster and Longe Sutton, in Somersetshire, into prebends of the latter cathedral: appropriating the former to the abbat of Muchelney, and the latter to the abbat of Athelney.^e

Dr. Archer, in his account of the religious Houses in the diocese of Bath and Wells appended to Hearne's Hemingford, says, "this abbat and convent had not one advowson of a rectory, and but one church appropriated to them, that of Ling, in which parish the monastery stood."^f Their possessions in the forest of Neracchist and Northpetherton, in Somersetshire, are noticed in Hearne's edition of Adam of Domerham.^g

From the Register of the see of Bath and Wells it appears that the conventual church of Athelney was at least in part rebuilt, in 1321, when an indulgence of thirty days was granted to such as should contribute to its reparation:^h and this is not the only proof on record of the poverty of the house; in the 32d of Edw. I. when the king demanded corrodies, as was then the custom, for two or three of his aged servants, he received an answerⁱ rendering the reasons of the convent, humbly tendered to his majesty of their inability to effect them.

In the 20th of Edw. III. the abbat was certified to hold one knight's fee in Charlton, and half a fee in Hinmere.^k

Collinson informs us that Elizabeth, (daughter of Sir Simon de Fourneaux, and) widow of Sir John Blount, Knt. founded, in her widowhood, 8 Ric. II. a Chantry in the abbey of Athelney, agreeing, by indenture, with Robert Hacche, the then abbat, that the convent should, for ever, find two chaplains, one of whom was to be a monk, and the other a secular priest, to say mass every day in the year except Good-Friday, for the good estate of William Aungier and Henry Rodham, as also of her the said Elizabeth, the Lady Alice Stafford, the Lady Maud Stafford, and Robert Wrench; and all the other friends and benefactors of the said Elizabeth: and for the souls of Sir John Blount, Sir Simon de Fourneaux and Alice his wife, Sir Henry de Umfraville and Isabel his wife, Sir William Blount and Maud his wife, the Lady Julian Talbot, the Lady Elizabeth Cornewail, Sir Brian Cornewail her son, Sir Richard Stafford, and Sir Richard Stafford the younger, his son, Robert Flete and Robert Stockton, and for the souls of all her friends and benefactors deceased. And it was further agreed, that on the decease of the said Elizabeth Blount, or any other of the persons above-mentioned respectively, annual obits should be kept on the days of their deaths, as also for the other persons who were dead at the time of signing the Indenture. These services were performed at the altar of the Holy Trinity in the abbey church of Athelney; and it was agreed by the abbat and convent, that, on neglect thereof, the said Elizabeth and her heirs should have liberty to distrain on their lands at Clavelshay, in the parish of North-Petherton. Lady Elizabeth Blount, soon after, married Sir Richard Stury, Knt.^l

The revenues of the abbey, in 1444, are stated by Collinson to have been valued at 98*l.*^m

ABBATS of ATHELNEY.

JOHN, surnamed Scotus, has been already mentioned as the first abbat, appointed by King Alfred.ⁿ Collinson says he is mentioned A.D. 888, 890, and 892.^o An attempt to assassinate him is detailed in the Appendix, in the extract from Asser's Life of Alfred.

ALFWARD, according to Collinson, occurs abbat in the year 1009.^p

SIMON is said to have succeeded him.^q

ATHELWARD was abbat in 1016.

ATHELWIN succeeded.^r Dr. Archer, in his account of the religious Houses in the diocese of Bath and Wells, already quoted, says

BENEDICT was abbat in 1159.^s Another

OSMUND DE SOWY was elected abbat. The king's assent was given to his election April 19th, and the temporalities restored to him May 13th, 1297.^y

ROBERT DE ILE was elected abbat in the month of March, 1325.^z He is probably the same Robert who occurs A.D. 1341: in which year his death was announced to the king, and a licence for a fresh election obtained on August the 2d.

RICHARD DE GOTHURST, his successor, had the royal assent given to his election Aug. 20th following. The temporalities were restored to him Sept. 4th.^a

JOHN DE STOUR, prior of the monastery, was the next abbat, elected in 1349. He died, however, before the 10th of October that year, while on his journey to

JOHN WELLYNGTON, was confirmed abbat in that year on July 27th.^l He died in 1516.

RICHARD WRAXHALL was confirmed abbat Jan. 7th, 1516; being inducted, the same day, into the prebendal stall of Sutton in the cathedral of Wells.^m Willis says, his successor was

JOHN HERTE, who occurs abbat in 1525.ⁿ

ROBERT HAMLYN, the last abbat, with eight monks, surrendered their convent to the king Feb. 8th, 1540, 31 Hen. VIII.: the abbat having a pension of fifty pounds per annum,^o and retaining his prebend of Long Sutton. A letter written by him to Lord Cromwell sometime previous to the Dissolution, enumerating the debts of his house, will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.^p

According to Dugdale and Speed, the revenues of this house were valued, in the 26th of Henry the Eighth, at 209*l.* 0*s.* 3*¼d.*^q

The scite and demesne lands were thus described in the Minister's Account of the 31st Hen. VIIIth, in the Augmentation Office:

"Late Monastery of Athelney."

Scite of the said late monastery with the demesne lands to the same appertaining; the account of Sir John Tuchett knight, Lord Audley, occupier.

"He answers for 10*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* for the farm of the scite of the late monastery there, with the orchards, gardens, lands, meadows, feedings, and pastures to the same scite appertaining, called Hond close, Mylle mede, Long mede, Lytell mede, Longer mede near Clyvesmede, Braunds mede, two meadows lying in the east part of the Dreve, Brode mede in the west part of the Dreve, Cosyners close, the two Wylobers, and one meadow called Pypesmore, with all other their appurtenances, in the tenure and occupation of the same accomptant. Sum . 10*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*"

The scite and demesnes of the monastery were granted in the 36th of Henry VIII. to John Clayton.^r

Of the buildings of this monastery not a vestige now remains. The field on which it stood is wholly under tillage.

Collinson says, "The abbey buildings are supposed, from various fragments that have been discovered at different times, to have been very magnificent. In 1674, some labourers, employed by Capt. Hacker (to whom the premises then belonged) to remove part of the ruins, disclosed a very ancient sepulchre of well-wrought stone, containing the skull of the deceased, the os ilium, and a small fragment of cloth. The inside of this receptacle was singularly contrived, the bottom being excavated or scooped out, so as to admit the several parts of the body. They afterwards discovered the foundation of the ancient church, which stood on the top of the hill to the north east, and there found bases of pillars, elegant tracery work of windows, and divers pieces of sculptured free-stone, still retaining the marks of paint and gold. The labourers were said to have likewise found, at the same time, a large spur of gold, which they privately disposed of for their own benefit."^s "About eighteen years since," Collinson adds, (that is about 1773) "in digging up some other of the ancient ruins, about sixty yards from the present farmhouse northward, the workmen discovered a vault eight feet square and seven high, containing three human skulls. The stone of the arch and side walls being taken away, the cavity was filled up, covering the skulls with earth. Four score yards from this funereal spot stood a chapel, the ruins of which were removed about the same period."^t

Bishop Tanner notices a REGISTER of Athelney Monastery as extant in the year 1662.^u Collinson, who quotes the Register of Athelney, neglects to say in what custody it has been preserved of late years.

An impression from the SEAL of the monastery is appendant to the Surrender in the Augmentation Office; whence the arms given in the initial letter of this Account have been obtained. This seal represents, under three canopies in divided compartments, Our Saviour between St. Peter and St. Paul, at full length, and in erect postures: Our Saviour bearing on his left arm a mound, or globe, surmounted by a staff with a cross. On the dexter and sinister sides of the saints are the shields of arms, which in the initial Letter, for the sake of bringing them together, have been impaled. The legend round the seal is, SIGILLUM COMMUNE ABBATIS ET CON MONASTERIJ DE ATHELNEY. Bishop Tanner is faulty in his description of the arms.

ANNO Domini dcccxxxviii. Athelinus Wintoniensis comes, regis Alfredi, et Westsaxonum elemosinas Romam deportavit. Quo utique tempore duo monasteria fundavit, unum monachorum apud Ethelingeiam, id est, nobilium insulam, ubi idem rex quondam cum subulco exulavit; quo in loco Johannem presbiterum abbatem ordinavit. Aliud quoque monasterium ad orientalem plagam Seafstebire, ad habitationem sanctimonialium fabricari præcepit. In quo filiam propriam Algivam abbatissam constituit, virginem Domino consecratam. Et hæc monasteria divitiis et possessionibus habundantè ditavit.

ADELINGEA est non maris insula, sed ita stagnorum refusionibus et paludibus inaccessa, ut nullo modo nisi navigio adiri queat. Alnetum in ea permaximum cervos et capreas multasque id genus bestias continet. Terra solida vix duobus jugeribus lata monasteriorum et monachorum officinas habet. Ejus constructor fuit rex Elfredus, qui quondam à Danis pulsus provinciâ, tutas illic aliquandiu latebras confoverat. Mox cum per somnium restitutionis suæ vadem sanctum Cuthbertum accepisset, ibidem se monasterium constructurum Deo pollicitus est: fecitque ecclesiam situ quidem pro angustîa spaciî modicam, sed nova ædificandi modo compactam. Quatuor enim postes solo infixi totam suspendunt^a machinam: quatuor cancellis opere spherico in circuitu ductis.

Sunt ibi monachi pauci numero, et pauperes, sed qui egestatem suam quietis et solitudinis amore vel magni pendant vel consolentur: qui laudes patroni sui sancti Egelwini ferant in astra præconiis, sanctitatem sentiant continuis impensis beneficiis. Illum fratrem regis Westsaxonum Kenewalh fuisse, et generis magnitudinem sanctitatis indole inaltasse perseverans est opinio, languoris perpetuo detentum compede nihilo segnius Deo serviisse, bono fine consummatum omnibus se invocantibus prestò ad remedia occurrere.

ERAT itaque rex ille multis tribulationum clavis confossus, quamvis in regia potestate constitutus: nam a vigesimo ætatis anno usque ad quadragesimum quintum quem nunc agit, gravissime incogniti doloris infestatione incessanter fatigatur; ita, ut ne unius quidem horæ securitatem habeat, qua aut illam infirmitatem non sustineat, aut sub illius formidine lugubriter prope constitutus non desperet. Præterea assiduis exterarum gentium infestationibus, quas sedulo terra marique, sine ulius quieti temporis intervallo sustinebat, non sine materia inquietabatur. Quid loquar de frequentibus contra Paganos expeditionibus, et bellis et incessabilibus regni gubernaculis? De quotidiana [] nationum, quæ in Tyrreno mari usque ultimum Hybernæ finem habitant? (Nam etiam de Hierosolyma Abel patriarchæ epistolas, et dona illi directas vidimus et legimus.) De civitatibus et urbibus renovandis, et aliis, ubi nunquam ante fuerant, construendis? De ædificiis aureis et argenteis incomparabiliter illo edocente fabricatis? De aulis et cambris regalibus, lapideis et ligneis suo jussu mirabiliter constructis? De villis regalibus lapideis antiqua positione mutatis, et in decentioribus locis regali imperio decentissime constructis? Qui maxima (excepto illo dolore) perturbatione et controversia suorum (qui nullum aut parvum voluntarie, pro communi regni necessitate vellent subire laborem), sed tamen ille solus divino fultus adminiculo susceptum semel regni gubernaculum (veluti gubernator præcipuus, navem suam multis opibus refertam ad desideratum ac tutum patriæ suæ portum, quamvis cunctis propemodum lassis suis nautis, producere contendit), haud aliter titubare ac vacillare, quamvis inter fluctivagos ac multimodos præsentis vitæ turbines non sinebat. Nam assidue suos episcopos, et comites, ac nobilissimos, sibique dilectissimos suos ministros, necnon et præpositos (quibus post dominum et regem omnis totius regni potestas, sicut dignum, subdita videtur) leniter docendo, adulando, hortando, imperando, ad ultimum inobedientes post longam patientiam acrius castigando, vulgarem stultitiam et pertinaciam omni modo abominando ad suam voluntatem, et ad communem totius regni utilitatem sapientissime usurpabat et annectebat. Etsi inter hæc regalia exhortamenta propter pigritiam populi imperata non implentur, aut tarde incepta tempore necessitatis ad utilitatem exercentium minus finita non provenirent (ut de castellis ab eo imperatis adhuc non inceptis loquar, aut nimium tarde inceptis ad perfectum finem non perductis) quod hostiles copiae terra marique irrumperent, aut, ut sæpe evenit, utraque parte tunc contradictores imperialium diffinitionum inani pœnitentia pene exinaniti verecundabantur. Inanem enim pœnitentiam scriptura teste nomino, qua homines innumerales nimio detrimento pluribus insidiis perpetratis sæpe perculsi dolent. Sed quamvis per hanc rem (heu, proh dolor!) eulogii miserabiliter contristentur, et perditis eorum patribus, conjugibus, liberis, ministris, servis, ancillis, operibus, et omni supellectili flebiliter commoveantur, quid detestabilis juvat pœnitentia, quando nec occisis suis propinquis succurrere valent, nec captivos suos a captivitate exosa redimere; nec etiam interdum sibimet qui evaserint, adjuvare valent, quoniam propriam unde sustentent vitam non habent. Sera igitur pœnitentia nimium attriti pœnitent, et regalia præcepta incuriose despexisse dolent, et regalem sapientiam totis vocibus collaudant, et quod ante refutaverunt, totis viribus implere promittunt: id est, de arcibus construendis, et cæteris communibus communis regni utilitatibus.

De voto quoque et proposito excellentissimæ meditationis suæ, quam semper inter prospera et adversa sua, nullo modo prætermittere poterat, prætereundum esse hoc in loco utiliter non existimo. Nam cum de necessitate animæ suæ solito cogitaret, inter cætera diuturna et nocturna bona, quibus assidue et maxime studebat, duo monasteria construere imperavit; unum monachorum in loco, qui dicitur Æthelingæ, quod per maxima grœnnia paludosissima et intransmeabilia, et aquis undique circumcingitur, ad quod nullo modo aliquis accedere potest, nisi nauticis, aut etiam per unum pontem, qui inter duas alias arces operosa protelatione constructus est: in cujus pontis occidentali limite arx munitissima præfati regis imperio pulcherrima operatione consita est; in quo monasterio diversi generis monachos undique congregavit, et in eodem collocavit.

Nam primitus, quia nullum de sua propria gente nobilem ac liberum hominem, nisi infantes, qui nihil boni eligere, nec mali respuere pro teneritudine invalidæ ætatis adhuc possunt; qui monasticam voluntarie vellet subire vitam, habebat: nimirum, quia per multa retroacta annorum curricula monasticæ vitæ desiderium ab illa tota gente, nec non et a multis aliis gentibus funditus desierat; quamvis perplurima adhuc monasteria in illa regione constructa permaneant: nullo tamen regulam illius vitæ ordinabiliter tenente (nescio quare) aut pro alienigenarum infestationibus, quæ sæpissime terra marique hostiliter irrumpunt; aut etiam pro nimia illius gentis in omni genere divitiarum abundantia (propter quam multo magis id genus despectæ monasticæ vitæ fieri existimo) ideo diversi generis monachos in eodem monasterio congregare studuit.

Primitus Johannem presbyterum monachum, scilicet Ealdsaxonum genere abbatem constituit; deinde ultramarinos presbyteros quosdam et diaconos; ex quibus cum nec adhuc tantum numerum, quantum vellet, haberet; comparavit etiam quamplurimos ejusdem gentis Gallicæ, ex quibus quosdam infantes in eodem monasterio edoceri imperavit, et subsequenti tempore ad monachicum habitum sublevare; in quo etiam monasterio unum Paganicæ gentis edoctum in monachico habitu degentem, juvenem admodum, vidimus, non ultimum scilicet eorum.

Facinus quoque in eodem monasterio quodam tempore perpetratum muti taciturnitate silentii oblivioni traderem, quamvis indignum facinus est; quia per totam scripturam impiorum turpia facta, inter venerabiliora justorum, sicut zizania et lolium in tritici segetibus interseminantur: bona scilicet, ut laudentur, sequantur, æquiparentur, sectatores quoque eorum omni honore venerabili digni habeantur; mala vero vituperentur, execrentur, et, ut omnino effugiantur, imitatores quoque eorum omni odio et despectione ac vindicta corripiantur.

Nam quodam tempore, cum instinctu diabolico quidam sacerdos et diaconus Gallici genere ex præfatis monachis, invidia quadam labente excitati, contra suum abbatem præfatum Johannem nimium latenter in tantum amaricati sunt, ut Judaico more dominum suum dolo circumvenirent et proderent. Nam duos ejusdem gentis Gallicæ servulos præmio conductos ita fraudulenter docuerunt, ut nocturno tempore, cum omnes delectabili corporis quiete graviter dormirent, patefactam armati intrarent ecclesiam; quam post se iterum solito more claudebant, et unicum abbatis adventum in ea absconditi præstolarentur. Cumque solus solito orando causa ecclesiam latenter intraret, et ante sanctum altare flexis ad terram genibus se inclinaret, hostiliter irrumpentes in eum, tunc eum ibidem occidere conarentur: cujus corpus exanime inde trahentes ante ostium cujusdam meretricis, quasi illic occisus esset in meretricando, jactarent: quod etiam machinaverunt, crimen crimini addentes, sicut dictum est: et erit novissimus error pejor priore.

Sed divina misericordia, quæ semper innocentibus solet subvenire, impiam impiorum meditationem maxima ex parte frustrata est, quo non per omnia eveniret, sicut proposuerant.

Omni itaque mala doctrina à malis doctoribus malis auditoribus elucubratim exposita, et conducta nocte adveniente atque suppetenti, et impunitate promissa, latrunculos duos armatos in ecclesia concluserunt, adventum abbatis præstolantes. Cumque media nocte Joannes solito furtim nemine sciente orandi gratia ecclesiam intrasset, et flexis genibus ante altare incurvaret, tunc duo illi latrunculi ex improvise evaginatis gladiis in eum irrumpunt, et crudelibus afficiunt vulneribus. Sed ille ut solito, ac semper acris ingenio, et (ut audivimus de eo à quibusdam referentibus) bellicosæ artis non expers, (si in meliori disciplina non studeret) statim ut sonitus latronum audivit, priusquam videret, insurgens acriter in eos, antequam vulneratur, et vociferans quantum poterat, reluctabatur, inclamitans dæmones esse, et non homines (nec enim aliter sciebat; quia nec hoc homines ausos esse existimabat;) vulneratus est tamen, antequam sui advenirent. Sui ergo hoc rumore expergefacti, et etiam audito dæmonum nomine, perterriti utrique, et inexpertes, et etiam illi, Judaico more domini sui proditores, hinc inde ad ecclesiæ ostia concurrunt; sed antequam advenirent latrunculi præcipiti cursu ad proximantia sibi gronnæ latibula, semivivum abbatem relinquentes, confugiunt. Monachi vero seniores suum semivivum colligentes cum gemitu et mœrore domum reportaverunt; sed nec etiam illi dolosi minus lachrymabantur innocentibus. Sed Dei misericordia tantum facinus impunitum fieri non permittente; latrunculi, qui hoc perpetraverunt; omnes tanti sceleris persuasores capti ligatique, per varia tormenta morte turpissima periire.

REGNANTE in perpetuum Domino nostro Jesu Christo. Omnia regna hujus vitæ labentis, regnorumque dispensatores ab initio istius sæculi cum velocitate deficientes, transeunt. Ideo fugitivis et mortalibus rebus æterna gaudia promerenda sunt. Quapropter ego Ælfred, divina ordinante misericordia, Occidentalium Saxonum rex, pro remedio animæ meæ, et criminum meorum absolutione, aliquantulam agri partem, id est, decem cassatas in loco ubi dicitur Sudton ad insulam Clitonum, quæ, Anglicè usitato onomate, Aedlingaeg nuncupatur, ad supplementum monasterialis vitæ, monachis ibidem sub regulari exercitio Deo omnipotenti devotè servientibus, animo volenti largitus sum; hancque libertatem præfato monasterio devota mente donavi, cum pratis, pascuis, rivulis, et omnibus rebus ad ea ritè pertinentibus, ut ab omnium regalium tributorum, et exactione operum, atque pœnaliū causarum, absque expeditione sola, arcis, et pontium structura, secura, immunis, et libera perpetualiter permaneat. Et qui hoc augere voluerit, augeat Deus bona illius in regione viventium. Si autem aliquis, quod absit, superbiæ fastu inflatus, et tyrannica potestate illectus, hoc infringere, et irritum facere conatus fuerit, sciat se ab omni ecclesia Christianorum anathematizatum, et in die judicii coram Christo, et angelis ejus, nisi ante emendaverit, rationem redditurum esse. Præfatæ verò terræ et donatio hujus agelli, his terminis circumsepta patescit. Æperz. &c. Scripta autem est hæc scedula hujus donationis anno ab incarnatione Christi, dcccclxxviij. indictione 4^{ta}. his testibus consentientibus, quorum nomina patescunt. Ego Ælfred rex hanc meam donationem cum signo sanctæ crucis corroboravi. ✠ Ego Ealferd episcopus. &c.

HIS igitur ad instantiam abbatis Turstini sic patrat, etiam illud prosequamur, qua efficacia vicinos abbates Muchainensem et ETHELINGENSEM sui juris asseruit. Nam cum eos, falsa delatione Gisonis Wellensis episcopi, Lanfrancus archiepiscopus in generali concilio Angliæ mordaciter impeteret, Muchaniensis, qui exercitatio esset in seculi rebus, respondit se in capitulo Glastoniæ, jussu ejusdem loci abbatis et sui responsurum. Cæterum extraordinarias accusationes non timere. Ethelingensis autem joculariter eludens quæstionem, minanti archiepiscopo baculum ei auferendum, non curo quia meliorem habeo, nec tamen istum tibi trado. Tunc jussus abbas Turstinus, ut si sibi competere sciret, causam ageret, surrexit loco sententiæ dicendæ, egitque multa et constanti facundia, memoriter retexens privilegia regum a Kentuino et Ina regibus usque ad Edwardum, quibus allegavit in eos abbates nullam jurisdictionem aliquem nisi Glastoniensem abbatem habere, adeo ut in prædictas ecclesias nullus debeat abbas intrare, nisi fuerit electus à conventu Glastoniæ. Tum cum archiepiscopus in regem conversus dixisset, se beati Dunstani nutriculum nolle minuere, illeque retulisset, nec se velle matrem Domini contristare, sed pro cautione futurorum episcopum Wellensem debere in Glastoniæ capitulo rem diffinire, resumpsit abbas sermonem, privilegia ecclesiæ suæ authentica esse, nullam cujuslibet dignitatis personam causa judicii Glastoniam debere venire, sua ibi esse omnia, et in ecclesiasticis et in secularibus rebus judicia, facile fore ut invictus princeps et sanctus archiepiscopus in re nova constituenda perpetua pulsarentur invidia. Cæterum quod antecessores sui habuissent integrum, se, qui in defendenda dignitate ecclesiæ eodem vigilaret spiritu, nequaquam omissurum. Quocirca episcopus Wellensis, si quid allegandum putaret, suo non regis vel archiepiscopi jussi, Glastoniam veniret. Quid plura, obtinuit causam abbas. Et quidem episcopus in capitulum venit, sed purgantibus se abbatibus victoria excidit, et inglorius discessit.

Pershore, or Persore Monastery,

IN

WORCESTERSHIRE.

ERSHORE Abbey, in the former edition of the Monasticon, was stated, in a false quotation from Leland's Collectanea, to have been founded in the year 604^a. Oswald, however, one of the nephews of Ethelred king of Mercia, is stated to have been the real founder of a religious house here A.D. 689, which consisted, at first, of secular canons; then of monks; and then of seculars again^b and nuns, who were dismissed by King Edgar, and Bishop Oswald, according to Tanner, in the year 984: but, Dr. Nash observes,^c it must have been earlier, as King Edgar died in 975.^d Wanley dates King Edgar's Charter to this monastery, which will be found in the Appendix of Instruments,^e in 972.^f From this time, the monastery of Pershore became an abbey of benedictine monks, dedicated at first to the Blessed Virgin, and the apostles St. Peter and St. Paul, but afterwards to St. Eadburgh.^g William of Malmesbury ascribes this foundation, in Edgar's time, to Egelward duke of Dorset.^h

King Edgar's Charter grants the same privileges to the abbey which are stated to have been granted to it at an earlier period by King Coenulph, at the request of Duke Beornoth: it also restores to the monks certain manses in Pershore; in Brihtul and Fingtune ten manses; ten manses in Cumbrinctune; five in Pedneshamme; sixteen in Ercyngetune; ten manses in Byrtingahamme; ten in Deopanforda; ten in Strengesho; ten in Bettesforda; other manses in Cromban; ten in Stoce; ten in Pyritune; four in Wadbreorhan; three in Civeingtun; three in Broctune; ten in Piplinctune; ten in Snoddesbyri; seven in Niwantune; four in Eadbrichtingtune; five in Wihtlafestune; five in Flæferth; five in Grattune; five in Deormodesealdtune; five in Husantreo; five at Meretune; three in Broctune; two at Hleobyri; thirty in Langandune; seven in Poincgwic; three in Beornthesleahe; three in Actune; in Suthstoce, at Hileahe, at Treshaa, at Cyllincocotan, at Ealdanburi, Dydimeretune, Badimyncgtun, and Uptun, forty manses; ten in Deorham; five in Longahege; six at Lidanege; six in Wiggangeate; five in Beoleahe; five in Gyrdeleahe; ten in Sture; twenty in Bradanwege; five in Coltune; ten manses in Wicwennan; and for the purposes of making salt, in two places, room for eighteen pans ("doliorum situs"), ten at Midlewic, and eight at Neodemestanwic; the site of two refineries at Wictune, and a salt pan called Westringce, with a manse and half another manse at Hortun.

The church and convent of Pershore, being built with wood, were several times destroyed by fire.ⁱ The first time was about the year 1000; for A.D. 1002 we find it re-opened, after the repairs.^k

Between this time and the formation of the Domesday Survey, Pershore appears to have lost a large portion of its revenues. Many of the places noticed in King Edgar's Charter are found entered in the Survey among the Worcestershire possessions of the abbey of Westminster. Malmesbury expressly says, that Pershore had lost more than half its endowment. Part, he says, had been devoured by the ambition of the rich; another part had been lost by neglect, "sepelivit oblivio;" and the greatest portion of all had been bestowed by King Edward the Confessor and King William the Conqueror upon Westminster.^l Even property in Pershore had been granted for the monastery.

At the time of the formation of the Domesday Sur-

Museum, copied from a fragment of a more extensive manuscript. MS. Cole, vol. xlv. p. 353.

Hiis temporibus translatio in civitate Wentana beatæ Eadburgæ corporis, monitu Alwardus comes, cognomento Wada, qui cænobium Perscorense prius ab impiis et infidelibus destructum, in honore Dei genetricis, egregie restauravit; reliquias beatæ virginis Eadburgæ ab Ailgiva tunc Wintoniæ abbatissa, c. libris datis, accipiens illuc detulit, ac in arca aurea, pulchro opere ædificata, cum magna laudum devotione, collocavit: ubi tanta miraculorum clarificatione refulsit, ut infra annum centum a diversis infirmitatibus liberarentur ægri; atque illuc, magis quam Wintoniæ, ubi major pars corporis ejus fuisse perhibetur, signorum gloria, viguit."

ⁱ The manuscript leaf already quoted from one of Cole's manuscripts, notices an early injury to Pershore monastery by an earl of the name of Aelferus. "A.D. dccccclxxvj. Quidam consul nequissimus, Aelferus nomine, Persorensem ecclesiam, et plures per Angliam ecclesias miserabiliter destruxit, quas rex Eadgarus et Adelwoldus reverentissimus construxerunt."

^h Dr. Nash says, "Oddo and Doddo were two Mercian dukes, who died about the year 725; the latter was buried at Pershore. The former was a great benefactor to this abbey. He became a monk at Deerhurst in Gloucestershire, where Pershore had a large estate, which now belongs to Westminster; his bones were removed here. Duke Delfere usurped the possessions of this monastery, and died eaten up by vermin; whereupon Oddo restored the same, and vowed celibacy, least any son of his should be guilty of the like sacrilege." "Earl Wada," he adds, "bought the relics of St. Eadburgh, to whom a chapel was here consecrated, and the abbey was afterwards called the convent of St. Mary and St. Eadburgh." Drawn & Engraved by John Coney.

Pershore Monastery, Worcester-shire, D. W. W.

vey, the church of Pershore, which is there called St. Mary's only, is stated to have possessed five hides at Kvlge, and seventeen at Havochesberie, in Gloucestershire: the former property valued at a hundred shillings per year; the latter, which had previously produced sixteen pounds, was reduced to ten pounds. In Worcestershire, the monks held the manor of Pershore, consisting, with the berewicks or hamlets of Ciuintone, Edbritone, Wadberge, Broctune, Edbretintune, Wicha, and Cumbritone, of twenty-six hides. In Wiche, one of the hamlets, they had a salt-refinery which yielded thirty mits, or three hundred bushels, of salt. In Beolege the monks held twenty-one hides; twenty in Sture; thirty in Bradeweie; three hides in Lege; and five hides at Matma, one of which was in Herefordshire.

Several of the hides in Pershore itself were tenanted. One hide and a half appears to have been leased for two lives: and another hide in Wadberge one of the berewicks to Pershore, for three lives.

Circset, church-payment or contribution for the first fruits of harvest, appears to have been made to the church of Pershore for no fewer than three hundred hides.

Exclusive of the twenty two hides in Gloucestershire, Pershore abbey appears to have held a hundred and five hides in Worcestershire; of a hundred of which, the "forisfacturæ," or payments for transgressions, were among the privileges of the abbey.

The revenue of the monastery, at the formation of the Survey, appears to have amounted to seventy-nine pounds, falling short, by near a third, of the produce of the lands in the time of King Edward the Confessor.^a

In 1223, upon St. Urban's day, the abbey was burnt a second time, while undergoing some repairs.^b A new structure was not consecrated till 1239.^c

In 1288, a third fire broke out, which consumed not only the abbey, but almost the whole of the town of Pershore.^d

In one of these last fires, the Register containing an account of the estates, and all the customs and privileges of the abbey, was destroyed: a commission was in consequence held to ascertain the same by the evidence of witnesses. The depositions upon this occasion of the prior and monks, form a document of some curiosity. They are given in the Appendix.^e

Edward the First appears to have visited this monastery in 1294.^f

In 1299, the Bishop of Landaff was called upon to reconcile the church: the performance of divine service in it having been suspended for a reason given below.^g

The following is a summary of the royal Charters granted to this monastery:

King John, in his first year, granted to the monks certain liberties in this county and that of Gloucester.^h King Henry the Third, on the fourth of May in the eleventh year of his reign, gave to God, our blessed Lady, and St. Edburgh of Pershore, and to the abbat and monks there, a fair on the feast of St. Edburgh, and two days following; now kept June 26th, according to ancient custom, in the church-yard of Holy Cross. The same king, Dr. Nash adds, seems to have granted them a fair the preceding year. He also granted them a market and fair at Broadway in the county of Gloucester, and another at Hawkesbury. Henry the Third likewise granted the abbat and convent free warren in Pershore, Leigh, Mathon, Alderminster, Cowleigh, Hawkesbury, and Wadborough, by a Charter dated at Windsor Aug. 8th, in the thirty-fifth year of his reign. King Edward the Second, reciting the Charters of Henry III. and John, discharged the abbat of Pershore, with his convent, and all their lands in the counties of Worcester and Gloucester, from all incumbrances, exactions, &c. dated at York 20th July, in the sixteenth year of his reign. Henry the Fifth, rehearsing and renewing a former patent from King Edward the Third, ordained that, during the vacancy of the abbey, the prior and convent should govern the estate of this monastery: his Charter to this effect being dated July 16th, in the fourteenth year of his reign. Henry the Sixth finally ratified the same in his thirty-first year: reciting the Charters of the 11th and 35th of Henry the Third.ⁱ

ABBATS of PERSHORE.

FULBERTUS, or FOLDBRIHT, was the first abbat. He is mentioned in King Edgar's Charter; before the granting of which he must have been dead. The Annals of Worcester, however, name him under the year 983.^k

BRICTEGUS, the next abbat upon record, occurs as a witness at the end of Canute's Charter to Croyland abbey, in 1032.^l In 1033, he succeeded Leofsi as bishop of Worcester:^m and died on the 13th kal. of Jan. 1038.ⁿ

ALFRIC, or ALFRICUS, occurs abbat in 1044. Dr. Nash says, abbat

ROGER died A. D. 1074.^o

EADMUND died on the 17th of the kalends of July, 1085.^p

TURSTINUS, or THURSTAN, a monk of Gloucester, who immediately succeeded, died in 1087.^q

GUIDO, or WIDO, abbat of Pershore, was deposed by Archbishop Anselm in the council held at Westminster in 1102.^r

WILLIAM was elected abbat in 1138.^s Willis, in a manuscript Note to the account of Pershore, in his History of the Mitred Abbeys, mentions

THOMAS as abbat of Pershore between the years 1140 and 1161, in the time of Pope Eugenius the Third.^t

REGINALD occurs in 1162.^u

ANSELM became abbat.^b He died in 1203. He had been originally a monk at Reading. Willis and Stevens, after him, say

SIMON was confirmed as abbat at Worcester on All Saints day, 1203.^c At all events, the same ceremony was performed in the same place for

GERVASIUS, as abbat, in 1204.^d Leland notices him as a considerable benefactor to the church of Persnore.^e The Annals of Worcester, noticing his death in 1234, call him, by mistake, Gilbert. His successor was

ROGER DE RADEBY, called in the Annals of Worcester simply ROGER.^f Cole calls him Roger de Rudeley. Dr. Nash places his death in 1251. The royal assent, however, was given to the election of his successor, ELERIUS, a monk of Fescamp, and prior of Cogges in Oxfordshire, March 19th, 1249.^g This Elerius is sometimes called GLER. Cole, in his Notes transcribed from Willis's own copy of the Mitred Abbeys, calls him Elfricus; as does Stevens.^h Elerius had other preferment from the king.ⁱ His cession as abbat of Persnore was announced Oct. 24th, 1262; and on November the 12th following, the temporalities of the monastery were restored to

HENRY DE BIDEFORD.^k

HENRY DE CALDEWELL had the temporalities restored to him Dec. 3d, 1274.^l He died at his manor of Leye, or Leya, on the 6th of the nones of March, 1289: when

WILLIAM DE LEGHE, or LEGA, cellarer of the house, succeeded him.^m The temporalities were restored to abbat Leghe March 12th, 1289.

WILLIAM DE HERWYNTON, or HERVINGTON, received the royal assent to his election May 16th, 1304; the temporalities being restored on June 5th following.ⁿ He resigned his abbacy in 1340. In which year, on November the 21st, the temporalities were restored to

THOMAS DE PYRITON.^o Upon his death, the royal assent was given to the election of

PETER DE PENDOCK on Aug. 5th, and the temporalities restored on Aug 30th, 1349.^p

PETER DE BRADEWAYE received the royal assent to his election Sept. 9th, 1363; the temporalities being restored September the 23d.^q Upon his death, a licence was granted for a fresh election Sept. 18th, 1379; and on Nov. 17th following the temporalities were restored to

WILLIAM DE NEWYNTON, not NEWTON, became

abbat in the month of May, 1413. The temporalities were restored to him on June 3d that year.^s Willis, by the mis-reading of an inscription which still remains at Persnore, made 1434 the year of his election.^t Abbat Newynton was the founder of the south cross-aisle of the abbey church.

EDMUND HERT had the temporalities of the monastery restored to him April 22, 1456.^u Upon his resignation,

ROBERT STANWEY was elected abbat; to whom the temporalities were restored April 26, 19 Edw. IV.^x He was succeeded by

JOHN PYPLETON, whom Dr. Nash calls Pibleton; to whom the temporalities of the monastery were given Aug. 27th, 1497.^y Upon his death,

WILLIAM COMPTON was made abbat March 25th, 1504.^z During his time the appropriation of the church of Mathon to the monastery took place, A. D. 1512.^a His successor,

JOHN STANEWELL, or STONYWELL, had the temporalities of the monastery delivered to him Oct. 16th, 1527.^b Wood says, "He was born in the parish of Longdon, in Staffordshire, within which parish is a small hamlet called Stonywell, from a well wherein is at the bottom a large stone, which seems to be no more than a little rock, whence springs the water that supplies that well. This person," he adds, "being much addicted to learning and religion when a youth, was taken into a certain monastery (Persnore, in Worcester-shire, as it seems), and was bred a Benedictine monk. Thence he was sent to Cloucester college in Oxon, where the monks of Persnore had an apartment for their novices to be trained up in academical learning: of which college he was, when in his elder years, prior for a time; and was then noted among those of his profession for his learning and strict course of life. Afterwards, being doctor of divinity,^c he became lord abbat of Persnore, and at length a bishop (suffragan only, as it seems), under the title of Episcopus Poletensis.^d He paid his last debt to nature, after he had arrived to a great age, in the beginning of fifteen hundred and fifty-three, and was buried according to his will^e in a chapel built by him within the parish church of St. James in Longdon before mention'd. For the use of which chappel, and the parishioners of Longdon, he bequeathed all his books, his two chalices, his crewets, holywater stock, vestments, albes, altar-cloths, with other things belonging to his private chappel in Longdon."^f

Dr. Nash, from Willis, says, he, with John Flodbury prior, Robert Cheltene sub-prior, Richard Langley firmarer, and seventeen others, subscribed to the king's supremacy Aug. 20th, 1534.^g Different names to these,

VOL. II.

"The principal approach to it was downe the Lice-lane, so called from the Saxon lice, a corpse, because the corpses were, and still are, carried down that lane to be buried.

"The gate-way, or entrance, on the north part still remains: this led to the west end of the abbey church, which probably extended eastward above two hundred and fifty feet; the base of the tower, and the two arms, from north to south, about a hundred and twenty feet.

"St. Mary's chapel was on the east side, behind the altar, and increased the length of the cross. St. Edburgh's chapel was on the south side.

"The site of the abbey contained about ten acres.

"There was a chapel of St. John Baptist within the abbey, to which Christopher Westerdale left 18*d.* for an annual mass,^d called St. John's Mass."^e

Dr. Nash says, the seal the convent bore, was the Virgin sitting on a throne, with our Saviour in her arms; above, on the right hand, an angel adoring; on the left, a star just over our Saviour's head; below, on the right hand, St Edburgh and the Virgin; on the left an angel standing, and offering up a ring; lower, under an arch, a priest, holding in his right hand a chalice, and in his left a book open. On the circumference, SIGILLUM BEATÆ MARIE ET SANCTÆ EADBURGÆ PERSORIENSIS. The abbats, he adds, often varied the seal; for sometimes it was a cross raguled.^f

The Register Book of the monastery of Pershore remaining in the Augmentation Office consists of one hundred and sixteen vellum leaves, and contains entries of deeds and other documents, none of which seem earlier than the thirteenth century.^g It was not deposited in its present repository until the year 1620; and its discovery and manner of being placed in the office are not unworthy

"Memorandum quod 16^o. die Maij, A. The volume, probably, was tendered by the hands of its discoverer (Mr. Bell) to Sir Fulke Grevile, under treasurer and chancellor of the exchequer (so constituted 12 Jac. I.), who issued the following warrant to the then keeper of the Records in the Augmentation Office :

"After my hartie comendacons I send yo^u. by this messinger, John Reading, an auntient ligier booke of written hand in pchemt. sometime belonging to the late dissolved monasterie of Parshore in the countie of Worcester, w^{ch}. having been kept heretofore in private gentlemen's handes of that countie, I holde fitt to be taken and reserved amongst the like ligier bookes and other his ma^{ties} records in your custody. service, I bydd yoⁿ. hartely farewell. From Whitehall the last of May 1620.

Yo^r. loving freind,
F^ULKE GREVYLL.

To my loving ffreind William Mynterne, Esquire, keeper of his maⁱties Records, comonly called the Records of the Augmentacōn Court of th' Escheq^r. in Westm', and to his deputy and deputies in the said office, and to e^vy of them."

Notwithstanding this warrant from the chancellor of the exchequer, it seems to have been necessary to have the authority of a baron of the court to lodge it in the office, before the keeper of the Records could with propriety receive it: accordingly, the fiat of Mr. Baron Denham is thus given:

"Mr. Mynterne, receive this accordinge to the warrant. 20 Junij 1620.

Jo. DENHAM."

It is not unworthy of observation, that at the same time that the baron directed the reception of this book into the Augmentation Office, he seems carefully to have examined it; and finding, at p. 59, an entry of a much more modern date than the remainder of the volume, he has thus written: "Lett not this that hath byn rased or newe wrytten be copyed forth to be made authentique."

Jo. DENHAM.

NUM. I.

PERSCORÆ fundavit, et perfecit cœnobium, tempore regis Edgari, Egelwardus, dux Dorsatensis, minimè parcus animo, sed effuso in largitatem studio. Verùm et illud, ut cætera, quanto succubuerit detrimento miserabile, plus sui medietate diminutum, partem divitum occupavit ambitio, partem sepelivit oblivio, majusculam portionem reges Edwardus, et Willielmus contulere Westmonasterio. Habentur hic aliquanta felicitis Edburgæ ossa, celebranturque instanti reverentia, quod ibi frequentiori quàm aliàs miraculorum meruit gloria.

ANNO Domini dclxxx. sancta Hilda abbatissa migravit. His igitur diebus monasteria Persoræ et Gloverniæ à duobus fratribus Oswaldo et Ostrico, dicti regis gloriosi Athelredi ministris nepotibus, fundata fuerunt, scil. Persora ab Oswaldo, Glovernia ab Hostrico. Circa hoc tempus ab incarnatione Domini dclxxxix. fuerunt anni, quo tempore fundata est et constructa.

[Ibid. p. 284.]

ANNO Domini mii. introitus fuit Persorensis novæ ecclesiæ post combustionem.

Anno Domini 1198. obiit Simon abbas Persorensis, cui successit Anselmus.

Anno Domini 1223. ecclesia de Persore combusta est in die S. Urbani.

Anno Domini 1234. Gervasius abbas Persore, qui multa bona ecclesiæ suæ perquisivit, in festo Paschæ obiit, cui successit Rogerus vir simplex et timens Deum.

Anno Domini 1251. Rogerus abbas Persore obiit, cui successit Elerius monachus Fiscamensis, eschaetor regis Angliæ effectus super totam Angliam citra ripam Trentæ.

Anno Domini 1241. Recepta fuit assisa de advocacy ecclesiæ sanctæ Andree de Persore, pro abbate et conventu ejusdem loci, et sic liberati sunt ab oppressionibus abbatis Westmonasterii et Gulielmi de Bello-campo.

Anno Domini 1255. Elerius abbas Persore per totam Walliam in expeditione et executione crucis et decimæ domino regi concessæ; susceptusque est à Lewelino principe North Walliæ, et à cæteris magnatibus ejusdem terræ ubique honorificè.

Anno Domini 1259. In capella sanctæ Mariæ de Pershore, cum, veteribus fundamentis deturbatis, ad novum pavimentum construendum terra foderetur, inventa sunt ossa Oddæ comitis vel ducis, ejusdem loci quondam fundatoris, in quadam cista plumbea, quæ ibidem post secundam ecclesiæ combustionem fuerunt sepulta, et intus in quodam plumbo tale scriptum invenitur epitaphium.

"Odda dux quondam, priscis temporibus Ædwinus vocatus in baptismo, cultor Dei, qui monachus effectus fuit ante mortem suam, hîc requiescit. Sit ei gaudium in pace cum Christo Deo, Amen."

Hic est Odda, de quo in superioribus pleniùs suo declaratur loco, qui Delfero consuli nequissimo jure successerat hæreditario. Hic Delferus, magna usus insolencia, Persorensē ecclesiam, sicut et cæteras plures per Angliam, graviter et læsit et minuit quod ejus exitus horribilis miserè probavit; consumptus namque vermibus quos pediculos vocamus, miserabili fine vitam miserè terminavit. Oddo verò dux succedens ei in hæreditatem, et intelligens illud inauditum malum quod invasori illi ecclesiasticarum possessionum contigerat, non tantum terram illam quam ecclesiæ Persorensi nequissimus ille abstulerat benignè reddidit, sed et virginitatem Deo imperpetuum vovit, ne hæres suus ecclesiam Dei exhereditaret; quo apud Deorhurste monachato et defuncto, Persore allatus est, et ibidem in sarchophago optimo positus, anno Domini 1056. cujus ossa hoc anno videlicet incarnationis 1259. in crastino sanctæ Barbaræ virginis inventa sunt, ut prædictum est.

Inventa sunt et juxta eadem, die proximo huic sequente, in alio plumbo, ossa venerabilis patris Foldbrithi primi quondam abbatis Persore, quæ post prædictam combustionem, quæ fuit anno Domini 1223. dum ecclesia nova fabricaretur, ibidem cum aliis ossibus fuerunt recondita, qui, ut scripta tradunt, in vita sancti Oswaldi episcopi Wigorniae, cum hujus Foldbrithi corpus exanime componeretur in feretro, astantibus qui exequiis invigilabant, revixit et erexit se, cujus à quodam in virtute fidei nihil hæsitans, in verbo Domini conjurato spiritu, ut si ex Deo esset, novitatem facti et reversionis causam aperiret; inquit defunctus, acturus gratias beato Oswaldo redii, cujus dignitas meritorum in conspectu Domini mihi veniam impetravit delictorum, nam à beato

Benedicto in visionem Dei perductus, cum mihi trepidaret conscientia, accusaret vita, accepi à Domino pro meritis Oswaldi immunitatem poenæ, securitatem salutis. Quibus dictis exti . . . uit et accepto viatico Domini corporis dimidium diem supervixit; sicque iterato obitu obdormivit in Domino secundo id. Augusti.

OSWALDUS primùm instituit canonicos sæculares apud Persore.

Postea fuit ibidem chorus monachorum, rursus canonici inducti. Postea monachi per Edgarum. Elferus abstulit prædia monachis. Odda comes ejus filius, restituit.

Monasterium conflagravit et à monachis desertum est.

Monachi Westmonasterienses prædia usurpabant.

Wada comes attulit reliquias sanctæ Edburgæ. Et per Oswaldum episcopum Fulbrightus abbas inductus.

IN

HAMPSHIRE.

YDE Abbey, anciently called NEW MINSTER, was originally situated within the precincts of the cemetery on the north side of the Old Minster, or cathedral of Winchester: where it stood no less than two hundred years from the time of its first building, till the removal of the house to a spot called HYDE, without the city walls; when it obtained its present name.

In the collision of testimonies there is some difficulty in ascertaining whether King Alfred really began the building of this abbey, or only projected its construction.

Bishop Tanner, on the authority of Leland,^a says, King Alfred founded here first only a house and chapel for the learned monk Grimbold, whom he had brought out of Flanders;^b but afterwards projected, and by his will ordered a noble church, or religious house, to be built in the cemetery already mentioned, and designed that Grimbold should preside over it. Malmesbury, speaking of this monastery, says, "quod quondam rex ELFREDUS mente conceperat, et EDWARDUS filius edificaverat."^c

Ingulphus, however, states that Alfred placed Grimbold, himself, over the monastery which he had built:^d and the Annals of Winton, as printed in the Anglia Sacra, refer still more pointedly to Alfred as the actual founder in his life-time.^e

Bishop Tanner is certainly wrong in asserting that the construction of Newminster was ordered in King Alfred's will.^f

The monastery was undoubtedly finished to the honour of the Holy Trinity, the Virgin Mary, and St. Peter, by King Edward the elder, the son of Alfred, in the year 903;^g the king placing therein secular canons:

and the church being consecrated by Archbishop Plegmund.^h Edward translated the remains of Alfred and Alsuitha, his father and mother, into the new church immediately after its completion.ⁱ

GRIMBALD, the first superior of the monastery, died in the same year in which the church was consecrated, on the eighth of the ides of July.^k

The ground upon which the New Minster was first erected is stated by William of Malmesbury to have been so valuable, that a mark of gold was paid for every foot upon which the building was constructed.^l Rudborne, a later writer, informs us that the number of feet extended to one thousand eight hundred and eighty-four.^m Edward the elder, in his Charter dated at Hamtone in the year 903, confirms Malmesbury's statement; adding that the extent of ground obtained, partly from the members of the old minster, and partly from certain inhabitants, was three acres and three virgates. From the preamble to this Charter, it should seem as if the Church of New Minster had been planned, and in part executed, by King Alfred, but that the building of the Offices and the endowment of the monastery were the deeds of Edward.

Edward appears to have endowed the monastery with a hundred cassates of land and a church at Myceldefer, together with the profits of its hundred;ⁿ the manor of Stratton, consisting of nine hides; Burcote, with four hides and a half; Popham, containing eight hides; ten hides at Woedemanecote; ten hides and the church at Candeverre; eight hides and a chapel at Cramborne; four hides at Draitone; three hides a virgate and a half at Swerwetone; six hides at Northameton; three hides at Nortone by Seleborne; Slastede and Fachburi, with a hide and a half; the manor called Anna, consisting of fifteen hides, with its church; the manor called Colengaburna, consisting of fifty cassates, also with its church; the manor and church of Ceoseldene, with forty cassates; certain land at Durlea; and the plot which formed the site of the monastery.^o His successors, Athelstan, Edmund, and Edred, are also chronicled as benefactors.^p

ⁿ Two Charters of Edward the elder relating to Myceldefer, or Mucheldever, will be found in the Appendix, Numm. III. V. The first dated as early as the year 900, the second in 904. It is evident that at the time of framing the second Charter the canons were settled in their residence; the re-grant of the land being "ad refectorium fratrum Christo inibi servientium." In the Charter of 900 the monastery is mentioned as dedicated to the Holy Trinity only: in the second to St. Peter.

^o See Num. IV.

^p See Edmund's Charter, Num. VI.

The first foundation of New Minster was for secular canons; in which form the establishment continued for nearly sixty years. The canons, however, neglecting the care of the church and the celebration of the divine offices, left the latter to be performed by inferior priests, who were hired for the purpose at an easy rate, while they themselves lived away from the monastery, and spent its revenues at a distance. Such is the statement in the Annals of Winchester: though Rudborne brings a heavier charge against the canons. He represents them as trampling on their vows of celibacy, and contracting illicit marriages. Athelwold, bishop of Winchester, supported by the authority of King Edgar, endeavoured to remedy these disorders, at first, without absolutely changing the institution of the place. He began by dismissing the non-resident canons, and bestowing their prebends on the clergy who had hitherto supplied their places; but these also becoming rich and independent, were found no better than their predecessors. In conclusion, the civil and ecclesiastical authority both joining in the measure, the constitution of this establishment underwent a thorough alteration; the canons who refused to take the cowl and submit to monastic discipline were dismissed, and their places supplied by a colony of Benedictine monks from Abingdon in Berkshire; over whom was placed, in quality of abbat, a man of great merit and talents, Æthelgar, or Algar, who was afterwards successively promoted to the sees of Selsey and Canterbury. This change is placed by the Annals of Winchester under the year 959.^a Bishop Tanner dates the expulsion of the canons in 963: the Annals of Hyde in the Harleian manuscript, in the year 965. The laws which King Edgar gave the monks of Hyde, as well as his Charter of endowment, are dated in the year 966.^b

Edgar's fresh endowment appears to have consisted

^a "Anno DCCCCLIX. Edgarus frater Edwii filius Edmundi rex Angliæ. Non fuit in Angliâ monasterium sive ecclesia, cujus non emendaret cultum vel ædificia. In Wintoniensi ecclesia et Novo Monasterio, quod nunc ab eventu dicitur de Hida, monachos posuit loco clericorum; quia clerici illi nomine tenus canonici frequentationem chori, labores vigiliarum et ministerium altaris vicariis suis utcumque sustentatis relinquentes, et ab ecclesiæ conspectu ne dicam Dei plerumque absentes septennis, quicquid de præbendis percipiebant locis et modis sibi placitis absumebant. Nuda fuit ecclesia intus et extra; quia vicarii non habebant unde eam vestirent et tegerent, nec præbendarii qui prædicebantur talibus poterant intendere: vix inveniretur unus et is sorte coactus, qui vel pauperem pallam aut calicem quinque solidorum conferret altari. Rex Edgarus ista considerans, et dolens tam divites elemosinas collatas ecclesiæ non in ecclesiâ nec in ministris ecclesiæ nec in pauperibus expendi, mandavit trasonibus et sæpe consuluit per episcopum eorum Athelwoldum et per Dunstanum archiepiscopum; ut bona ecclesiæ non sine causâ percipientes in ecclesiâ perpetuo facerent stationem. Canonicis mandata regis et monita surdâ aure transeuntibus, et nolentibus singulis pro annuo canone mille librarum auri vel per annum esse claustralibus, rex instans proposito, et malens per canonicos quàm per aliud genus arctioris religionis administrari negotium, ablatas quibusdam eorum præbendas contulit vicariis, quos viderat in ecclesiâ perstantes assiduò. Sed et illi promoti in canonicatum, vicarios sibi facientes, facti sunt similes vel vagaciores et sæculares prioribus. Rex itaque circa correptionem canonicorum nihil proficiens, postquam genuinum fregit in illis, de ecclesia et de Novo Monasterio illos ejiciens, et monachos in locis illorum constitutens, illorum dispersionem istorum aggregationem à papa Johanne XIII. ratam haberi meruit et confirmari. His ita factis, rex Edgarus Novum Monasterium ampliavit possessionibus; et Wintonensi ecclesiæ dedit manerium quod dicitur Awintona, et apud Itinstokam x. hidas, et apud Madanlegam iii. hidas, et apud Breoudunam xiii. hidas, et apud Aderingeseldam ii. hidas, et apud Thucam vii. hidas." Ann. Winton. Angl. Sac. tom. i. pp. 289, 290.

^b These instruments form the principal part of the contents of the beautiful MS. written in gold letters, marked Vitellius A. VIII. in the Cottonian library, which formerly belonged to the monastery of Hyde itself. The size of the manuscript is large octavo: the contents occupying forty-two pages of vellum. On the reverse of the first leaf is an illumination in gold and colours, upon a purple ground, representing the Deity surrounded by angels, with the figure of the king below, holding a book in his left hand. On the opposite page, in gold uncials, these lines:

"Sic celso residet solio qui condidit astra
Rex venerans Eadgar pronus adorat eum."

The illumination is engraved in Strutt's work on Regal Antiquities, edit. 1773, Pl. I. The laws given by Edgar to the monastery were first published by Spelman in his Concilia, fol. 1639, tom. i. P. i. p. 435; and see also Wilkins, tom. i. p. 240. Both Instruments have been collated, for the present work, with the originals.

For the space of an entire century after its subjection to the rule of St. Benedict, Dr. Milner observes, New Minster affords few or no materials for history; the best proof that the rule was well observed in it, and that the monks, intent on their spiritual advancement, took no part in the great political events, which, during that period, convulsed the kingdom.^d Alwy, however, the brother of Earl Godwin, who had succeeded to the abbacy in the latter part of Edward the Confessor's reign, taking part with his nephew Harold upon the Norman invasion, and accompanying him to the field of Hastings with twelve monks and twenty soldiers, was there slain. This conduct is said so to have enraged the Conqueror, that he treated New Minster with more than common severity, seizing upon all its estates, which he reserved either for his own use, or bestowed upon the officers of his army:^e keeping the abbey itself in his own hands, without allowing a new abbat to be chosen for two years.^f Amongst other property of these monks, says Dr. Milner, he alienated what they could least spare, namely, part of their narrow inclosure, which, we have seen, had been purchased at so high a price. On this situation, being the north-west end of the present churchyard, including the square, he erected a new palace, or probably enlarged that which the West Saxon kings had heretofore occupied near it. Having gratified himself in this point, and his resentment being at length appeased, he permitted the monks to proceed to the election of a superior, when the choice fell upon Wulfric. He likewise restored part of the confiscated abbey lands, and gave other possessions in exchange for the remaining part of them.^g

ter's Winchester, as the abbey is called, recorded in the Domesday Survey.

In Sussex, the abbey held Svesse, which paid tax for twenty-seven hides; in Lewes, ten burgesses were tenants of the abbey, beside numerous villani, who paid their rents in kind; at Cloninctune, in Estocbrige hundred, the abbey held five hides; with a single "haga," or house, in Chichester.^a In Surrey, five hides at Sandestede. The great property, however, of the abbey was in Hampshire. In Manesbury hundred, in that county, twenty hides were held in Candevre; in Sunburne hundred, one hide at Fugelerestune, and two hides and a half at Lechtford; in Miceldevre hundred, at Miceldevre eighty-three hides and half a virgate; at Ordie seven hides; in Neteham hundred, five hides at Aultone; in Cillei hundred, five hides at Wortinges, and seven hides at Bighetone; in Portesdon hundred, ten hides at Betametone; in Menestoch hundred, three hides at Lammere, and eight at Warneford; in Basingstoc hundred, two hides at Lichepet; in Manebrige hundred, eight hides at Stancham, with four hides and a virgate of land at Clere; at Taceberie half a hide; in Andovre hundred, at Anna eight hides; in Overetun hundred, at Laurochestoche six hides and half a virgate. In Berkshire, ten hides at Cedeneord, and ten at Sotwelle. In Wiltshire, ten hides at Maneforde, and thirty-two carucates at Coleburne. In Dorsetshire, seventeen carucates at Pidrie.

The quantity of land comprised in these numerous possessions amounted to no less than two hundred and ninety-six hides and one virgate; producing at the formation of the Survey, the annual sum of 264*l.* 7*s.*

From the entries, however, in the Survey, it is clear that the abbey property had undergone a great change subsequent to the time of Edward the Confessor. In Edward's reign, at Suesse in Sussex the abbey had answered for thirty-eight hides which had been reduced to twenty-seven. At Sandestede in Surrey, for eighteen which had been brought to five. At Fugelerestune in Hampshire five hides had been reduced to one. At Lechtford the same number had been reduced to two and a half. At Miceldevre the abbey had answered, in the time of Edward the Confessor, for a hundred and six hides; these had been reduced to eighty-three hides and half a virgate. At Bighetone ten hides had been brought to seven. At Anna fifteen hides were reduced to eight.

King Edward the Confessor is recorded to have given to the monastery seventy-two acres of meadow at Ordie, together with another pasture of eighty acres. The Conqueror appears to have bestowed upon it Aultone. He also gave the monks the four hides and a virgate at Clere, as has been already noticed, in exchange for the land on which the royal palace stood. King William also gave Laurochestoche to the abbey in alms, for the souls of himself and his queen. Ezi, the sheriff, is stated to have given Taceberie in alms to the abbey before the Conqueror's arrival. Churches are mentioned on the abbey property at Svesse in Sussex, and at Bighetone, Betametone, Lammere, Staneham, Clere, and Laurochestoche in Hampshire.^b

The anger of the first William, says Dr. Milner, was not more injurious to this establishment than was the anger of the second William. During the whole of this unprincipled reign the New Minster was in the hands of the king's agent, Ralph Passflebere, who either sacrilegiously received the rents of it, for his master's use, or simoniacally sold them to the highest bidder. For the space of seven years the oppressed monks were forced to yield obedience to the unworthy Robert de Losinga, in quality of their abbat; his son Herbert, bishop of Norwich, having purchased this dignity of the corrupt minister, by way of a provision for his father.^c Matthew of Westminster alludes to this transaction in the following verses, under the year 1094:

"Surgit in ecclesia monstrum genitore Losinga,
Symonidum secta, canonum virtute resecta.
Petre nimis tardas, nam Symon ad ardua tentat:
Si præsens esses, non Simon ad alta volaret.
Proh dolor, ecclesiæ nummis venduntur et ære.
Filius est præsul, pater abbas, Simon uterque,
Quid non speremus si nummos possideamus?
Omnia nummus habet, quid vult facit, addit et aufert:
Res nimis injusta, nummis fit præsul et abba."^d

In King Henry the First the abbey of Newminster found a friend. Immediately upon his accession to the throne a regular abbat was chosen; and as the Old Minster, or priory of St. Swithin, by the zealous endeavours of its superiors, Simon and Godfrey, had then attained to a high reputation for piety and monastic discipline, a monk from thence, by name Hugh, was chosen to restore them in the New Minster; where a great relaxation is supposed to have taken place under the circumstances of the preceding reign.^e

Dr. Milner thinks the removal of the monastery in the reign of Henry the First to a new site, owed its origin to several causes: the principal one, however, seems to have been that the church being situated close to the Old Minster, or cathedral, continual differences arose between the inhabitants of the two monasteries, occasioned by the interruptions which each gave the other in the performance of the choral service, the ringing of their bells, &c.^f Their differences at last arose to so great a height that the religious of the New Minster thought fit, about the year 1110, to remove to a better and more quiet situation, on the north part of the city, called Hyde, or Hyde-meadow; where King Henry, at the instance of William Giffard, bishop of Winchester, had founded a stately abbey for them.^g

The situation which had been abandoned was surrendered into the king's hands, who transferred it to the bishop for the benefit of the cathedral monastery to which it had originally belonged.^h In return, the king, amongst other benefactions to the new abbey of Hyde, granted three additional days for the continuance of the fair upon St. Giles's hill, the profits of which were to be paid to it by the bishop. The king settled and confirmed the rights and privileges of this establishment in other particulars; amongst which, one regards the procession that the two monasteries had been accustomed to make, in common, to the church of St. James above the castle. This matter seemed then of so much importance as to be a subject of regulation in a royal Charter, in the manner above related.ⁱ

St. Peter, who had been accounted the patron of New Minster, was also the patron of Hyde abbey; though Bishop Tanner informs us that the latter was sometimes called the monastery of St. Grimbald,^k and sometimes of St. Barnabas.^l have been destroyed with the city in the year 1140. The site of it is stated in the same manuscript to have been given, in 1150, by Henry bishop of Winchester to the church of St. Laurence.

In 1140, or 1141, the civil war which broke out be-

^a From an entry in another page of the Domesday Survey for Sussex, it seems as if the manor of Treverde, then held by Earl Roger, had belonged, in the time of Edward the Confessor, to Newminster. See Domesd. tom. i. fol. 23.

Bishop Tanner adds in a Note, "It is said to be dedicated to St. Peter, St. Paul, and St. Columbanus. Hen. Salgrave MS."

tween Stephen and the Empress Maud appears to have spent its first fury upon Winchester. The abbey of Hyde and the nunnery of St. Mary Winchester were among the buildings destroyed.^a Henry de Blois, then bishop of Winchester, the base brother of Stephen, appears to have had no kindness at this juncture for the abbey of Hyde. He seized upon the gold and silver of the great cross, which had been given to New Minster by Canute,^b when it was melted in the flames which consumed the abbey. The conflagration itself, indeed, was laid to his charge: and the whole of his injuries to the monastery rated at the enormous sum (for that period) of 4862*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*^c A canonical process on all these accounts was instituted against him by the monks; and the appeal, in which the monks appear to have been assisted by Bernard abbat of Clareval, was so powerfully made, that as long after the burning of the monastery as the year 1151, the bishop was obliged to visit Rome, that he might endeavour to clear himself.^d The cross appears to have been re-consecrated by him in 1161.^e

The church and abbey of Hyde appear to have been rebuilt with great magnificence in the reign of Henry II.^f In fact, it soon became one of the more distinguished abbeys of the kingdom. Hence, says Dr. Milner, its superior was one of the twenty-four abbats who, as soon as parliaments began to be held, were summoned to attend them in the upper house.^g

The remaining history of Hyde abbey presents but few facts of importance.

Otto, the pope's legate, in the year 1267 placed the abbey under an interdict, which continued for several weeks, on account of a quarrel between his own servants and those of the monastery.^h

^a "Anno MCXLI. Stephanus rex à Roberto comite Gloucestræ captus est. ^c This cross is represented, together with portraits of Canute and his queen Ælfgiva, in the frontispiece to the Register of Hyde abbey at Stowe: an illumination of the very period. See it engraved in Strutt's Manners and Customs, vol. i. Pl. xxviii. In the centre of the illumination stands the cross, placed upon an altar. The figure of the Deity is represented above, with the Virgin Mary on one side, and St. Peter on the other. An angel appears placing a crown upon Canute's head, whose right hand has hold of the cross. Another angel is represented placing a mantle on the head of the queen, who stands on the opposite side of the altar. The words "Elgyfu Regina" and "Cnut Rex" designate the figures. RICHARD HALL received the temporalities April 7th, 1488, 3 Hen. VII. During his governance the abbey was visited by the Chapter of Canterbury, March 3d, 1501.

JOHN SULCOT, or SALTOT, alias CAPON, S. T. P., the last abbat, was elected on the 31st of May, 1530. Willis says he was translated from the abbey of Holm, in Norfolk. He had been educated in the university of Cambridge; and, having been instrumental in engaging his university to comply with the king's divorce, he was promoted on the 19th April, 1534, to the bishoprick of Bangor, with which he obtained leave to hold his abbacy in commendam. He adds, that for his good services at the Dissolution, and ready yielding up his monastery to the visitors in April, 1538, and procuring his monks, twenty-one in number, to join with him in the said surrender,^a he was furthermore preferred, July 31st, 1539, to the bishoprick of Salisbury, which he held for eighteen years; where, deceasing upon October 6th, 1557, he was buried in his cathedral.

The Cotton manuscript Cleopatra E. iv. fol. 49, contains certain orders for the monastery of Hyde, apparently at the time of the surrender. Different alterations and interlineations introduced into which are in the hand-writing of Lord Cromwell. The second paragraph appears to be crossed over by his hand. They are as follow:

"First it is released and permitted to the reverend father in God John Bishop of Bangor abbot of the monastery of Hide that he shall goo or ride at his libertie whither he will, and take iij. or iiij. of his brethern with him and kepe them as long as he shall think mete, or remitting them or any of them home to send for other in their stedes.

"Item, that suche housholedes as have been custumably kept in the said Mon. shalbe continued, soo as there sitt at the least every daye viij. brethern, in the frater iiij. and iiij. at a messe.

"Item that suche officers as have been accustomed to ride abroad to see the works of the Mon. or to kepe their courts, shall have the same libertie therin, with the said abbott lyeng thar, they were wont to have, so as they be only occupied in the oversight of the said works and kepyng of corts . . . otherwise in the same with such honestie and modest façon as behoveth men of religyon using themselves.

"Item that the saide abbot maye gyve the prior, sup-prior, and other officers, being suche as he shal think men of discreation, licence thre or foure tymes at the most in the yere to goo abroad for their refreshe and recreaçon taking w^t him or them so having licence foure of the brethern at the least, forseing that they reasort to no light or suspect places, ne that they use themselves in the said recreaçons otherwise thanne shal appertayn to honestie and their profession.

"Item whereas the saide Mon. is charged by the kings highnes in his gracious visitation to fynde thre scolers students at oon of the universities in England;

it shalbe lefull for the saide abbot during his lief to appoint and gyve exhibiçon to oone scoler and student to be accompted in the same nombre, being he an Englishe man, or borne w^tin some of the king's dominōns whiche shal applie his study and lerning in the parties of beyond the see, within any universitie there, so as by color herof the kings ordenance herin be not frustrated or deceyved."

At the Dissolution, the abbey of Hide was valued, according to Dugdale, at 865*l.* 18*s.* 0*½d.*: according to Speed at 865*l.* 1*s.* 6*½d.* The site was granted in the 37th Hen. VIII. to Richard Bethell.

Dr. Milner says, "Upon the dissolution of Hyde-abbey, many of its best estates, particularly the manors of Micheldever and Stratton, were obtained by Henry Lord Wriothesley afterwards earl of Southampton, from whose family they passed by marriage to that of the Russels, which was already gorged with church property. The site of the church and monastery was granted to Richard Bethel, after the term of a lease made to the aforesaid Lord Wriothesley. What the intent of that lease was we may easily judge, namely, that he might have leisure to dispose of whatever was saleable upon the premises. In conformity with this plan, he was in such haste to pull down this magnificent fabric, that Leland, when he visited the city a very few years after, spoke of the abbey as of a fabric that had existed, but then existed no longer. 'In this suburbe stode the great abbay of Hyde, and hath yet a parochie chirche.'"^b

In Camden's time the ruins of the monastery were still of some extent. At present the remains consist of some ruinous out-houses, a gateway, and a large barn, apparently of the twelfth century, supposed to have been the abbat's hall. The gateway, which has a flat arch, is of the fifteenth century. The bridewell of the city of Winchester has been in part erected upon the site of the church and choir. Many capitals of columns, heads, and other ornaments, which have been dug out of the ruins of Hyde, are to be seen in different parts of the city, and particularly at the bridewell itself; two stone coffins preserved at which were engraved in the title-page to the second volume of the History of Winchester.

Of the REGISTERS of HYDE ABBEY, that in letters of gold, which forms the Cottonian manuscript Vesp. A. viii. has been already described.

Another Chartulary of great antiquity is that which is called Hyde Abbey Book, written upon sixty-three leaves of vellum, now in the library of the marquis of Buckingham at Stowe. This is the same manuscript which Bishop Tanner notices as being, in 1710, in the possession of Walter Clavel, Esq. It was afterwards the property of the Rev. Mr. North, from whom it went to his executor, the Rev. Dr. Lort, and by him was presented to Thomas Astle, Esq. in 1770. Mr. Astle's manuscripts were purchased, under a clause in his will, by the late marquis of Buckingham.^c

Among the Cottonian manuscripts there is also another volume, of the smallest quarto size, marked Titus D. xxvii. prefixed to which is a Calendar, written about the time of the Conquest. From the obits of many of the early abbats contained in this Calendar, it is evident that the book belonged to the Monastery of Hyde.

^b Lel. Collect. tom. iv. p. 148.

An impression of the SEAL of this monastery, though not quite perfect, was exhibited to the Society of Antiquaries Dec. 11th, 1817, by Mr. Plumpton Wilson. In the area of the obverse was a sort of canopy of Gothic tracery, separated into three divisions. In the centre, the figure of St. Peter seated, having a book in his left hand, and upholding a double key with his right; his head mitred; beneath his feet the words S. PETRUS. Within the division to his right was the figure of a king crowned, bearing in his left hand the representation of a church, with the words REX EDWARDUS at the side. On the left of St. Peter was another figure of a king crowned, the right hand lifted up, and the left hand bearing a sceptre. The name, formerly at the side, was gone, but was probably either Rex Aluredus or Rex Ed- garus. The inscription round this side of the seal was imperfect, viz. SIGILL CCE . S . . . PETRI DE HYDA JUXTA WYNTON. The reverse represented three other figures, also placed within niches of Gothic architecture, the tops of which were more triangular than those of the divisions on the obverse. Under the centre figure, bearing a staff with a cross at the end, were the words S. BARNABAS. On the right of St. Barnabas was a figure, the inscription behind which had been broken away: probably S. Grimbaldus. On his left a figure, with the words S. VALENTINUS at the side. The inscription round this side of the seal, as far as it remained, was HYDA PATRONUM JUGI PRECE T HORUM.

EST etiam in eadem civitate (Wintonia sc.) monasterium, quod quondam rex Elfredus mente conceperat, et Edwardus filius edificaverat, et in eo canonicos posuerat, Grimbardo quondam Flandrensi suadente, qui ibidem magna gloria humatus, sanctus prædicatur et creditur. Sed beatæ memoriæ Ethelwoldus, canonicis expulsis, monachos posuit, præficiens eis abbatem, Edgarum nomine. Ad hujus monasterii officinas instituendas sufficiens terræ spatium ab episcopo Denewlfo et canonicis illius temporis mercatus supradictus rex, ad unumquemque pedem mancā auri publico pondere pensitavit. Et erant ambæ ecclesiæ sic vicinæ parietibus contiguæ, ut voces canentium aliæ obstreperent alijs. Undè tum propter hoc, tum propter cætera, infelix livor plurimas effodiebat causas, quibus non modicas invicem exculperent offensas. Quapropter nuper illud cœnobium extra urbem translatum sanius incolitur, liberiori insignitur.

Præterea construxit rex supradictus in eadem urbe sanctimonialium cœnobium, sed posterioribus annis per beatum Ethelwoldum ampliatus est locus ille, quibus præposuit Etheldritham virginem anum, quæ ad conjecturam somnii, quod mater ejus de aquila viderat aurea, multa de ipso prophetavit. Fuerat ibi antehac monasteriolum, in quo Edburga, regis Edwardi senioris filia, conversata et defuncta fuerat, sed tunc penè destructum. (&c.)

[MS. in Bibl. Cottoniana, sub effigie Vitellii E. XII.]

SANCTUS Ethelwoldus, jubente rege Edgardo, anno Domini DCCCCLXIII. à sancto Dunstano Dorobornensi, episcopus Wintoniæ consecratus est. Erant autem tunc in veteri monasterio canonici nephandis moribus implicati, elatione, insolencia, atque luxuria præventi, adeo ut nonnulli eorum dedignarentur missas suo ordine celebrare, repudiantes uxores quas illicitè duxerant, et alias accipientes, gulæ et ebrietati jugiter vacabant; quod minimè ferens episcopus, accepta à rege Edgardo licentia, expulit eos, et monachos de Abendoniam introduxit, quibus ipse abbas et episcopus fuit. Misit autem rex ministros suos clericis, præcipientes ut confestim loco renunciarent, aut habitum monasticum susciperent, qui nimis pavore conterriti, et vitam execrantes monasticam, intransibiles monachis illico exierunt; sed tamen postmodum tres illorum habitum susceperunt, nam usque nunc in gente Anglorum non erant monachi nisi in Glastonia et Abendoniam. Johannes Tinemuthen. in hist. aurea sub anno gratiæ supradicto.

[Ex veteri MS. in Bibl. Cottoniana, fol. 30.]

ALFREDUS juvenis elegantissimus, à patre suo rege Anglorum Athulpho Romam missus, à papa Leone in regem, et successorem paterni regni consecrandus et coronandus, apud alium Bertinum gratissimo suscipitur hospitio. Hic beati patris Grimbaldi, illius cœnobii præpositi, cæterorumque fratrum caritate, aliquot diebus decenter ad famuli Christi vestigia sedere, et ab eo divina documenta percipere gaudebat. Qui jam tunc magno amore, et nobis omnibus, ad regnum Anglicanum transferre decrevit monitorem suum Grimbaldum, si Deus prosperum faceret desiderium suum. Veniens igitur Romam, à summo pontifice regiam consecrationem accepit, et reversus in Angliam, post mortem patris totius regni principatum obtinuit. Qui statim misit nuntios ad monasterium patris Bertini, rogans abbatem et fratres, ut sibi mitterent venerabilem virum Grimbaldum, suum et totius Angliæ futurum consiliarium. Mittens ergo illum præclarus abbas cum fraternis lacrimis, susceptus est reverentissimè rege à summo pontifice, et ab omni ecclesiastica et sæculari dignitate. Rex autem tanta dilectione sanctum virum astrinxerat, ut quicquid in sua potestate optaret promptissimè concederet. Vir autem domini tantam clementissimi regis penès se attendens dilectionem, devotissimè petiit, ut in urbe Wentana, locum sibi competentem ad monasterium construendum tribueret, in quo cum ministris Dei divino servitio possit occupari. Rex verò munificus petitionibus libentissimè adquiescens, totum mox circa locum ad monasterium construendum animum intendit. Sed morte surripiente, propositum suum ad exequendum filio suo Edwardo dereliquit.

Edwardus, primus post mortem patris ad regalis solii stadium sublimatus, paterni voti non segnis executor, ad officinas monasterii supradicti construendas, tantum terræ, scilicet tres acras, et tres virgatas, quæ lingua Anglorum threo furlange, in aquilonari parte veteris monasterii à Denulfo ipsius civitatis episcopo, et canonicis illius ecclesiæ comparavit; et pro unoquoque pede unam marcham auri contulit. Moxque in arduam monasterii structuram totam mentis diligentiam impendit, et insignem ecclesiam, quæ Novum Monasterium appellatur ædificavit, atque totam fabricam infra biennium consummavit. Prædictam autem ecclesiam in honore summæ Trinitatis, genetricisque Christi Mariæ, atque apostoli Petri, benedictione pontificali devotissimè fecit dedicari. Ipsamque (congregatis in eadem canonicis sæcularibus Deo servituris) sanctissimo patri Grimbaldo juxta votum paternum regendam commisit. Expleto autem parvo tempore, deliberavit beatus Grimbaldus canonicos sæculares, ob nephandos eorum mores, eliminare omnino, atque monachos Deum timentes imponere. Sed prævidet diem transitus sui appropinquare, et ideo voluntatem suam in congregandis fratribus non potuit explere.

Erant autem ambo ecclesiæ parietibus contiguis innexæ, quod in illa civitate plurima in utraque ecclesia dovotionis et obsequii divini frequenter emergebant impedimenta. Ita siquidem unum monasterium alteri memoratur esse contiguum, quod vix unius hominis transitus inter ipsorum fundamenta haberetur. In uno enim choro clarè resultabat quod fratres psallebant in alio. Ita quod unà voces canentium vocibus constreperint aliorum, classico nihilominus campanarum maximam generante confusionem. Ita quod vix discerni poterat quando in uno loco, et quando in alio psallebatur. Aqua etiam, quæ per devexos civitatis vicos à porta confluens occidentali, circa situm monasterii prædicti in paludem horridam congregata, et in lutum ex flacone^a diutina condensata, foetorem ex se intollerabilem emittens, et sua corruptione aerem vicinum inficiens, fratribus in loco memorato Deo servientibus, plurima infirmitatum gravamina frequenter inferebat. Unde propter hæc et alia multa incommoda, illud monasterium, tempore regis Henrici senioris, et Willielmi Giffard, Wintoniensis episcopi, procurante illius monasterii abbate, extra urbem, in loco qui nunc Hyda vocatur, est translatum, videlicet anno Domini m^cxxi. Edwardus rex liberalissimus tantum eidem ecclesiæ contulit opum, prædiorum, ornamentorumque copiam, ut ditissimorum monasteriorum æquare videretur opulentiam.

Dedit enim Mucheldever, cum suo hundredo, et ecclesia, cum c. et vj. hydīs, utramque villam de Strattun cum novem hydīs, Burchet cum quatuor hidīs et dimidiam, Pophame cum duabus hydīs et dimidiam, Northampton cum vj. hydīs, Wodmanhot cum x. hydīs, Candever cum x. hydīs, Crameburne cum viij. hydīs, Drayton juxta Newton cum iiij. hydīs, Swereneton cum tribus hydīs et una virgata et dimidia, Sclatstede et Tachburye cum una hyda et dimidia, libera à consuetudine regia, Anna cum xv. hydīs, Colingborne cum l. hydīs, Chescleve cum xl. hydīs, et omnibus aliis pertinentiis et privilegiis. Hujus tempore beatus Adelwoldus, Wintoniensis episcopus, annuente rege Edgardo, canonicos sæculares lascivè et luxuriosè viventes, de novo expulsi monasterio, illicque monachos de Abindone introduxit regularitèr conversantes, illis ordinans abbatem discipulum suum, nomine Algara, qui postmodum episcopus apud Selseyam, ac deinde Cantuariæ episcopus effectus est. Athelfleda uxor et regina Edgari regis, mater sancti Edwardi regis et martyris, filia Ordmaris comitis, dedit Sandelstede cum xvij. hydīs et ecclesiam, et Lingedefelde cum sex hydīs et ecclesiam, et Langhurst cum duabus hydīs, cum pertinentiis et privilegiis. Ethelredus rex, filius Edgari regis et Estrilde reginæ, dedit Manggefords cum x. hydīs et ecclesiam, Lammere cum tribus hydīs et ecclesiam, et insulam Ethameton cum tribus hydīs, Badingburne cum quatuor hydīs, Melokedene cum tribus hydīs, Esthede cum una hyda, et insulam de Portesey, Fredington cum quatuor hydīs, Suthingwerke cum duabus hidīs, et apud Berton juxta Warewell unam hidam, et Aprinesforde unam hidam, et pratum quod jacet inter Kinges-mell quod dicitur Mune, et pratum de Suwetone, ob amorem Algari archiepiscopi, et pratum quod vocatum est Dennemarke ad quod jacet fluvius qui vocatur Ichen. Emma regina, uxor Adeldredi regis, mater sancti Edwardi London, dedit Pidele cum triginta hidīs, et ecclesiam cum pertinentiis et privilegiis, et scrinium auro et argento lapidibusque preciosis decentèr ornatum, sancti Valentini martiris caput continens preciosissimum. Edmundus rex, qui dicebatur Ferrei lateris, filius Etheldredi regis, dedit Wortinges cum quinque hidīs cum pertinentiis et privilegiis. Knuthus, rex Anglorum et Danorum, dedit Drayton juxta Biketon, cum quinque hidīs, cum pertinentiis et privilegiis, et crucem nobilissimam, auro et argento lapidibusque preciosis, cum multis sanctorum reliquiis decentèr ornatam, in qua (ut dicitur) totius Angliæ annum redditum contulerat. Et duas imagines magnas auro, argentoque benè ornatas, et casulam unam per totam brudatam, et alias tres optimas de pauleo.^b Edwardus sanctus London rex, filius Etheldredi, dedit terram de Papcholt, et sylvam quæ vocatur Ores, cum pertinentiis et privilegiis. Willielmus cognomento Bastard, filius Roberti ducis Normanniæ, rex Angliæ, dedit ecclesiam de Awlton cum capella et omnibus aliis pertinentiis, et in eadem villa quinque hidas, et ecclesiam de Clere cum quatuor hydīs, et una virgata terræ, cum capellis, et aliis pertinentiis, ab omni exactione liberas et regia consuetudine. Henricus senior, filius Willielmi Bastardi, rex Angliæ, dedit hidam in qua monasterium situm est, et Abbatis-Wordiam cum septem hydīs. Dedit etiam Litelwordy, in remotionem ecclesiæ extra civitatem, et libertatem viæ extra portam aquilonarem, cum multis privilegiis.

Matildis regina, filia regis Scotiæ, uxor Henrici senioris regis, dedit Lamerkestokey, cum decem hidīs, cum pertinentiis et privilegiis. Magnates etiam Angliæ, plurima auri, argentique donaria eidem ecclesiæ promptissima devotione contulerunt, quibus, aleretur chorus ministrorum ibidem in Christo militantium. Brygwynus comes dedit Upwarnford, cum octo hidīs, quas jure hæreditario possedit, permissione, et licentia Adelredi regis, cum pertinentiis et privilegiis. Hugo Portuensis comes, dedit Bedhampton cum decem hydīs, et ecclesiam cum pertinentiis et privilegiis, permissione et licentia sancti Edwardi regis London. Sequitur Destructio Monasterii de Hida.

DE quibus beneficiis, per prædictos fideles in Christo monasterio de Hida concessis et confirmatis, tantæ destructiones dictæ abbathie factæ sunt. Videlicet, rex Haraldus habuit avunculum, nomine Godwynum, abbatem de Hyda, qui adduxit secum contra Willielmum Bastard in suo adventu in Angliam in subsidio nepotis sui Haraldi, de domo sua duodecim monachos et viginti milites, pro servitio: quibus occisis, et spoliatis, inventi sunt memorati abbas et monachi sub arnis militaribus, in habitu monachili, et de novo Wintoniæ monasterio, videlicet de Hida cœnobitas esse. Rex igitur Willielmus, iracundia repletus, eo quod monachi processissent ad bellum, abbathiam et sua jura extorsit, et eam ferè per biennium absque pastore in manu sua tenuit. Anno verò regni sui tertio mare transiit, ducens secum ecclesiæ prædictæ thesauros, qui in brevi rediens, dicti monasterii, videlicet, pro abbate, baroniam unam, et pro singulis monachis, qui cum abbate contra dictum regem in bellum processerunt, singula feoda militum arripuit, militibus qui cum eo venerant conferendis. His dampnis sic peractis, supervenit Henricus, episcopus Wintoniæ tempore Stephani regis, nescio quo ductus spiritu, et dampna ampliora cumulavit. Nam quum Henricus episcopus primò tenuit abbathiam de Hida quinque annos et dimidiam, et quatuor hebdomadas, et tres dies, sub hoc termino, unoquoque anno habuit trecentas libras ad opus suum: post istum terminum ecclesiam comburi fecit; qua combustione in officiis et ornamentis plurima ecclesiæ intulit damna. Eodem incendio nominatissima crux Christi, à Kanuto rege Novo-monasterio collata, in cineres redacta est. Per hanc verò combustionem, tenens abbathiam per unum annum, et quindecim dies, unicuique fratrum binos diatim solvit denarios. Eodem anno monachi ejusdem ecclesiæ commiserunt ei bona fide, ex incenso cinere, pondera argenti quinquaginta decem, et quindecim pondera auri, et diademata tria gemmis preciosis ornata, et duas imagines, videlicet, sanctæ Mariæ, et sancti Johannis, quarum una auro et gemmis excrustavit: duas patenas argenteas, auro decentè ornatas, cum duobus urceolis preciosissimis, ex operibus Salomonis, et crusto aureo columnis deliciis octoginta sexdecim,^a à rege Henrico ecclesiæ donata in sua extorsit: sigillum conventus quindecim marcaram, vas argenteum ad aquam benedictam cum duobus jocis saccorum à domino rege Knutone donata, asportavit. Turibulum decem marcarum nequiter subtraxit; archam quoque quandam in qua supradicti ornatus habebantur, cum lintheis optimis asportavit. Imagines verò prædictas auro et argento coopertas à monachis pro centum marcis reddendis de ecclesia asportare fecit. In additamenta malorum monachum Cluniacensem tributa sibi annuatim, ut dictum est, persolventem, scilicet Hugonem Schorchevyleyne, abbatem constituit, qui monachos per diversas ecclesias, jubente episcopo, cum literis suis dispersit, adeò ut ex quadraginta monachis, domi nisi solummodo decem remanserant. In qua dispersione viduatam à propriis filiis corruens ecclesiam, manum in sanctuarium Domini extendens, cruces quinque, scrinia decem, textus totidem, auro, argento, gemmisque preciosis ornatos, cum morsibus capparum aureis excrustavit. Quo hac de causa remoto, ex præcepto domini papæ, dominus Thomas Cantuariensis archiepiscopus, sub apostolica protectione, et sua, suscepit ecclesiam. Episcopus autem Henricus, contra jussionem ipsorum, dominationem ecclesiæ vi obtinens, et contra Deum, et contra conventum donavit ecclesiam de Lingefelde, ecclesiam de Sandestede, capellam sancti Leonardi, capellam de Wordye, capellam sanctæ Helenæ, capellam de Stanham, et decimam de Crambam, et capellam sancti Bartholomei, quæ est sita in cimiterio monasterii, cujus clavem super altare positam, vi abstulit et asportavit.

Carta Regis Edwardi Primi de Mucheldever.

[MS. Cotton. Brit. Mus. Domit. xiv. fol. 72.]

DISPENSANTE et gubernante Domino nostro Jesu Christo incommutabiliter omnia visibilia et invisibilia quamvis verba regum et procerum decreta velut fundamenta montium ad modicum fixa videantur, tamen plerumque tempestates et turbines secularium rex regnorum statuta pulsantes quatiant. Quapropter literarum memoriæ commendare procuravi ego Edward rex Anglorum quod pro eterna redemptione animæ meæ dedi ad monasterium Wyntoniensis ecclesiæ S. Petri x. mansas et Micheldever intus ad refectorium fratrum Christo inibi servientium. Et has portiones cum consensu optimatum meorum quorum nomina infra scripta habentur eidem familiæ in perpetuam concessi hæreditatem cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus, silvis, campis, pratis, pascuis, et etiam piscium capturis habendis et possidendis et etiam suis successoribus in eodem refectorio relinquendis. Ea autem conditione datæ sunt illæ decem prædictæ manentes ut semper imposterum permaneant liberæ et expeditæ ab omnibus sæcularibus negotiis, excepta expeditione et arcis ac pontis constructione. Et hoc Dei omnipotentis simul et mea auctoritate confirmatum est æterno cyrographo in cruce Domini et Salvatoris nostri Jhesu Christi. Si quis hanc nostram donationem et commotationem custodire et augere voluerit, cutodiat illum Deus et augeat ei omnia bona præsentis et futuræ vitæ; sin vero minuere vel infringere mala mente voluerit, sciat sein horrendo illo die severi exanimis coram summo iudice inevitabilem redditurum rationem, nisi hic prius digna emendaverit poenitentia. Leges Monachis Hydensibus ab Eadgaro Rege datæ.

[MS. Cotton. Vespas. A. viii.]

Eadgar Rex hoc Privilegium Novo edidit Monasterio, ac omnipotenti Domino, ejusque genitrici Mariæ ejus Laudis Magnalia concessit.

OMNIPOTENS totius machinæ conditor ineffabili pietate universa mirifice moderatur, quæ condidit; qui cœterno videlicet verbo quædam ex nihilo edidit, quædam ex informi subtilis artifex propagavit materia. Angelica quippe creatura (ut informis materia nullis rebus existentibus) divinitus formata luculento resplenduit vultu, male, prohi dolor! libero utens arbitrio contumaci arrogans fastu, creatori universitatis famulari dedignans, semetipsum creatori æquiparans, æternis baratri incendiis cum suis complicibus demersa jugi merito cruciatur miseria. Hoc itaque themate totius sceleris peccatum exorsum est.

I. Quare Hominem condidit, et quid ei commisit.

EVACUATA namque polorum sede, et eliminata tumidi fastus spurcitia, summus totius bonitatis arbiter, lucidas cœlorum sedes non sine cultore passus torpere, formatis ex informi materia diversarum rerum speciebus hominem tandem ex limo conditum, vitæ spiraculo ad sui formavit similitudinem, cui universa totius cosmi superficie condita subjiciens, seipsum suosque posteros sibi subjecit, quatenus ejus exsecutura posteritas angelorum suppleret numerum cœlorum sedibus superbia turgente detrusum.

II. Qualiter in Paradiso sine crimine conversatus sit.

QUI paradisiacæ voluptatis amœnitate locatus, nullius rei patiebatur dispendium, sed ei totius mundi ad votum suppeditabat facultas. Totius namque bonitatis ubertate fruente nulla ei res infesta resistebat. Quippe altithrono devote obsequenti, creatura cuncta famulabatur, subjecta. Fruebatur letabundus creatoris tripudio, et angelorum alacriter utebatur consortio. Non eum corporalis debilitabat imbecilitas, nec animi affligebat anxietas. Non typo levis raptabatur superbiæ; sed suo se conjungens auctori, humilis pollebat mirifice. Non eum inanis tumidum vexabat gloria, sed devotum creatoris magnificabat memoria. Non invidia eum alieno torquebat profectu, sed charitatis jugiter lætabatur amplexu. Non ira cruciabatur infestus, sed charitatis tranquillitate leniebatur patientissimus. Non eum tristitia mœrore dejiciebat, sed gaudii spiritualis spe pollente florebat. Non avaritia nimium incitabatur cupidus, sed dapsilitatis studio exercebatur largissimus. Non illicito massicus delectabatur edulio, sed parcitate contentus, licito utebatur cibario. Non luxuria eum stimulabat ad nefaria, sed continentia competens constringebat ad præmia. Omnium polirates virtutum, cunctis carens adversis. Omnibus florens prosperis, rite pollebat ingenuus.

III. Quomodo Cælum sine morte conscendere confidebat, et diabolus invidus ne ascenderet impediabat.

QUI prole ad numerum patrata superbientium angelorum, universa comitante prosapia sine loeto gustato ligni vetiti fructu, æthereos æternæ beatitudinis suggestus triviatim cum Domino regnans conscendere Macrobius confidebat. Invidus igitur hoc animadvertens Zabulus,^a nimiâ perculsus invidiâ, rimari callide versutus cœperat, quibus insidiis ne ad tantum numinis conscenderet gloriam subdolos deciperet; pro nihilo forte ducens concessa, illicita nimium allubescendo laudans, mulierem admodum fragilem pellexit. Quæ sui detrimenti minime contenta, virum muliebriter victum, blandis suasionibus delinitum, exili, heu! malo gustato, sibi similem faciens, perdidit.

UTRIQUE tandem præfatis privati donariis, paradisi eliminati metis, in præsentis vitæ ærumnam miserrimi dejiciuntur; contemnentes conditorem, a cunctis insequuntur creatis. Vita desiit, mors inolevit. Virtutum caterva recedente, vitiorum cumulus successit. Succedente nepotum prosapia, successit cumulata criminum collegio. Universi cum suis sceleribus cataclismate dempti, tandem octo utriusque sexus reservatis, tabescendo deficient. Vitiis copiose surgentibus, conditor se hominem fecisse indoluit. Postremo misericors mortalibus, ut pollicitus est, succurrit.

V. Quomodo Christus natus sua nos Passione redemit, et cælus conscendere fecit.

STELLA emicuit matutina, quæ suo radio mundi tenebras fugaret. Fausta resplenduit Maria cujus utero virginali Christus ineffabiliter editus, peccatorum tenebras mediator clementissimus dempsit. Viguit Christus virtutibus plenus. Incanduit Judæa ingenti rancore repleta. Carnem suscipiens pro nobis pati voluit. Quod ejus permissu infelix audacter complevit Judæa. Ligno quippe perditum, ligni scandens gabulum, genus redemit humanum. Universas namque hominum dæmon nationes ludificando insultans, jure ut mandati transgressorem possidens, morte mulctabat perpetua. Surgens vero a mortuis ultorem trophæo crucis devicit. Prædam de perfidi leonis ore tulit, secumque super æthera vehens supernis angelorum cœtibus consociavit. Ut cum eo communi contubernio fruente, bonitate perspicui, virtutum omnium ubertate referti, expertes peccati, omni contagione privati, sine fine post diem judicii restauratis corporibus, exultantes regnarent. Hanc præcipuam sine dubio gloriam credentibus, qui trinitatis veræque unitatis fidem bonis insudantes operibus sectantur, pollicitus, non credentibus supplicium minatus æternum perpetuis baratri incendiis justissime spopondit.

VI. De benevolo Regis Meditamine.

Hinc ego Eadgar, divina favente gratia, totius Albionis basileus, rimari magnopere cœperam, quid operum studio exercerem, ut ad tantam gloriam perveniens, Christi sanctorumque ejus cœlo collocatus contubernio coronatus fruerer, tantamque inferni miseriam devitarem. Instigante etenim Domini clementia, occurrit animo ut ipse criminibus cessarem cunctis, atque bonis operibus insistens forma factus gregi, quosque nostri regiminis gubernamine degentes, lucrificerem. Quosdam igitur suasionibus invitans ad præmia, quosdam terroribus compellens ad gloriam, bona ædificans, mala ut Domino faciente potui, dissipavi. Scriptum quippe per Hieremiam memini prophetam: "Ecce constitui te super gentes, et super regna, ut evellas et destruas, et disperdas et dissipes, et ædifices et plantes." Talibus igitur exhortatus doctrinis, quibus nos Dominus per prophetam clementer ammonuit, agens, Christo faciente in terris, quod ipse juste egit in cœlis, extricans videlicet Domini cultura criminum spurcitas, virtutum semina sedulus agricola inserui.

vii. Qua ratione Clericos eliminans Monachos collocavit.

TIMENS ne æternam incurrerem miseriam, si adepta potestate, non facerem quod ipse, qui operatur omnia, quæ in cœlo vult et in terra, suis exemplis justus examinatore innotuit, vitiosorum cuneos canonicorum e diversis nostri regiminis cœnobiis Christi vicarius eliminavi: quod nullis mihi intercessionibus prodesse poterant, sed potius ut beatus ait Gregorius, "Justi vindictam iudicis provocarent, qui variis vitiorum nævis contaminati, non agentes quæ Deus jubendo volebat, omnia quæ nolebat, rebelles faciebant:" avidus inquisitor advertens gratos Domino monachorum cuneos, qui pro nobis incunctanter intercederent, nostri juris monasteriis devotus hilariter collocavi.

viii. Quod Sancti Spiritus Gratia compunctus Abbatem et Monachos in Novo constituit Monasterio.

HAC itaque ratione Sancti Spiritus attactus flamine, locum Domini mundans Wintoniensis ecclesiæ Novi Monasterii arcisterium nostro Salvatori, ejusque genitrici semper Virgini Mariæ, et omnibus apostolis, cum cæteris sanctis, dicatum restauravi. Sciens scriptum, "Consentientes et facientes pari constringuntur pœna rebellionis, omnipotentis voluntati obviantes," possessionem Domini usurpare non sustinens, clericos lascivientes repuli, ac veros Dei cultores monachico gradu fungentes, qui pro nostris nostrorumque inibi quiescentium excessibus sedulo intercederent servitio, quo eorum intercessionibus nostri regiminis status vigeret munitus, abbatem, Christo cooperante, eligens altithrono subjectus illic devote ordinavi. Hoc subnixæ efflagitans depono, ut quod in suis egi, hoc agat in mihi ab ipso conlatis; scilicet adversarios nostros dejiciens, amicos sublimando provehat, ut inimicos sanctæ Dei ecclesiæ deprimens, amicos ejus monachos videlicet beatificans justificavi.

ix. De illorum Anathemate qui Monachis insidiantur.

SI autem qualibet occasione, diabolo instigante, contigerit, ut fastu superbientis arrogantia dejecti canonici monachorum gregem, quem ego venerans cum pastore in Dei constitui possessione, dejicere insidiando voluerint; agatur de eis et de omnibus, qui quolibet munere cœcati juvamen eis impenderint, quod actum est de angelis superbientibus, et de protoplasto diaboli fraude seducto, ut Paradisi videlicet limitibus sublimibusque regni cœlorum sedilibus ejecti, cum hiis, qui Domini famulatum aspernantes contempserunt, barathri incendiis detrusi jugi crucientur miseria. Nec inde evulsi se gloriantur evasisse tormenta, sed cum Juda Christi proditore, ejusque complicitibus Acharonte conglutinati, frigore stridentes, fervore perusti, lætitia privati, mœrore anxii, catenis igneis compediti, lictorum metu perculsi, scelerum memoria confusi, totius bonitatis recordatione semoti, æterno lugubres puniuntur cruciatu.

x. Item de Anathemate insidiantium.

QUI autem prædictos Novi Wintaniensis ecclesiæ Cœnobiî monachos, vel quoslibet ejusdem ordinis nostro regimine degentes, e monasteriis, quæ vitiorum spurcitas expurgens Jesu Christo Domino nostro victo dæmone acquisivi, eliminare præsumens voluerit, anathema sit; et eadem maledictione, qua Cain parricida, qui fratrem suum Abel, stimulante invidia, lividus interemit, mastigia addictus est, sine termino teneatur obnoxius, atque in Dei persecutione continuo perseverans in hac vita nullum dignitatis adquirat honorem, nec in futuro sine miseria unquam persistat, sed eum Ananiæ et Saphiræ una Stix porrigi ne^a ejulantes crucians compectatur.

xi. De Benedictione Monachos venerantium.

QUICUNQUE prætitulatos monachos bonis quibuslibet locupletans ditare voluerit, creator cunctitenens clementer eos eorumque progeniem totius ubertate prosperitatis hic et in futuro seculo ditando locupletet; scriptis decenter eorum in libro vitæ nominibus, cum Christo portionem in cœlorum habitaculis habeant, qui monachos suos, quos nostris congregatos temporibus possidet, vel verbis vel factis sanctitatis studio honoraverint.

xii. Quales et qualiter Monachi in hoc Monasterio conversentur.

REGULARES igitur monachi, non seculares, in præfato, Christo comite, degentes monasterio, regulæ moribus obtemperant, patres venerantes spirituales, sanctorum patrum imitentur exempla; nil agentes, nisi quod communis monasterii regula vel majorum demonstraverit norma. A secularibus igitur pompis remoti, toto nisu corporis custodiant, et animæ castitatem. Humilitatis studio pollentes, corpus parcimonie vigore munientes, alacri constringant animo. Civium convivæ intra urbem perpetuo interdictu fieri erubescant. In civitate degentes, in refectorio pompaticas lascivasque secularium delicias ut melancholiam aporiantes, licitis charitativi utantur cibariis; extra refectorium autem minime, nisi domo infirmorum ægroti decubuerint, edentes licite, quæ jussi fuerint. Sacri summique ordinis hospites, si ratio exegerit, et peregrini ordinati longo terrarum spatio venientes, ad abbatis mensam in refectorio cautissime invitentur: laicis in hospitio condecens exhibeatur humanitas: et monachorum quispiam manducandi vel bibendi cum eis secundum patrum decreta licentiam non habeat: in refectorio autem edendi causa vel bibendi non introducantur. Pauperes ut xps ingenti cordis suscipiantur tripudio.

xiii. De Abbatum Electione.

DIVINARUM studio scripturarum luculentissime eruditi, orationem frequentia assidue occupati, charitatis amplexu lætissimi, fidei exercitio promptissimi, spe provehente sincerissimi, pace concorditer fixi, omniumque virtutum flore decorati, ad finem usque cœptum tantæ bonitatis initium, Christo juvante, perducentes eadem gloriosi fruuntur libertate, quam beatus patronus Benedictus omnibus regulæ præcepto subjectis instituit; scilicet, ut post abbatis obitum, tunc temporis regentis, abbatem ex eadem ordinent congregatione, quem sibi omnis concors congregatio, sive pars, quamvis minima congregationis, salubriori elegerit consilio.

xiv. Qualiter Rex Abbatem et Monachos venerantes muniat.

REGES itaque quicumque nostri fuerint successores, nullam extraneam personam, jus tyrannidis super monachos exercentem, imponant, ne forte Deus eos damnans, et regno deponat, et vita. Electum vero a fratribus Christi vicarium dignanter suscipiant, eumque charitatis igne succensi locupletando venerentur; juvamen in quantum indiguerit, Christi amore compuncti alacriter impendant: mutuo namque confortati juvamine in nullo a regulæ præceptis discordantes, Domini gregem non mercenarii, sed pastores fidissimi, luporum rictibus eximentes intrepidi defendant.

xv. Qualiter Abbas et Monachi Regem a Dæmonum temptatione eripiant.

ABBAS autem armis succinctus spiritualibus monachorum cuneo hinc inde vallatus, charismatum cœlestium rore perfusus, ærias dæmonum expugnans versutias, regem, omnemque sui regiminis clerum, Christo, cujus virtute dimicat, juvante, a rabida hostium persecutione invisibilium solerter spiritus gladio defendens, fidei scuto subtili protegens, tutamine robusto prælians, triumpho miles eripiat imperterritus.

xvi. Qualiter Rex Abbatem et Monachos ab Hominum Persecutione defendat.

REX itidem terrenus cœlestis castra regis fortissimo roborans munimine, armis secularibus visibiles expugnans adversarios, hostiumque rabiem sævientium adnihilando dejiciens, conditoris sui pascua gregemque sollicita inexpugnabilis tueatur custodia, quatenus ad vitæ bravium perveniens æternis tripudians fruatur bonis, quæ nec oculus videre aliquatenus potuit humanus, nec in hominis cor ullatenus ascendit, quæ præparavit Deus diligentibus se.

SINT præfati Monasterii rura, omnisque monachorum possessio, in rebus magnis vel modicis, internis vel externis, in urbanis vel suburbanis, prædiis, campis, pratis, pascuis, sylvis, molendinis, rivulorum cursibus, æterna libertate in Christi nomine ejusque genetricis ditata.

xviii. Quod nullus secularium Monasterii possessionem inlicite usurpet.

SECULARIUM quispiam ausu temerario jus tyrannidis non in Christi cultura præsumptuosus exerceat. Non minuat, instigante diabolo, quod Sancti Spiritus instinctu tam a me, quam a prædecessoribus meis, necnon a catholicis utriusque sexus hominibus, largiflua concessum est dapsilitate.

xix. De benedictione Augentium.

AUGENTI tribuat rerum cunctarum opifex tranquillam vitæ præsentis excursus, longævam instantis temporis futuram æternæ beatitudinis talionem, sufficientem victualium ubertatem, interminabile prosperitatis augmentum, copiosum virtutum omnium juvamen.

xx. De maledictione Minuentium.

MINUENTEM perpetua possideat miseria, in Domini manens persecutione, ejus genetricis sanctorumque omnium incurrat offensam; præsentis vitæ adversitas illi semper eveniat; nulla ei bonitatis accadat prosperitas; omnia ejus peculia inimici vastantes diripiant; in futuro autem æterni miserrimum cum hædis in sinistra positum damnent cruciatus, si non satisfactione emendaverit congrua, quod in Domini usurpans detraxit censura.

xxi. Quibus modis secularibus obtemperant, et quod nullius reatus hoc Domini Privilegium minuire valeat.

TRIBUS tantummodo causis secularibus obtemperant præceptis; rata videlicet expeditione, pontis arcisve constructione, alias æterna ditati gloriantur libertate. Reatus quippiam, si, incitante dæmone, seductus vel abbas, vel fratrum aliquis fragiliter, quod absit, contraxerit, justitia purgante secundum regulæ præceptum abolutus damnetur, maneatque præfatæ munificentiae libertas altithrono per nostram humilitatem oblata, ad monachorum usus gratuite sibi famulantium inviolabilis, æterna libertate jocunda, quia Deus, qui hanc privilegii largifluam donationem locumque, cum universa monachorum familia, ruraque omnia sacro subjecta cœnobio possidet, nunquam reatum commisit, nec ullo unquam tempore committet: sit igitur præfata libertas æterna, quia Deus libertatis possessor æternus est.

ANNO incarnationis Dominicæ dccccxvi. scripta est hujus privilegii syngrapha his testibus consentientibus, quorum inferius nomina ordinatim caraxantur.

Si quæ verò terra post diem factæ conventionis in proprietatem abbatis et monasterii sui venerit, episcopus Winton. in ejus sepulturis vel corporibus nil clamabit nisi prius ecclesia episcopalis ea per consuetudinem habuit. Illi vero qui in terra mea vel baronum meorum in civitate manent libere apud abbathiam Novi Monasterii jacere poterant, si volunt, sicut potuerant antequam monasterium transferrebat. De processione in Ramis palmarum, unde inter eos fuerat dissensio, hoc statutum est, quod abbas, cum duobus vel quot voluerit monachis ad episcopalem ecclesiam veniet, si processio ecclesiæ episcopalis ad sanctum Jacobum sit itura, et cum ipsa processione ad sanctum Jacobum ibit; processio verò abbatiæ cum priore et reliquis supra castellum ei obviam veniet ante portam castelli, et eum episcopali processione apud secundum^a Jacobum faciet stationem et reditum usque ante portam civitatis de West, ad propinquiorem vicum qui vocatur sancti Walarici, et inde cum suis revertetur abbas ad monasterium suum. Si me receperit episcopus, veniet abbas cum toto conventu ecclesiæ suæ ad processionem illam. Si autem archiepiscopum vel aliam personam receperit, adducet abbas decem monachos ad minus et intererit processioni; secunda vero die Nativitatis et Paschæ et Pentecostis, et in una festivitate sancti Petri, quam episcopus elegerit, abbas, si episcopus eum vocaverit, ad episcopalem ecclesiam veniet cum quot voluerit monachis, et episcopo serviet in celebratione missarum, et cum eo comedet: serviet etiam ei abbas quando missam dicit episcopus. Ad curiam meam, ad sinodum quoque, veniet si episcopus eum vocaverit ad danda consilia episcopo, et judicia facienda ecclesiastica, et audienda præcepta episcopi. WINCHESTER.

UNNAMINSTER,^a or, as it was more usually called, the ABBEY of St. MARY Winchester, was situated in the east part of that city. It was founded either by Alfred,^b or his queen Ethelswitha,^c or perhaps by both jointly, about the end of the ninth century; being, like Hyde abbey, completed by their son King Edward the elder.^d Ethelswitha, after the death of her husband, is said to have retired to it. Her death here, is placed by Hoveden in the year 903;^e by the Annals of Winchcombe in 905;^f and by the Annals of Hyde, in a passage already quoted, in the year 909.

EDBURGA, daughter of Edward the elder, who had also retired here, is said by Leland to have been afterwards abbess.^g She was subsequently considered as the patroness of the monastery, and was finally, according to Tanner, joined in the dedication of it with the Virgin Mary.^h

From a passage in Ethelward's Chronicle, printed by Sir Henry Savile, it should seem that the original church, which was consecrated by Archbishop Plegmund, was furnished with a lofty tower.ⁱ

According to Dr. Milner, this abbey was not originally well endowed. The Trussell manuscripts say, that for its better support King Edmund, the son of Edward the Elder, settled upon it a toll to be collected of all merchandize passing by water under the city bridge, or by land under the east gate.^k But still it had fallen into great poverty and decay in the time of King Edgar, when Ethelwold bishop of Winchester undertook to restore it, and, in a manner, to found it anew.^l

The Saxon Chronicle places this new foundation under the year 963.^m Ethelwold at the same time regulated its discipline and religious observances according to the new Benedictine Concordat, which had then been recently settled by himself and Archbishop Dunstan. He also appointed a female of the name of ETHELRIETHA to be its abbess. Henceforward, says Dr. Milner, this house became the resort of many West Saxon ladies of royal or noble parentage.ⁿ

From the Domesday Survey we learn the state of the endowment of St. Mary Winchester as it stood in the year 1087. In Hampshire, its possessions were at Lis, Froli, Lecford, Stoches, Timbreberie, and Ebintune. Lis, which had paid geld in the time of Edward the Confessor for five hides, answered for three only at the time of the Survey. Froli, which had in the Confessor's time been rated for ten hides, paid for eight only. Lecford, which had before paid for five hides, was rated but for one. Stoches, which had before paid for three hides, paid but for half a one. Timbreburie, as in the time of Edward the Confessor, paid geld for two hides. Ebintune, which had before paid for a hide and a half, was now exempt, as being de victu monialium; appropriated to the support of the nuns' table. In Berkshire, the abbess is stated to hold Coleselle, which had been given to the church by Walter de Laci with his daughter. This land, which in the time of King Edward had been rated as for eight hides, now answered but for two hides and a half. In Wiltshire, the church held Ierchesfonte, rated at twenty carucates, which in the time of Edward the Confessor had paid geld as for thirty hides: it also held Caninge, rated at fifteen carucates, but which in Edward the Confessor's time was rated at eighteen hides, a virgate and a half. The rent produced by these possessions, which in King Edward's time had amounted to the sum of 64*l.* 15*s.* amounted at the time of forming the Survey to the sum of 92*l.* 15*s.*^o

From a passage in another part of the Domesday Survey for Hampshire it appears that in the time of King Edward the Confessor, and even in that of William, the manor of Icene, which in the time of Edward had paid geld for twelve hides, belonged to the nuns of St. Mary Winchester. "Hoc manerium tenuit abbatia monialium S. Mariæ Winton. tempore regis Edwardi. Tunc se defendebat pro XII. hid." At the time of the ^b William of Malmesbury, noticing the reformation of the nunnery by Bishop Athelwold, ascribes the first foundation entirely to King Alfred:

"Præterea construxit supradictus rex in eadem urbe sanctimonialium cœnobium, sed posterioribus annis per beatum Ethelwoldum amplius est locus ille: quibus præposuit Ethelritham virginem anum, quæ ad conjecturam somnij, quod mater ejus de aquila viderat aurea, multa de ipso prophetavit. In the margin, in smaller characters, it is said, "Rex W. reddidit eidem ecclesiæ."^a

In Wiltshire, under Terra Hugonis Lasne, it is said, "Æcclesia S. Mariæ Winton. tenet de H. Chenete pro filia ejus."^b

It has been already noticed in the Account of Hyde Abbey, that in 1141, in the war between Stephen and the Empress Maud, the abbey of St. Mary Winchester was destroyed.^c Gervase of Canterbury notices this occurrence in the following terms:—"Civitas famosa secunda die mensis Augusti, agente et præcipiente ejusdem civitatis episcopo, traditur incendio, quo Monasterium sanctimonialium cum officinis suis, et plusquam viginti ecclesiis cum meliori parte civitatis, et cœnobio sancti Grimbaldi cum ædibus suis in cinerem redactum est."^d

No direct particulars, in regard to the renovation of this monastery, are preserved by our historians: though Dr. Milner suspects King Henry the Second to have been a material benefactor.^e

In 1271 this monastery was visited, together with the other religious houses of the city, by Nicholas bishop of Winchester:^f and again, in 1274, by Robert archbishop of Canterbury.^g

In the 2d year of Edward the Third a licence was obtained by Robert de Wambergh, archdeacon of Wells, to give seven acres of land in Erchesfonte to this monastery, in aid of the support of a chaplain, who was to pray for his soul and that of Emelina Longspe.^h

In the 4th of the same king the royal licence was obtained for the appropriation of the church of Froyle, in the diocese of Winchester, to the abbess and convent.ⁱ

From numerous entries upon the Patent Rolls, the church of St. Mary Winchester, beside the nuns, appears to have supported some few secular clergymen in prebendal stalls.

In 1373 this nunnery was visited, with the other churches and monasteries of his diocese, by Bishop William de Wykeham;^k who, at his death, in 1404, among other numerous legacies, left "to the abbess of the monastery of St. Mary Winton, five marks; and to every of the nuns, thirteen shillings and four pence."^l

ABBESSES of ST. MARY WINCHESTER.

Where no other reference occurs in the lower margin, they are given on the authority of Browne Willis's communication to the editor of the second edition of Bishop Tanner's Notitia Monastica.

Dr. Milner says, when this convent had subsisted six centuries and a half, eminent for the regularity and piety of its inhabitants in general, as well as for the rank and birth of many amongst them,^p it was on a sudden involved in the general proscription of all such monasteries as were under the yearly value of 200*l.*; the revenues of this amounting only to 179*l.* 7*s.* 2*d.* per annum. This was done under pretence that strict regularity and conventual discipline could not be observed in the poorer monasteries; whereas the real reason was that Henry and his courtiers did not think the moment was yet arrived for attacking the grand monasteries, which were powerful by their influence and connections, and had superiors who were honoured with seats in parliament. At this time Dame Elizabeth Shelly was abbess of this convent, consisting of twenty-one nuns, beside servants. Being a woman of great talents and spirit, she found means for the present to avert the storm, and actually obtained letters patent, under the king's privy seal, dated August 27th, 1536, by which her abbey was new founded with all its property and privileges, except the valuable manors of Allcanning and Archefount, in Wiltshire, which were alienated in favour of Lord Edward Seymour Viscount Beauchamp and Lady Ann his wife, and she the said Dame Shelly was appointed to be abbess of the new-founded convent.^q By virtue of this Charter, the peculiar exercises of the monastic life continued to be followed in this house after all the other convents in Winchester were suppressed; not only those of the poorer sort, but also the grand priory of St. Swithun and Hyde abbey. At length, Henry being weary of this indulgence, or, what is more probable, some of his courtiers being impatient for the remaining spoils of this establishment, his agents had recourse here to their usual arts for forcing the superiors of convents into a surrender, where they could not be persuaded to do the same voluntarily. In consequence of these St. Mary's abbey at length fell in its turn, after it had subsisted four years by virtue of its new Charter.^r

Bishop Tanner says, great part of the abbey, if not the whole, was granted, 38 Hen. VIII. to John Bello and John Broxholme.^s

Dr. Milner states that the abbess and eight only of her nuns had small annuities granted them: the rest of the community, he adds, were totally unprovided for.^t The pension-list, however, which will be found in the Appendix,^u shows that provision was made by King Henry the Eighth for all the members of the foundation. Dr. Milner's mistake evidently arose from his considering the pensions which remained chargeable in the 2d and 3d of Philip and Mary as the whole which were originally granted. Even three of these were omitted by Browne Willis, whom he quotes.^a The abbess's pension was 26*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Dame Shelly, says Dr. Milner, continued to reside in the city of Winchester; and it appears that she had not lost all hopes of seeing her convent once more established, as she made the present of a silver chalice, which probably she had saved from the sacrilegious wreck, to the college of this city, on the express condition that it should be given to St. Mary's abbey in case it was ever restored.^b

According to Camden, considerable remains of this venerable fabric existed at the beginning of the seventeenth century, which testified its extent and magnificence. At present, nothing is left of it except its name of Abbey, by which the whole circumference of its inclosure is still called, and a small heap of stones in a garden where the church seems to have stood; the rest of the materials having been employed in erecting a modern mansion-house.^c

No REGISTER of St. Mary's abbey Winchester is at present known to exist: nor has an impression from the Conventual SEAL yet fallen within the notice of the Editors of Dugdale's Monasticon.

Bodmin Priory,

IN

CORNWALL.

T. PETROC, a religious man born in Wales, but coming from Ireland, is said to have built a Monastery on the north coast of Cornwall, about A.D. 520, and to have been there buried.^a His body, it is added, was afterwards removed to Bodmin.^b Such is Bishop Tanner's statement, when mentioning a destroyed monastery at Petrocstow, or Padstow, formerly Loderic, or Laffenac, or Adelston,^c in the deanery of Pydre.

Under Bodmin, Bishop Tanner says, the body of St. Petroc being removed to this place, there was a church built to his memory, and the episcopal see for Cornwall was therein placed by King Edward the elder and Archbishop Plegmund, A.D. 905.^d Here, he adds, King Athelstan is reported to have met with old Saxon, or rather British monks, following the rule of St. Benedict; to whom he granted so great privileges and endowments, that he is accounted founder of the monastery here, about A.D. 926: or rather 936.^e

The authors of the new Magna Britannia, following Leland, state, that the priory of Bodmin is said to have owed its origin to the circumstance of St. Petroc, its founder, having taken up his abode in a valley, now occupied by the town of Bodmin, then the residence of St. Guron, a solitary recluse, who having resigned his hermitage to St. Petroc, it was by him enlarged for the residence of himself and three other devout men, who accompanied him with the intention of leading a monastic life, according to the rules of St. Benedict. Here St. Petroc died before the middle of the sixth century. His shrine was preserved in a small chapel attached to the east end of Bodmin church. The hermitage which he had founded continued to be inhabited by monks of the Benedictine order till the reign of King Athelstan.^f

Florence of Worcester notices the destruction of St. Petroc's monastery by Danish pirates in the year

981.^g The religious, however, continued here; and, according to Leland, in various shapes. He says, "There hath bene monkss, then nunnys, then seculare prestes, then monkes agayn, and last canons regular in S. Petrokes church yn Bodmine."

According to Bishop Tanner, both before and after the Norman Conquest, many alienations of the lands of this monastery took place.

The enumeration of its possessions at the time of the formation of the Domesday Survey may be worth attention.

The church of St. Petroc is said to hold one hide of land in Bodmine, one hide in Lanwenhoc, and land which in the reign of King Edward the Confessor was estimated at seven hides in Rieltone. The two first hides are stated never to have paid geld, and those in Rieltone to be exonerated from every kind of customary service. The church is also said to possess sixty-eight houses and a market in Bodmin. Toward the close of the entries relating to the possessions of this monastery, St. Petroc is likewise recorded to hold two hides in Elil, one in Widie, and two in Tretdeno. One hide of the last-mentioned land at Tretdeno appears to have been unjustly usurped by Earl Harold, as he is called, but was restored by King William to the saint. Such appear to have been the lands in the immediate occupation of the canons. Of the tenanted lands, held under them, Berner possessed a hide in Lanchehoc; Robert earl of Moretaine held seven hides in Tiwarthel, one in Elhil, one in Calestoch, two hides in Cargav, one in Trello, one which was exempt from geld in Heglosenunder, one in Botcinnii, five carucates in Tremail, and half a hide in Polrode; Richard held one hide in Turgoil; and Machus one in Fosnewit. Beside the lands so tenanted by the earl of Moretaine, he is stated to have held, apparently as in capite, a virgate in Tregon, half a hide of land in Trefornoc, a virgate in Trenhal, half a hide in Talcarn, half a hide in Tremhor, a virgate in Nanchert, and a virgate in Trinnonec, all of which had belonged to the church in the time of King Edward the Confessor, but had been subsequently taken from it. Cudiford, which had also belonged to the monastery, was held at the time of the Survey by the king. The annual value of the lands in the immediate occupation of the canons amounted to no more than 8*l.* 5*s.* That of the tenanted lands to 23*l.* 11*s.* 4*d.* The "terrae ablatae" held by the earl of Moretaine were of inferior consideration. The whole property of the monastery had been greatly depreciated in the amount of its rents between the time of Edward the Confessor and the taking of the Domesday inquest.^a

According to some authorities, Robert earl of Moretaine and Cornwall ultimately seized the whole of the possessions of St. Petroc Bodmin to his own use.^b After the death of his son, William earl of Moretaine, they are stated to have been vested in the crown; when Algar, to whom it is probable they had been granted, with the king's licence, and that of William Warlewast bishop of Exeter, refounded the monastery, and replenished it with AUSTIN CANONS, who continued till the general dissolution of religious houses.^c Leland says, "Willyam Warlewist bisshop of Excestre erectid the last fundation of this priory; and had to hymself part of thauncient landes of Bodmyn monasterie."^d It appears to have been refounded in the year 1120.^e

PRIORS of BODMIN.

ROGER occurs prior of Bodmin in the year 1177; at which time the body of St. Petroc was stolen from the monastery by one of the canons, and carried to the abbey of Mein in Brittany. By the intervention, however, of King Henry the Second, it was restored.^f

GERALDUS DE ASSERIO occurs prior of St. Petroc April 29th, 1322.^g

ALAN occurs in the 12th Hen. VI.^h

THOMAS VIVIAN, alias WANNYWORTH, suffragan bishop of the nominal see of Megara in Greece, was the last prior. He occurs possessed of both preferments as early as 1519. An award in his time, given in the Appendix of Instruments,ⁱ shows that the convent received benefit from the tin works in their immediate neighbourhood. His letter, just before the Dissolution, complaining of his canons, will also be found in the Appendix.^k

The tomb of this prior is still remaining at the east end of the north aisle in Bodmin church, with his effigies in his pontificals placed upon it; angels supporting shields both at the head and feet. Round the verge of the slab on which the figure rests is this inscription:

"Hic tumulatus venerandus pater Thomas Vivian Megarensis episcopus, hujusque domus prior, qui obiit anno Domini MDXXXIII. primo die Junii. Cujus cietur Deus. Amen."

Round the tomb are the symbols of the four evangelists, and two shields of arms, carved in alto-relievo.

At the Suppression the monastery of Bodmin was styled the priory of St. Mary and St. Petroc, and was valued at 270*l.* 11*d.* according to Dugdale. According to Speed, at 289*l.* 11*s.* 11*d.*^l

The site, with the demesnes, was granted, in the 36th Hen. VIII. to Thomas Sternhold, one of the first translators of the Psalms into English metre.^m

The Messrs. Lysons say, "In 1567, it was the property of Nicholas Pescod and Judith his wife, and William Pydderley and Philippa his wife, by whom it was sold, that year, to John Rashleigh, of Fowey, merchant. The immediate site was purchased of the Rashleigh family by the late William Pennington, Esq., and is now the seat of Walter Raleigh Gilbert, Esq., who married his niece, Miss Hosken."ⁿ

No REGISTER of this monastery is, at present, known to be extant.^o

Attached to the Surrender, in the Augmentation Office, is an imperfect impression of the abbey SEAL. The device is on one side only. In the area, the Virgin and infant Jesus, and St. Petroc, are represented under canopies of Gothic tracery, with the words S. Maria. S. Petroc below them. The word bodmyn at the end, in small black character, is all that remains of the legend which went round.

According to the 'Tour through Great Britain,'^p the priory church is now the parish church; William of Worcestre, however, in his Itinerary, seems to give the dimensions of the two as of different structures.^q Leland says, "The priory stode at the est south est parte of the paroch chirch yard."^r And the authors of the New Magna Britannia inform us, that although no part of the priory is now standing, capitals of pillars in the ^d Lel. Itin. edit. 1769, vol. ii. p. 115. Several of the possessions named in the Minister's Accompts of this monastery, in the 31st of Henry the Eighth, are the same which the secular canons held in actual occupation at the time of forming the Domesday Survey. Whitaker, in his "Ancient Cath. of Cornwall historically surveyed," vol. ii. p. 274, controverts Leland's assertion.

^e Tann. Notit. Mon. William of Worcestre, in his Itinerary already quoted, p. 100, says, "Abbatia ecclesie canonicorum de Bodman fundata primo per Athelstanum regem, et secunda vice per . . . Warwast episcopum Excestrie, qui fuit filius sororis Willelmi Conquestoris, et 3^a vice per Graundson episcopum."

^f A.D. 1177. "Eodem anno Martinus canonicus regularis ecclesie de Bomine furtive asportavit corpus sancti Petroci, et fugiens secum detulit in Britanniam ad abbatiam sancti Meueni. Quo comperto Rogerus prior ecclesie de Bomine, cum saniore parte capituli sui, adiit regem Anglie patrem, et adversus eum effecit, quod precipiendo mandavit abbati et conventui sancti Meueni, ut sine dilatione redderent corpus beati Petroci Rogero priori de Bomine, jurantes super sancta Evangelia, et super sanctorum reliquias, quod ipsi idem corpus, et non alternatum cum omni integritate reddiderunt." Rog. Hoved. Annal. edit. Savile, 1596, p. 324. Long previous to this, King Athelstan is said to have given a part of the bones, the hair, and the garments of this saint to the church of St. Peter in Exeter.

St. German's Monastery,

IN

CORNWALL.

T. GERMAN's Priory is here entered, in conformity with Sir William Dugdale's example, among the monasteries of the Benedictine order: indeed Ryley, in his Placita Parliamentaria,^a designates the inhabitants as Benedictine monks.

Certainly, in the earliest period of its existence, the church was COLLEGIATE; founded in honour of St. German, one of the French bishops who came over into Britain to oppose the Pelagian heresy.

K. Ethelstan is noticed by Bishop Tanner to have made one Conan bishop here, A. D. 936:^b and there seems reason to believe that an episcopal see was established here a few years earlier.^c Mr. Whitaker, however, in his 'Ancient Cathedral of Cornwall historically surveyed,'^d imagines it to have commenced as early as the year 614.

The history of the see of Cornwall, as well as that of the bishops of Devonshire at Crediton, will more properly find a place in the account of Exeter cathedral, in which both became united under Bishop Leofric, A. D. 1050.

At the period of this annexation, Leofric is stated to have changed the seculars of St. Germans into regular Canons. Such is the statement in two Charters of considerable age.^e

Whether REGULAR or AUSTIN Canons, however, were really placed here by Leofric, admits of doubt, as the generality of our historians state that the Austin canons did not come into England till after King Henry the First began his reign.^f

Whether REGULAR or AUSTIN Canons, however, were really placed here by Leofric, admits of doubt, as the generality of our historians state that the Austin canons did not come into England till after King Henry the First began his reign.^f

Canons, of some kind, it is clear, were placed here by Leofric; and we find them noticed in the Domesday Survey as holding twelve out of the twenty-four hides at St. Germans entered among the lands in Cornwall belonging to the bishop of Exeter.^g

Leland, in his Collectanea, says the Regulars were introduced at St. Germans by Bartholomew bishop of Exeter, in the time of King Henry the Second;^h who is also named as the founder in the Valor Ecclesiasticus of King Henry the Eighth.

The particulars of the history of St. German's priory from the Conquest to the Dissolution of religious houses are extremely scanty. A plea of Quo warranto, of the 30th of Edward I. explains the privileges which were at that time claimed by the prior:ⁱ and Bishop Tanner has given a few references to Instruments relating to the property of the priory entered upon the Fine and Patent Rolls.^k

From the time of Bartholomew Iscanus bishop of Exeter, there can be no doubt that the inhabitants of this monastery were Canons regular of the order of St. Austin. No list of the priors, however, has been handed down to us, unless the names of a few of them may be preserved in detached entries in the Registers of the see of Exeter.

At the suppression of this house in 1531, the revenues were valued, according to Dugdale, at 243*l.* 8*s.*: according to Speed, at the net sum of 227*l.* 4*s.* 8*d.*

ROBERT SWYMMER, or SWYNMOR, the last prior, who surrendered his house March 2d, 30 Hen. VIII. with six Canons, had pensions.^l

Bishop Tanner informs us that the site of this priory was granted, in the 33d of Hen. VIII. to Katharine Champernown, John Ridgway and others.^m Carew gives the following account of the grant: "John Champernowne, sonne and heire apparant to Sir Philip, of Devon, in H. the 8 time, followed the court, and through his pleasant conceits, of which much might be spoken, wan some good grace with the king. Now when the golden showre of the dissolved abbey lands, rayned welnere into every gapers mouth, some two or three gentlemen, the kings servants, and master Champernownes acquaintance, waited at a doore where the king was to passe forth, with purpose to beg such a matter at his hands: our gentleman became inquisitive to know their suit: they made strange to impart it. This while, out comes the king: they kneele down, so doth master Champernowne; they prefer their petition; the king graunts it: they render humble thanks, and so doth M. Champernowne: afterwards he requireth his share; they deny it; he appeales to the king: the king avoweth his equall meaning in the largesse; whereon the overtaken companions were fayne to allot him this priory for his partage."^a

^m Bp. Tanner adds in a Note, "Mr. Mores saith John Champernown, sed quære." The authors of the New Magna Britannia say, that at its suppression, in 1535, King Henry the Eighth leased the site of the priory and other lands to John Champernown and others, and soon afterwards granted the fee to Katharine (widow of the said John), John Ridgway, and Walter Smith.

Norden, the Messrs. Lysons say, has strangely mistaken this story, and says, that King Henry VIII. bestowed the priory of St. Germans upon an ancestor of the Eliots, "being full of pleasant conceytes, wherewith the kinge was delited." It is certain (they add) that the Champernowns became sole possessors of the priory estate, and that in 1565 they conveyed it to Richard Eliot, Esq. of Coteland in Devonshire, in exchange for that manor. Sir John Eliot, son of Richard, was a distinguished patriot in the reign of James I., an active opposer of the Duke of Buckingham and the court measures, particularly that of raising taxes without the consent of parliament: for some bold speeches on this subject he was committed to the Tower, where he died in the year 1632. Daniel Eliot, his grandson, left an only daughter, married to Browne Willis, the celebrated antiquary; by whom we are informed that his father-in-law, in order to keep up the family name, bequeathed his estates to Edward Eliot, grandson of Nicholas, fourth son of Sir John above-mentioned. The grandson of this

Edward Eliot was, in 1784, created Baron Eliot of St. Germans; and in 1789 had his majesty's permission to take and use the name and arms of Craggs, in consequence of his father's marriage with a natural daughter of Secretary Craggs, in 1726. His grandson and successor, Edward Eliot Craggs, now Lord Eliot, is the present possessor of the priory estate and manor of St. Germans, as well as lessee of the bishop's manor. Port Eliot, his lordship's residence, was formerly called Porth-Prior: it occupies the site of the priory, but retains no traces of the conventual buildings.^b

The church of St. Germans consists at present of a nave and two ailes: the nave is entered from the west under a large portal, flanked on the north and south by towers. The tower on the south side is square, the upper part of it being evidently of a later date than the lower; the tower on the north side is square at its base, and continues so to about two-thirds of its height, whence the upper part forms an octangular turret: a circular arch with Saxon mouldings forms the door-way between the towers. Whitaker says, "The southern tower and southern aile COMPOSED THE SMALL CATHEDRAL. These are apparently (he adds) one whole in themselves." An entrance porch at the western termination of the south aile he designates as "the primary portal of the Cathedral."^c The Messrs. Lysons, however, inform us, that the south aile of St. German's church, as appears by the Registers of the see of Exeter, was rebuilt in the year 1261, that is, above two hundred years after the removal of the see from St. Germans.^d

No CHARTULARY of this priory is at present known to be extant.

Attached to the Surrender in the Augmentation Office is a mutilated impression from the SEAL of this priory: the inscription gone; and the area (on one side only) representing but a few faint traces of the figure of St. German.

Nunnery of Shaftesbury,

IN

DORSETSHIRE.

THE Nunnery of Shaftesbury is stated, in a passage of Leland's Collectanea, to have been founded by King Ethelbald;^a while, in other passages of the same work, the foundation is entirely ascribed to King Alfred.^b William of Malmesbury, who preserves in his work, "De Gestis Pontificum," the copy of an inscription which designates Alfred as the builder of the town only of Shaftesbury, gives the credit of founding the nunnery to Elgiva, the wife of King Edmund.^c The generality of our historians,^d however, more particularly Asser,^e and even Malmesbury himself, in his treatise "De Gestis Regum," consider ALFRED as the founder.^f Simeon of Durham, and the Chronicle of Mailros,^g date the foundation A.D. 888. King Alfred's Charter, in Saxon and Latin, entitled "Testamentum Regis Aluredi," will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.^h

This abbey was first dedicated to the Virgin Mary; but it lost that name, at least for several ages, upon the translation hither of the body of King Edward the Martyr, who was murdered at Corfe Castle March 18th, 978, and first clandestinely buried at Wareham; whence, according to Leland, he was the next year,ⁱ or as others, on better grounds, say, three years afterwards, removed to this abbey by Alfer duke of Mercia. The Saxon Chronicle says, by Alfer and St. Dunstan.^k Hence both the town and abbey were called Edwardstowe;^l and in records and historians "Abbatissa de Sancto Edwardo" was the common title of the abbess.^m

The original endowment of the abbey under Alfred's Charter appears to have consisted of a hundred hides of land. Forty of these were at Dunheved and Compton; twenty hides in Henley and Gissig; ten in Tarente; fifteen in Iwerne; and fifteen in Funtemel.

Subsequent Charters from King Edmund I. King Edred, and King Ethelred, will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.ⁿ In one of these,^o King Ethelred gave to the church of St. Edward, the monastery and vill of BRADEFORD, to be always subject to it, that the nuns might have a safe refuge against the insults of the Danes, and, on the restoration of peace, return to their ancient place; but still some of the family to remain at Bradeford, if it should be thought fit by the prior. This was A.D. 1001.^p

The following are the possessions of the monastery recorded in the Domesday Survey. In Sussex, fifteen hides and a half at Falcheham; in the valuation of ^l According to Brompton, twenty-one years after its first entombment, the body of St. Edward was again taken up. A portion of the reliques were transferred to the monastery of Leominster in Herefordshire; and some to Abingdon. "Elevatum est itaque sacrum corpus anno xxj. ex quo illuc fuerat tumulatum. Succedente postea tempore pars corporis ejus apud Leof monasterium juxta Herforde, pars vero apud Abendoniam est translatus. Locus vero apud Septoniam ubi pulmo ejus adhuc integra viriditate palpitat EDWARDSTOWE dicitur." Script. x. Twysd. col. 884. Compare also Knyghton, ibid. col. 2314; and the extract from Malmesbury, Num. I. Leland, Itin. vol. iv. p. 93, says, "the certainty is known that the abbey of Shaftesbury had rule at Lemster, and possessed much landes there, and sent parte of the reliques of St. Edward the Martyr to be adored there." In another passage of his work, vol. vii. p. 75, he says, "S. Edward the Martir's reliques for the moste parte were kept in Abbingdon, where sum sayethe he was in his tendre age brought up."

The festival of St. Edward was kept on three several days: on the day he was murdered, March 18th; and on the two removals of his body, Feb. 20th and June 20th. In 1317, Roger bishop of Sarum granted forty-one days of indulgence on the translation, and forty days on the passion of St. Edward. In 1412, indulgence was granted to those who visited the "limina Sancti Edwardi." In 1440, the archbishop of Canterbury decreed the feast of the translation of St. Edward to be observed "sub officio duplici." See Hutchins, Hist. Dors. edit. Gough, vol. ii. p. 409, from the Sarum Registers. In the Chronicon Joannis Wallingford, Gale's Script. tom. iii. p. 546, there is a chapter "De passione Sancti Edwardi Regis et Martyris." The body of King Edward was first entombed on the north side of the principal altar at Shaftesbury.

^m In the Domesday for Sussex, the land at Falcheham, and in Somersetshire, that at Cumbe, belonging to this monastery, are entered under the head of Terra Sancti Edwardi. See Num. VIII. In the Exon Domesday (containing apparently the Rolls from which the Survey of the Western counties were compiled) that in Somersetshire is called Terra Abbatissæ Sancti Edwardi. So in the black book of the Exchequer; see p. 4 of the present volume. Maria, the second abbess of the name, who presided about 1247, continually calls herself, in official instruments, "Abbatissa Sancti Edwardi" only.

ⁿ See Numm. IV. V. VI. VII. To these Charters, printed in the old Dugdale, the Saxon boundaries of the lands are now added. The Charters have been collated with the Abbey Register.

^o Num. VII.

^p BRADEFORD, or BRADANFORD, in Wiltshire, is said by Tanner, in ancient times, upon the authority of Malmesbury, to have had a monastery, dedicated to St. Laurence, founded by St. Aldhelm, who was abbat here at the time of his being made bishop, A.D. 705. It seems to have been destroyed before the taking of the Domesday Sur-which a payment of seven shillings from six burgesses in Chichester was included. In Wiltshire, five hides in Bichenestoch; twenty hides in Tisseburie; forty in Duneheve; forty-two in Bradeford; seven hides in Alveston; thirty-eight hides at Ledentone; and twenty hides in Domnitone. At Bradeford, also, the nuns had a market, and an arpent of vineyard; and thirty-three burgesses of the town paid 35s. 9d. In Crichelade, also, the abbey had one burgess. In Dorsetshire, a moiety of the manor of Shaftesbury belonged to the abbey. The houses in this town belonging to the abbess in King Edward's time are stated to have been a hundred and fifty-three in number; of which forty-three had been subsequently destroyed. At the time of the Survey the abbess had a hundred and fifty-one burgesses here, beside twenty vacant manses. At Hanlege, in Dorsetshire, the abbey held twenty hides; at Haintone eight hides; at Sture seventeen hides; fifteen hides at Fontemel; ten at Cuntone; ten at Meleberie; eighteen at Eune-minstre; ten at Tarente; five at Fifhide; sixteen at Chingestone; one in Ferneham; five hides in Stocche; two in Mapledretone; and sixteen at Ceseburne. On a part of the manor of Chingestone the castle of Wareham had been constructed by King William, who, in exchange for the land on which it stood, had given to the nuns the church of Gelingelham. Ceseburne and Sture manors had been usurped by Earl Harold in the time of Edward the Confessor. K. William restored them because the abbess and nuns produced the Confessor's writ that they should be restored with Melecome; which last manor William retained for himself. Harold had also taken Pidele from the nuns, which, at the time of the Survey, was held by the earl of Moretaine. Melcome, in Dorsetshire, was another of Harold's usurpations: it was afterwards held by Queen Matilda. In Somersetshire, the abbey held five hides at Cumbe. Six burgesses in Meleburne paid to the abbess, as superior lord, fifty pence.

The total number of hides recorded in the Survey to have belonged to Shaftesbury abbey amounted to no fewer than three hundred forty-four and a half: the revenues of the monastery were of course, for that period, enormous. The total amount of rents, including the tenanted lands, appears to have been 347l. A great increase in the produce of the different manors took place between the time of K. Edward the Confessor and the time of forming the Survey.^a

In the Black-Book of the Exchequer we find that the abbey of St. Edward, in the reign of King Henry the First, found seven knights for the king's service. Of these, Earl Patrick, Ancelin Mauduit, Jordan de Neche, and Thurstan de Haselden, held a fee each; Robert Fitz Peter and Roger de Thoka held the fifth fee, the sixth and seventh were held by Roger de Newburgh. Beside these, twelve tenants are stated to have held under the abbess twelve hides and fractions.^b

King Henry the First's Charter, granting the manor of Dunheved for the clothing of the nuns, "ad vestimenta monialium," will be found in the Appendix of Instruments:^c together with King Stephen's Charter,^d ratifying a former Charter of K. Henry I.; in which the vey, Leland, Itin. vol. ii. p. 56, says, "The personage of Bradford is 50l. by the yere, and was ympropriate to Shaftesbury." Nothing more is known of this monastery.

Ancelinus Manduit tenet aliud. Jordanus de Neche tertium. Thurstan de Haselden quartum. Robertus filius Petri et Rogerus de Thoka quintum. Rogerus de Novo Burgo vi. et septimum, sed contra ecclesiam. lands noticed within it were proved before the king by abbess Emma, to belong to the monastery.

King Henry the Second granted to the nuns another ratification of the Charter of Henry the First: he also gave them a grant of freedom from tolls.^e

King John, in the year 1205, granted another Charter of confirmation.^f

The contents of numerous other Charters will be found in the analysis of the Register of Shaftesbury, which will presently be given.

In fact, Shaftesbury was one of the best endowed nunneries in England. Fuller says the country people had a proverb, "that if the abbot of Glassenbury might marry the abbess of Shaftesbury, their heire would have more land than the king of England."^g

Hutchins says, the abbess was of such quality, that she was one of the four who held of the king by an entire barony, and had, by tenure, privilege of being summoned to parliament, though, upon account of her sex, it was omitted.^h She appears to have had writs regularly directed to her to send her quota of soldiers into the field, in proportion to her knights' fees.ⁱ The three other abbesses were those of Barking in Essex, St. Mary in Winchester, and Wilton.^k

She had sea wreck in her manor of Kingston juxta Corf;^l a market and two fairs at Kenetbury, in the county of Berks;^m free warren in la Berton, Chesilburn, Almere, and Caundele, in Dorsetshire; in Dunheved, Tissebury, and Bradford, in Wilts; at Calneston and Combe-Porter, in Somerset; and at Folgam, in Sussex.ⁿ Hutchins says, also for the manor of Scure:^o ten marks rent from the manor of Brodeton, in Wilts:^p and the appropriations of the churches of Falgham^q and Tissebury.^r

In the 42d of Edward III. a patent was granted for embatteling the monastery, "de Abbatia kernellanda."^s

Bishop Tanner says, although all the religious of this abbey were females, and lived in common, yet the abbess had in her gift several prebends, or portions of appropriated tithes or lands for secular priests; as the prebends of Ywern, Gillingham, Ladington, and Fontmell:^t the two first and the last in Dorsetshire, the third in Wilts.

That the Capellani, for so they are called, were very early a part of the establishment of Shaftesbury may be gathered from "Rad. capellano de sancto Edwardo" occurring as a witness to Ernald de Hesding's Charter.^u Abbess Mary, the second of her name, begins several of her Charters in this form, "Noverit universitas vestra nos consensu communi nostri et capellanorum nostrorum concessisse, &c."^x

Hutchins informs us that the visitor of this abbey was the bishop of Salisbury; who, after the abbess's election, on her profession of canonical obedience to him, confirmed and gave her the benediction, and issued a mandate to the archdeacon of Dorset, to induct and install her. He appointed her confessors, and exercised other acts of episcopal jurisdiction in this abbey, either by himself or his commissary. The title of a deed in the Kalend. Muniment. it is added, "Supplicatio conventus tempore vacationis, et post lapsum semestrem,

Wido i. hidam ad sextam partem; Johannes i. hidam ad sextam partem; Nicolaus de Tarente i. hidam ad sextam partem; Gerardus Giffard i. hidam ad sextam partem; Turstanus de Haseldene i. hidam ad quintam partem; Rogerus de Stafford i. hidam ad quintam partem; Robertus de Etewithe i. hidam et dimidiam ad quartam partem militis; Helyas de Hanlege i. hidam ad quintam partem; Bartholomæus de Falcamah i. hidam ad quintam partem militis." directa episcopo, ut ipse provideret, jure sibi devoluto, de abbatisa," seems to imply, that the bishop of Sarum appointed the abbess, after a vacancy of six months.^a

On a vacancy of the abbey, or when there was a probability of one, it was usual for the king to grant the custody of the monastery to the prioress and nuns: ^b as in the 38th Edw. III. upon the death of abbess Joan Formage.^c It was likewise a part of the royal prerogative to recommend a nun to the convent upon the king's coronation. This appears to have been done in the 1st Ric. II. and again in the 1st Hen. V. A royal mandate to the abbess to admit Joan Ashcomb a nun, was also issued in 1428.^d The Harleian manuscript 433, fol. 22 b, preserves a Letter of recommendation from King Richard III. for Elizabeth Bryther to be the king's "mynchyne" at Shaftesbury.

On the 20th of May, 1497, Mr. Hutchins informs us, the bishop of Salisbury certifies, that the bishop of that see had an ancient right, at his entrance on the bishoprick, to place a "domicella," or poor woman, in this monastery; and to appoint one of the nuns to be her mistress, or "tutrix," to instruct her in religion. He appoints Elenor Eliot, "domicella," and Agnes Ashe, one of the nuns, to be her mistress.^e

The sum of twelve pounds paid by the abbess and convent "pro custodia villæ," for the guard of the town of Shaftesbury, was applied, A. D. 1450, 28th Hen. VI. to the expenses of the king's household.^f This customary payment was afterwards granted for life, in the 49th of Hen. VI. to George duke of Clarence.^g

In 1326, the bishop certified that there was an excessive multitude of nuns in this monastery; and in 1328, he made an "Ordinatio numeri," the revenues not being sufficient to maintain such a multitude; and declared a hundred and twenty nuns capable of being maintained here, and that no more could be admitted. Ibid. from Reg. Mortival, vol. ii. foll. 230, 231. The number was much reduced about a hundred years after.

^f Hutchins, ut supr. p. 416, from Rot. Parl. tom. v. p. 174.

^g It has been already noticed in the account of the abbey's possessions from the Domesday Survey, that a moiety only of the manor of Shaftesbury was held by the abbess: the other moiety down to the Dissolution, belonging to the king, or his grantees or lessees. The two, however, appear to have been considered as distinct manors. Hutchins says, the abbess held a court every three weeks, on Wednesdays, styled "Curia D. Abbatissæ," as appears by several court-rolls in the reigns of Edward II. Henry VI. and Edw. IV. and it is said in the Computus of Mr. Stone and Mr. Wykes, the abbess's bailiffs, to be held "infra portam abbatissæ." The perquisites of this belonged wholly to the abbess. She also held another court, styled "Curia legalis Feodorum Baroniarum," at which the bailiffs of the manor of Tissebury, Hanleigh, Kingston, &c. attended, and the men of Fontmel, Compton, West Orchard, &c. are said to be in the jurisdiction of this court, which seems to have been held every three weeks for pleas of debt, &c. as appears by

CECILIA, third daughter of Robert Fitz-Hamon, was made abbess by King Henry I. A. D. 1107.^q

EMMA, noticed by Hutchins as occurring in the Harleian Register,^r appears not to have been abbess of Shaftesbury. Willis, however, says, that an Abbess of the name presided from 1130 to 1135. In this latter year Hutchins notices an abbess of the name of Cecilia, but adds a quere, whether she was not the same as the former Cecilia.^s

MARIA occurs in the time of King Richard I. in a Charter from John earl of Morent.^t

AMICIA occurs in a Charter of the 17th of Hen. III. when that monarch demanded from her the service of three knights.^u

MARY, the second of the name, occurs, according to Hutchins, about 1247; ^x none of the Charters, however, granted by the convent in her name, contained in the Harleian Register, have dates.^y

AGNES FERRAR, DE FERAR, or DE LA FERRER, occurs abbess in 1252:^z and again in 1267.^a In 1257, she was summoned to Chester, to attend in the expedition against Lewellin ap Griffith prince of Wales.^b

JULIANA BAUCEYN, DE BAUSIN, or BAUCHIN, succeeded Agnes Ferrar. She occurs in the latter end of the year 1267.^c She also was summoned in 1277 to attend an expedition against Lewellin.^d

LAURENTIA became abbess in 1268.^e She occurs again in the 18th Edw. I., A. D. 1289.^f

MABILIA GYFFARD was the next abbess. The 22d of Edw. I. is said to be the third year of her promotion.^g She occurs again in 1301. In 1302, the bishop of Salisbury orders Richard de Slykeborn a minorite, and Richard le Brun, to be her confessors. The same year her brother Godfrey Gyffard, or Gifford, bishop of Worcester, left her a legacy at his death.^h

ALICE DE LAVYNTON made her profession of canonical obedience to the bishop, and was confirmed by him on Monday after the feast of All Saints, 1302.

MARGERY, or MARGARET AUCHIER, was elected Nov. 28, 1314; and confirmed by the bishop 6 id. Feb. 1315. She occurs in 1318, and again in 1327; in which last year, on the 16th of the kalends of February, the temporalities of the abbey were in the king's hands.ⁱ

DIONYSIA LA BLUNDE, or BLOUNT, was confirmed and received the benediction on the ides of July, 1329. She occurs in the 14th of Edw. III., A. D. 1340.^k

JOHANNA, or JOAN, occurs A. D. 1350.^l

MARGARET DE LEUCENORE succeeded in the same year. "Julij 12, 1350, habuit licentiam accipiendi munus benedictionis extra ecclesiam Sarum."^m She occurs in the 33d year of Edw. III., A. D. 1359.ⁿ

JOAN FORMAGE was confirmed and received the benediction on the last of July, 1362. On May 12th, 1368, the bishop of Sarum granted her a dispensation to go out of the monastery to one of her manors, to take the air and divert herself. Hutchins says her Will was dated 4th May, 1393, in the 32d year of her promotion; but annulled 25th Oct. 1393, as being prejudicial to the abbey.^a In the Kalend. Muniment. she is to have an obit for forty years in the cathedral of Sarum. A commission to elect an abbess in her room was issued Oct. 24th, 1394; but the abbey was vacant in 1395.^b

EGELINA occurs in 1397. She is said to have had a confirmation from the apostolic see. In April, 1398, the abbey was vacant.^c

CECILIA FOVENT occurs 7th June, 1398;^d and again, in the 3d Hen. IV., A.D. 1402.^e Willis notices her as abbess in 1415.^f

MARGARET STOURTON was confirmed and received the benediction 9th Dec. 1423. She died Oct. 30th, 1441.^g

EDITH BONHAM was elected abbess Nov. 15th, and confirmed Dec. 5th, 1441. She is said, in the Kalend. Munimentorum, to have had a dispensation from the Pope "super defectum natalium." She died A.D. 1460; and had a chantry and obit in the abbey church.^h

MARGARET ST. JOHN, third daughter of Sir Oliver St. John of Tregoze, was elected March 9th, 1460, and confirmed April 1461. She occurs as abbess in a Court Roll of 20th Edw. IV. 1480.ⁱ

ALICE GIBBS had the temporalities of the abbey restored to her Sept. 16th, 1491.^k She died Dec. 18th, 1496.^l

MARGERIE TWYNEO, or TWYNIHO, was elected Feb. 11th, and received the benediction Feb. 14th, 1496. She died 1504.^m

ELIZABETH SHELFORD was elected June 21st, and received the temporalities of the monastery July 11th, 1504.ⁿ Willis says she occurs in 1524.

ELIZABETH ZOUCHE, or SOUCHE, received the temporalities Feb. 22d, 1529.^o

Hutchins, in his History of Dorsetshire, has given a copy of the Instrument by which she surrendered her convent to the king, March 23d, 30 Hen. VIII., from the original preserved in the Augmentation Office.^p In this Instrument the house is styled the monastery of St. Mary the Virgin and St. Edward king and martyr Shaston. Pensions had been assigned, the day before, to the abbess and fifty-five nuns by the king's commissioners.^q

In the 1st Edw. VI. the king granted to Thomas Wriothesley, earl of Southampton, and his heirs, the manor of Shaftesbury (probably both moieties), the town, borough, site, and precincts of the late monastery of Shaftesbury, and all messuages, lands, &c. belonging to the same, in the parishes of St. Peter, St. Laurence, St. James, St. Martin, and the Holy Trinity; and the advowsons and rights of patronage of the rectories and churches of St. Peter, St. Laurence, St. Martin, and the Holy Trinity.^r

Not the smallest vestige of the CONVENTUAL CHURCH of SHAFTESBURY is now remaining.^s It is supposed to have been destroyed immediately upon the Dissolution. Of the ABBEY-HOUSE, two or three large arches, walled up, are almost the only indications. Hutchins has printed an Instrument with the date of 1565, relating to the site and precincts of the monastery, but no mention occurs in it either of the abbess's lodgings or the nuns' apartments.^t

Bishop Tanner, in his Notitia Monastica, notices a CHARTULARY of this abbey as formerly in the possession of John Law, Esq., of Shaftesbury; but Hutchins assures us that, when he compiled his History, this manuscript, upon the strictest enquiry, was not to be found.

The only Register of Shaftesbury at present known to be extant is that which has been so often quoted in the present Account; formerly in the possession of Sir Simonds D'Ewes, but at present preserved among the Harleian manuscripts in the British Museum. It is, for the most part, uniformly written, upon a hundred and twenty-four leaves of vellum, apparently about the time of King Henry the Fifth.^u

The SEAL of this monastery was engraved for the

VIII., to this effect: Sir Thomas Arundell, Knight, produced in the said court an Indenture under the conventual seal of the monastery of Shafton, bearing date the 5th day of February, 29 Hen. VIII., whereby Elizabeth Zowche, thabbess, and the convent of the said monastery demised to the said Sir Thomas Arundell, Knight, the whole scite of the manor of Tysebury, in the county of Wilts, and divers other premises in various places, at the yearly rent of 54*l.* 19*s.*, for the term of sixty years. Whereupon the Decree proceeds to state that, after due examination in this behalf made, it seemed to the court that the said Indenture was made in good faith, and without coven, fraud, or deceit; and therefore it establishes and allows the same, with a proviso that if it should afterwards be found that the said Sir Thomas Arundell ought not to have and enjoy the premises, the aforesaid decree is then to be of no force and effect.

Saviour and the Virgin Mary appear seated, with the dove over them, and a candle and candlestick on each side; below, in the lower semicircle of the quatrefoyle, the figure of some religious person is represented praying. The inscription round is, SIGILL . SCE . MARIE . ET . SCI . EDWARDI . REGIS . ET . MARTIRIS . SCHEFTONIE. The area of the other side is filled with the representation of a church of large dimensions, with a tower and spire in the centre: within the principal entrance stands a figure, on each side of which are the words s. SCEPTONIA est vicus modò, quoddam urbs, locus in prærupto montium situs: vetustatis indicium dat lapis in capitulo sanctimonialium sculptus, ita à vetustissimi muri ruinis illuc translatus. Anno Dominicæ incarnation. dcccclxxx. Elfredus rex fecit hanc urbem regni sui viij. Ibi Elgiva uxor Edmundi, qui fuit pronepos hujus Alfredi monasterium sanctimonialium fecit, ibidemque carnis exuvias post fatum deposuit. Mulier bonis operibus semper intenta, pietate et dulcedine prædita, et ut reos quos tristis sententia judicum palam damnaverat ipsa occultè redimeret: preciosus amictus qui muneribus nonnullis est leno solvendi pudoris, illi erat supellex munificentiae, ut quamlibet caram vestem conspecto statim largiretur pauperi, speciem corporis, et artificium manuum in ea livor quoque laudaret, cum nihil reprehendere posset, &c.

Eo loci jacet, vel potius jacuit S. Edwardus hujus sanctæ ex filio Edgardo nepos, quem novercali fraude innocenter cæsum cælum excepit, et prima quidem sepultura illi apud Warham fuit, quod non longè a loco in quo occisus fuit, qui Corf vocatur, imminet mari, &c. Posteriori vero tempore, pars corporis Lesmonasterium, pars Abendoniam deportata est. Ubique ipse viget, maximèque Sceptoniæ, et virtutum gratia et sanctissimo virginum choro coruscat.

Ædmundus Rex apud Stokes ii. Terræ Mansas adjacentes in perpetua Graphii Custodia Dono commisit.

[Ex Registro de Shaftesb. ut supr. fol. 4 b.]

IN nomine trinæ et unæ Deitatis. Omnipotens supernarum temporaliumque verus arbiter rerum, ante omnia tempora et ante omnia sidera duas originales de nichilo creaturas fieri disposuit, angelicam videlicet lucem, et informem materiam. Ex qua siquidem informi materia omnia quæ videntur, et quæ temporalia sunt, secundum temporis discretionem produciens, insuper formavit hominem. Qui spiritu vitæ inflatus, et ad imaginem et similitudinem Dei factus, divina dispensatione potestatem super alia cuncta elementa dominandi habuit. Quique Paradisi cum omnibus sede perenniter si vellet locatus, divinis imperiis humiliter obedire nolens, sed prona voluntate et serpentina suasionem inobedienter contra dominum superbire inallens, de superiori statu in inferiorem sortem cum omni sua progenie subsequente in labore et ærumpna procreatus est. Cumque naturæ sub lege per multa tempora innumerabili prole nationeque erat solutus, tandem misericors auctor, ne sua factura periret, misericordiam non iudicium pensans, legem literæ prophetasque, et mundo vespascente per unigenitum filium suum incarnatum legem gratiæ super homines. Et pro multiplici hominum multitudine, humanum genus per multas gentes linguasque dividens, secundum ejusdem legis judicium, quamvis æquali origine tamen divina conscientia et humana solertia pro lege servanda, alios in superiori gradu constituit imperatores et reges, qui, Spiritu Sancto gubernante, subditorum causam modò disciplinaliter, modò misericorditer procurarent, et divinis legibus adhærentes, militum curam munera dando, humilumque inopiam consolatia præstando sustinerent; alios in inferiori humiles subditos, qui aliis gubernantibus obsequium subjectionis ministrarent. Igitur quoniam omnes qui prosunt propter dolorum largitionem et divitiarum imperitionem, ab hominibus amabilem laudem, et à Deo gloriosam remunerationem habent. Ideo ego Admundus, ex regali progenie, Deo annuente regenteque, super Angligenas aliasque multas gentes in circuitu habitantes, rex ordinatus, amabili vassallo meo Adrico, fidelique amico, duas terræ mansas in perpetuam dono hæreditatem: quatenas temporalium rerum mobili præsentia utens, fidelem obedientiam ac pacem laudabilem erga regni sceptrum nostri, et regale nostrum solium eternabiliter impetret et benigniter servet: et post præsentis vitæ excessum illis quibuscunque voluerit subsequentibus hoc donum commendet, ut in omnibus paternæ obedientiæ exemplis circa regiam dignitatem fideles inveniantur. Pro eo illam terram perhenniter ipse primus pater, cum suis quibus post se commendavit à progenie in progeniem, in illis terminis quibus periti coloni ipsius regionis nomen proprium antiquo proposito esse dicunt Stoke dispono, ut possideat et perpetua graphii custodia me largiente cum omnibus pertinentibus ipsius telluris officio, campis, pratis, pascuis, teneatur, his tribus exceptis ad regalem dignitatem necessariis, expeditione, pontis arcisve cooperatione. His namque terminis ex omni parte sita terra dinoscitur esse circumgirata.

Quicumque istam terram præsignatam cum mea voluntate meaque benedictione benigniter et humanitus sub tali decreto talique graphio æternaliter custodierit, et regali more terminos ipsius in ampliore telluris protentu dilataverit, auctor donorum spiritus omnem præsentem conversationem illius omni hilaritate et rerum omnium prosperitate magnificet et jocundet; potens in terra sit semen ejus; ipsius generatio benedicatur; gloria et divitiæ in domo ejus, et justitia ipsius maneat in seculum seculi; et post hanc lucem temporalem æterno lumine cum omnibus sanctis in regno cœli perfruatur. Et è contrario quisquis, me nolente, meque prohibente, invidiæ stimulis agitatus, et ejus execrabili livore retortus, ejusdem terræ dimensionem diminuerit, et sub tali pacto non custodierit, præsens commiseratio ipsius in terris ab omni bonorum possibilitate diminuatur, et in die futuro calamitatis collocetur à sinistris cum Tartarorum dæmoniis, ubi erit fletus et stridor dentium, poena æterna sine præstolatione consolationis, nisi digna pœnitentia et reconciliatione pura per satisfactionem in hujus lucis spatio hoc emendaverit et ampliùs peccare desinerit.

O. ALTITHRONI genitoris ingenti, ejusdemque nativi divinitus uniti, cum sancti unione paracleti, monarchia, rebus essendi facultatem, ac illis ne adnullenter suavem impertiente gubernationem filiis adoptionis, non jam vetuste configuratis ignorantiae desideriiis, sed secundum eum ut ait beatus apostolus Petrus: 'qui vocavit vos sanctus est: ipsis quoque in omni sancta conversatione fundatis' commutatione temporalium spes futurorum ac æternalitas possidendorum conceditur. Fiducia bonorum hujusmodi, mihi gratuito, uti cæteris, allubescente gratiâ, ego Atheldred, regionis Angligenarum rex, monasterio sanctimonialium, quod insulani usitato Schaftesburi appellant onomate, xx. mansas, illo in loco qui noto æt Tissebiri vocatus vocamine sitas, quas sicut antiquis diebus omnes antecessores mei illuc donaverunt, ita ego quoque hiis regni mei temporibus eandem donationem, cum optimatum meorum consultu renovando in hæreditatem concedo perhennem. Nam et pristinis ante me temporibus avus meus, Ædmund scilicet rex, idem pro commutatione Butticanlea adquisitum conjugii suæ Algife in jus æternaliter habendum concessit, et ipsa quoque illud ad laudem Domini et Salvatoris nostri Jesu Christi, ejusque genetricis semperque Virginis Mariæ, adque æternam sui liberationem præfato studuit attribuire loco. Sed patruus meus, Ædwi viz. rex, post obitum Alfigife supradictæ jus mutavit, hoc ipsum sibi viz. Bueticanlea accipiens sanctorum cœnobio præfatum terram æt Tisseburi perpetualiter attribuens. Quod idcirco cum optimatibus meis renovare studui, ut omnibus mihi hanc voluntatem inesse manifestè pateat, eandem portionem cum omnibus ad se rite pertinentibus ab omni mundana servitute, sicut antiquitus, liberam fore, tribus exceptis, rata expeditione, pontis, arcisve recuperatione. Silvam sane Fienyllebar appellatam, quam meorum quidam præpositorum ausu diripere conabantur infesto, eidem monasterio totam integramque restituo, et nullus hanc invadere, nullus unquam sibi aliquatenus audeat usurpare, sed uti olim, seu prædixi, ita nunc et in posterum ad inibi Deo famulantium usum, quam diu rota volvitur hujus seculi, libera perpetualiter existat. Si quis igitur hanc meam cum Dei voluntate renovatam præsumpserit infringere donationem, æternis baratri incendiis cum diabolo sine fine crucietur, nisi in hac prius emendaverit vita quod contra nostrum deliquit decretum. Rus verò præfatum hiis metis incirco rotatur.

CONDITORE creaturarum universalium, seu quæ in secretis cœlestibus oculis hactenus latent humanis, seu quæ in terris visibiliter patent, seu quæ in profundis gurgitibus fluctivagis circumquaque trahant discursibus in suæ incommutabilitatis firmissima æternaliter regnante stabilitate, cunctaque ab ipso et per ipsum et in ipso condita, redempta, vivificata sunt, ineffabili suæ majestatis regente privilegio, hujus ærumptosæ ac miserrimæ vitæ instabilitas flebilibus querimoniis suæ defectionis jam jamque supervenientis laboriosum prænuntiat terminum. Quippe cum veritatis præconium quæ in se post vitam^a protoplasti prævaricationem, carnem nostræ mortalitatis, ut eam immortalem postmodum redderet, ex intemerato semper virginis utero pro salute totius humani generis induere dignata est, nostra suscipiens, suaque aut relinquens, inter cætera suæ ammonitionis eloquia, ita dicendo omnibus proclamaret. 'Cum videritis hæc fieri, scitote quod prope est regnum Dei. Amen dico vobis quia non præteribit generatio hæc donec omnia fiant. Cœlum et terra transibunt; verba autem mea non transibunt.' Attamen alicubi fidelium undique consulendo saluti, lucrumque requirens quas proprio livore redemit animarum saluberrimum, ut ita dixerim, subministravit antidotum, taliter universos comonens: 'Vendite quæ possidetis et date elemosinam et ecce omnia munda sunt vobis.' Christi sententiis à meis frequentius præmonitus consiliariis, et ab ipso summo omnium largitore bonorum, dirisimis hostium graviter nos depopulantium creberrime angustiatu flagellis, ego Atheldredus, rex Anglorum, ut supradictæ merear particeps fore promissionis, quoddam Christo a sancto suo germano scilicet meo Edwardo, quem proprio cruore profusum per multiplicia virtutum signa ipse dominus nostris mirificare dignatus est temporibus, cum adjacente undique villa, humili devotione offero cœnobium quod vulgariter æt Bradeforda cognominatur, hoc mecum sub sapientum meorum testimonio tacitè præjudicans, ut supradictum donum sancto semper subiaceat monasterio æt Sceftesbirio vocitato, ac ditioni venerabilis familiæ sanctimonialium inibi degentium, quatenus adversus barbarorum insidias ipsa religiosa congregatio cum beati martyris cæterorumque sanctorum reliquiis ibidem Deo serviendi impenetrabile optineat confugium. Et adepto, postmodum, si Dei misericordia ita præviderit, pacis tempore rursus ad pristinum revertantur statum, ea tamen ratione ut in loco quem Domino optuli pars aliquantula ex ipsa remaneat familia, quæ divini operis sedula mihi jugiter expleat officia; hocque an fieri possit sapienti consilio prioris præmeditetur industria. Sin alias, prævideat rectoris examinatio, unde ibidem continuè exerceatur ordo psalmodiæ. Ut autem ista nostra donatio incommutabilem capiat stabilitatem, et ut præsentis quid observent, vel quid subsequantur certiùs agnoscant futuri; hoc interea hac scedula annotari dignum duxi, quatenus præscripta villa cum omnibus ad se ritè pertinentibus, campis, silvis, pascuis, pratis, ita sanè ut ego ipse illam in usus possederam proprios, venerabili supradictæ familiæ Christo sanctoque martyri incessanter famulanti semper subjugetur liberrima; tribus tantummodo exceptis communium laborum utilitatibus; si contingat expeditionem promoveri, arcem pontemque construi. Hocque regia præcipimus auctoritate, ut nullius elatio, vel mussitatio altioris aut inferioris personæ, hanc nostram donationem evertere seu minorare præsumat, hoc solummodo adversus omnia contradicentium machinamenta nostræ dapsilitatis prævalente privilegio. Præsertim, cum ego hoc non privatim pro remedio animæ meæ, sed pro totius nostræ genealogiæ, qui vel olim præterierunt, vel in posterum fortè venturi sunt, generali salute dictaverim. Nec istud decretum nostris tantum temporibus perduret immutabile, verumetiam et successorum meorum diebus, quos, quales, qui, seu quoti futuri sunt, Dei prestit æterna prædestinatio. Quisquis autem hanc nostram munificentiam amplificare studuerit, augeatur ei in præsentis temporis quieti longevitas et in futuro centuplicate^a retributionis cœlestæ præmium. Qui verò evertere, aut in aliud quis transferre satagerit, abbrevietur hic dies vitæ ipsius, ut cum his qui Christo resistere nituntur in inferiori prolongentur inferno, ni velocius recedat a perversa meditatione, et eum quem offendere non metuit, dignis pœnitentiæ lamentis placare festinaverit. Hiis confiniis præscripta circumcingitur tellus.

Tavistock, or Tavystoke Monastery,

IN

DEVONSHIRE.

THE generality of our historians who mention Tavistock, date the foundation of its abbey in 961.^a It is said to have been begun by Ordgar earl of Devonshire, and to have been finished by his son Ordulf,^b by whom it was dedicated to the honour of the Virgin Mary and St. Rumon.^c The Annals of this monastery, however, preserved among the Digby manuscripts in the Bodleian library, place the foundation twenty years lower; which, Bishop Tanner says, may be understood of the finishing by Ordulf, A. D. 981.^d King Ethelred's Charter of Confirmation^e is dated in this very year.

Ordgar, his countess, one of his sons, and St. Rumon, were all buried in the abbey church.^f

The account of the foundation of this monastery, as transcribed by Dugdale from one of its Registers formerly in the possession of John Maynard, Esq. will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.^g

In 997, this monastery appears to have been burnt by the Danes.^h Willis says, it lay some small time in ruins; but, on its re-establishment, it flourished in greater lustre than before.ⁱ

The following were its endowments, as recorded in the Domesday Survey, A. D. 1086. In Dorsetshire, three hides at Oscherwilla, and two at Pourtone. In Devonshire, three hides and a half at Tavistock; half a hide at Middeltone; two manors at Lege and Litelton, consisting, together, of half a hide; half a hide in Lidel-tone; in Adrelie, three hides; one hide at Torneberie; two hides at Hame; half a hide at Wrdiete; three hides at Bernintone; a virgate at Radone; one hide at Liege; half a hide at Hundatore; half a hide at Deveneberie; two hides at Welle; half a hide at Plemestoch; and a house, which had belonged to one of the burgesses, in Exeter. In Cornwall, one hide at Savioch; half a hide at Antone; one hide at Rame; half a hide at Tregrenon; a virgate at Pennehalgar; and half a virgate at Talgar. Making a total of twenty-seven hides, two virgates and a half; the advanced rent of which, at the time of the Conqueror's Survey, amounted to the annual sum of 96*l.* 5*s.* The Earl of Moretaine is stated to have usurped from the church four manors, Boietone, Elent, Trebichen, and Trewent, all of which were claimed by the abbat.^k

King William the Second, A. D. 1096, in the ninth year of his reign, confirmed to this monastery the manor of Wulurinton in Devonshire, giving seisin of it to the abbat "per cultellum eburneum," by the delivery of an ivory knife, in the presence of the bishops of Winchester and Bath and Wells, and the abbat of Glastonbury. The knife, it is added, was deposited in the shrine of St. Rumon.^l

Henry the First, in a Charter of confirmation, gave to the church the hundred of Tavistock, with a fair at the feast of St. Rumon, to last three days.^m He also confirmed to them the churches in the isle of Scilly;ⁿ where Reginald, his illegitimate son, who was created earl of Cornwall, also granted them the wreck of sea which might happen there, excepting only whales and any whole ship.^o

The knight's fees held by the monastery in this reign are recorded in the Black Book of the Exchequer.^p

"Venerabili domino suo H. Anglorum regi nobilissimo, Walterus, Dei gratia Tavistochiensis ecclesiæ minister humilis, fideles orationes in Christo. Noverit celsitudo vestra de tenura militum nostrorum, quantum inde sollicitus inquirendo scire potuit parvitas nostra, quod eo anno et die quo inclytus rex H. avus noster, vixit, et viam universæ carnis ingressus est, tenuerunt de pauperula domo nostra: Ricardus

Bartholomew Iscanus, bishop of Exeter, before the year 1186, on account of the slenderness of the revenues, as it should seem, granted the appropriation to this monastery of the churches of St. Eustace Tavistock, Lammerton, Middelton, North Piderwyne, Hatherlegh, Abbedesham, and St. Michael de Rupe;^a which, with the other spiritual possessions belonging to it, were confirmed by a bull from Pope Celestine the Third, in the third year of his pontificate, A. D. 1193.^b

King Henry the Third granted to the abbat and convent, in the fourth year of his reign, a market and fair at Hatherlegh;^c and, in his fifth year, a market at Wolrinton.^d Two Charters of confirmation from this monarch, as to the privileges of this monastery, also occur in the Inspeximus of the 22d of Edw. III.^e

Among the minor benefactors of an early period were Odo the archdeacon, who gave to the monks West Lydeton;^f Robert de Veteri-Ponte, or Old-Bridge, who gave them lands at Wynemereston;^g and Robert Fitz Baldwin, who gave Paseford.^h

Reginald de Ferrars, lord of Ber, and Isota de Ferrars, lady of Nyweton, gave other land in Cornwode, A. D. 1280.ⁱ

King Edward the Second appears to have been a considerable benefactor. In the 12th year of his reign he granted to the monks, view of frank-pledge, a market, and fair in their manor of Devenbury.^k In the same year, having borrowed three hundred pounds of the abbey, he granted them the profits of his mine at Birlond, in Devon, for three years;^l afterwards securing the repayment of another hundred pounds upon the mines of Devonshire generally.^m

In his nineteenth year, King Edward II. granted to the abbat and convent the custody of his stannary in Devon, with the water of Dartmouth for seven years, they paying for the same the annual sum of 113*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*ⁿ

In the 5th of Edward III. the abbat paid a fine of ten pounds to the king for the appropriation of the church of Whitechurche.^o

In the 26th of Edward III. John D'Abernon, of Bradeford, gave to the monastery his manor of Wyke by Brentetorre;^p and in the second of Richard II. William Eggecumbe, of Cotehele, gave certain lands in the park of Inneslegh.^q

In the 2d and 3d of Edward the Fourth, the Alien priory of Cowike, near Exeter, which had been given by King Henry VI. to Eton College, was granted to Tavistock abbey as a cell.^r

In the 6th of Edward the Fourth, Modbury, another alien priory in Devonshire, which had belonged to Eton college, was likewise granted as a cell;^s but afterwards reverted to Eton.^t

ALMERUS was the first abbat, appointed A. D. 981.

de Alneto feodum 111*l.* militum. Rogerus Cornutus feodum 11*l.* militum. Radulfus de Oskerevill feodum 11*l.* militum. Willelmus de tribus Minetis feodum 111*l.* militum. Reginaldus de Liddeton feodum duorum militum. Galfridus de Lege feodum 1*l.* militis et dim. Willelmus Gurdet feodum dimidii militis. Hugo de Wicha feodum 1*l.* militis. Robertus Dacus feodum dimidii militis. Willelmus de Crievebere feodum dimidii militis. Postea vero in tempore guerræ, de dominicis terris ecclesiæ nostræ, quas ei bonæ memoriæ H. rex, avus vester, restituit per justiciam suam, et per cartas, quas habemus, et quas audit aliquando excellentia vestra, Ricardus de Colevill feod. 1*l.* milit. Galfridus de Lega et Willelmus filius ejus feod. dim. milit. ab ecclesia extorserunt. Dilatet Dominus regnum vestrum, et longo tempore conservet." Lib. Nig. Scacc. tom. i. p. 117.

He appears to have governed the monastery till after its destruction by the Danes.^u

LIVINGUS is the second abbat upon record. He was originally a monk of Winchester; and, from abbat of Tavistock, in 1031, became bishop of Crediton.^x In 1038 he added the bishoprick of Worcester to his preferments;^y and afterwards assisted in raising King Edward the Confessor to the throne.^z He died on the 10th of the kalends of April, 1046.^a

EALRED, or ALDRED, another monk of Winchester, succeeded Livingus in the abbey A. D. 1031; and afterwards in the bishoprick of Worcester.^b

SIHRICUS, or SIHTRICUS, was the next abbat. He occurs as a witness in 1050 to the Charter of King Edward the Confessor, in virtue of which the bishopricks of Cornwall and Devon became united at Exeter. In the Record called the Exon Domesday, an account of which will hereafter be given, he is frequently mentioned, and his name as variously written. He is called SIHTRICIUS, SITRICIUS, SISTRICUS, and SUETRICUS.^c He died on the 8th of the ides of April, 1082.^d

GEOFFREY, or GAUFRIDUS, succeeded Sihricus. He was abbat at the time of the formation of the Domesday Survey.^e He died A. D. 1088.

WIMUND, or GUIMUND, occurs as abbat in the Register of Tavistock, A. D. 1090,^f and again in 1096. He was deposed by Archbishop Anselm in the Council of London, A. D. 1102, for simony.^g

OSBERT succeeded Wimund. His name occurs in King Henry the First's grant to the abbey of the churches in the Isle of Scilly.^h

GEOFFREY, or GAUFRIDUS, the second of the name, is mentioned as abbat in a subsequent part of the reign of Henry the First.ⁱ Willis, who places abbat Osbert's death on the 6th of the nones of July, 1131, says he was succeeded by

ROBERT DE PLIMPTON, who died on the 13th of the kalends of February, A. D. 1141. Hearne says he died on the 12th kal. Feb. 1145. His successor was

ROBERT POSTELL. He died on the 2d of the ides of March, A. D. 1154.^k

WALTER, a monk of Winchester, was the next abbat.^l Willis, from the Annals among the Digby MSS., dates his death on the 6th of the ides of October, A. D. 1174.^m He is said to have been succeeded by BALDWIN, who, according to the same authority, died on the 6th of the ides of August, A. D. 1183.

STEPHEN occurs abbat of Tavistock, A. D. 1190, in the 2d year of Richard the First.ⁿ

HERBERT occurs in 1193.^o Willis says he died on the 9th of the kalends of December, A. D. 1200.^p He was succeeded by JORDAN, who died A. D. 1220:^q on the 20th of February in which year the royal assent was given to the election of

WILLIAM, prior of Oterinton,^r called in the Digby manuscript WILLIAM KERMET.^s He died in 1224: on the 3d of June in which year the royal assent was given to the election of abbat

JOHN, at that time chaplain to Stephen archbishop of Canterbury.^a Upon his death,

ALAN DE CORNWALL became abbat; the royal assent to whose election was given June 8th, 1233.^b He had previously been prior of Sulye, or Scilly. He died on the 2d of the kalends of March, A.D. 1248, and was succeeded, according to Willis, by

ROBERT DE KITECNOL, a monk of the monastery. Willis says, "When he died I find not, but he governed not long, for the Patent mentions the election of one

THOMAS to this abbey in the same year."^c The royal assent was given to this last election June 2d, 1248.^d

JOHN DE NORTHAMPTON, cellarer of the monastery of Bermundsey, received the royal assent to his election as abbat here Aug. 7th, 1257.^e Willis calls him Henry de Northampton. He died after he had presided scarcely two years.

PHILIP TRENCHFIELD, or TRENCHFOYLE, a monk of St. Swithin Winchester, had the temporalities of Tavistock delivered to him Aug. 14th, 1259.^f He died in the month of July the next year; when the custody of the abbey was committed, during the vacancy, to Roger de Evesham.^g On the 30th of August following the royal assent was given to the election of

ALURED, who had been prior of the monastery; to whom the temporalities were restored on Sept. 13th.^h

JOHN CHUBB received the temporalities of the monastery Sept. 30th, 1262.ⁱ He appears to have been deposed eight years after, when one

ROBERT, precentor of the monastery, succeeded to the abbacy. The king's assent to his election was given Jan. 14th, 1270.^k

ROBERT CAMPBELL had the royal assent to his election on the 21st of April, and the temporalities restored on May 2d, 1285, upon the death of the former Robert.^l His death was announced to the king Dec. 23d, 1325; and, on the 6th of March following,

ROBERT BOSSE, who is called BONUS in the bishop of Exeter's Register, received the king's letters of protection as abbat.^m The bishop's mandate for his induction, however, does not bear date till the 2d of the ides of June, 1327.ⁿ His government was but of short duration. He was, first, interdicted by his diocesan from managing the affairs of the abbey on July 8th, 1333, and afterwards deposed, for contempt, on the 24th of October following.^o A licence for a fresh election was obtained Nov. 22d, 1333: and on Jan. 3d, 1334,

JOHN DE COURTENAY was elected.^p Dugdale and Willis agree in stating him to have been the eldest son of Hugh de Courtenay, earl of Devonshire; who, betaking himself in his youth to a monastic life, left his second brother Hugh to succeed his father in the earldom, which he lived to see him possessed of.^q Willis says, that in 1330, John de Courtenay being then a monk of Tavistock, the pope bestowed upon him the priorate of the rich monastery of Lewes, in Sussex: the patron, however, John de Warren, earl of Surrey, opposing his election, and the pope yielding thereto, John de Courtenay lost the preferment, and ultimately got no other but this of Tavistock.^r Supported by the interest of his family, this abbat appears to have lived in a state of jealousy and constant hostility toward his diocesan. In 1338 he was suspended from his office by the bishop for dilapidations; but was restored, upon submission. In 1348 he fell again under the episcopal displeasure for alienating the possessions of the monastery: the business was compromised, but the bishop forbade the abbat to keep hounds.^s He died before the 11th July, 1349, when a licence for a fresh election was obtained.

RICHARD DE ESSE, or ASSHE, received the royal assent June 4th, 1350.^t His successor was

STEPHEN DE LANGEDON, who received the benediction from the bishop of Wells Oct. 20th, 1362, by virtue of a commission from the bishop of Exeter.^u Willis says he died Nov. 28, 1380.^x Bishop Kennett, in his Diptycha, says in 1381.

THOMAS CULLYNGE, or CULLEN, received the king's assent Feb. 1st, and had his election confirmed by the bishop of Exeter Feb. 17th, 1381.^y He died June 11th, 1402.^z

JOHN MAY, or MEY, took the oath of fealty to the king, as abbat, July 30th, 1402.^a He died, according to Willis, Nov. 23d, but according to the Registers of the see of Exeter Feb. 7th, 1421.^b

THOMAS MEDE, a monk of Tavistock, had the temporalities of the monastery restored to him as abbat April 19th, 1422.^c In 1437 he was accused of wasting the revenues of the monastery, and of incontinence, but appears to have cleared himself.^d He died April 21, 1442.^e Upon his death,

THOMAS CRISPIN was elected, May 23d, 1442;^f to whom the temporalities of the monastery were restored on the 27th of June.^g He died April 5, 1447.^h

WILLIAM PEWE, or PNEWE, was elected abbat May the 2d following;ⁱ and had the temporalities granted to him on May 29th.^k He died Dec. 26th, 1450.^l

JOHN DYNINGTON, or DYMYNGTON, was elected abbat January 27th, 1451; and received the temporalities on the 25th of February.^m A copy of the royal licence to this abbat, to sue to the pope for the privilege of wearing the mitre and other insignia, dated Feb. 3d, 1458, will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.ⁿ Willis says he occurs abbat four years after this grant, viz. stored to him as abbat March 25th, 1490:^a Willis says in 1491. Upon whose death, or cession,

RICHARD BANHAM became abbat. He had the temporalities granted to him June 27th, 1492.^b Being a man of an aspiring temper, he procured himself a seat in the House of Lords, early in the reign of Henry the Eighth,^c as it was believed, that he might cope the better with his diocesan, Hugh Oldham bishop of Exeter, with whom he had great contests. Willis says, he went so far in his hostility as to prevail upon the pope to excommunicate the bishop.^d Previous, however, to his becoming a lord spiritual, he sought and obtained a reconciliation with the bishop;^e although the contest respecting jurisdiction was afterwards carried on.^f He did not enjoy his peerage above ten years.

JOHN PERYN, the last abbat of Tavistock, received the temporalities of his office Dec. 14th, 1523.^g In 1525, he entered into a composition with the bishop of Exeter respecting jurisdiction.^h On the 20th of March, 1538, he, with twenty of his monks, surrendered his monastery to the king. The pensions granted on the occasion will be found among the Instruments in the Appendix.ⁱ Abbat Peryn had a pension of a hundred pounds per annum. Willis informs us, that his will, preserved in the Prerogative Court of London, bore date at Tavistock Oct. 6th, 1549, and was proved April 30th, 1550.^k

The revenues of Tavistock abbey at the time of the Dissolution, according to Dugdale, amounted to 902*l.* 5*s.* 7*d.* Speed and Stevens say 902*l.* 5*s.* 7½*d.* The site was granted in the 31st of Henry the Eighth, together with the borough and town of Tavistock, to Lord John Russell. His descendant, the Duke of Bedford, is the present proprietor.

William of Worcestre, who wrote his Itinerary in the middle of the fourteenth century, gives the following as the dimensions of the abbey church in his time:

"Longitudo Ecclesiæ Monasterii Tavystoke continet præter capellam beatæ Mariæ 126 steppys: et ejus latitudo continet, cum 14 steppys latitudinis navis ecclesiæ, 21 steppys.

"Longitudo navis dictæ Ecclesiæ tantum usque ad chorum continet 60 steppys.

"Longitudo chori 42 steppys. Longitudo capellæ cum transitu 36 steppys."¹

Willis, whose History of the Mitred Parliamentary Abbies was published in 1718, informs us that the abbey-church, although defaced, remained standing in its ruins till within fifty years of his time; when the materials of the tower, &c. being given to build a school-house, the whole became entirely rased to the ground. "As to the offices," he adds, "they being for the most part left standing, continue at this present, and are converted to divers uses. The Gate-House is as I remember made a prison. The Refectory, to the gratification of the enemies of our excellent church, is let out for a Meeting-House. The Saxon-School and other offices employed to hold corn, hay, &c. The Walls of the Kitchen and Chapter House are all standing, only uncovered at top. The scite of the Cloysters is visible, and measures about forty-five paces in length; the east side opened into the Chapter-House, which was a neat pile, being exactly octangular, and comprising thirty-six stalls most beautifully arched overhead. To sum up all, the monastery comprehended a large plot of ground, whereon stood a great quantity of buildings, which were enclosed with a high wall turretted at top."^m

Mr. Gough, in his Additions to Camden, informs us, that the chapter-house and the Saxon school were pulled down in 1736, to build a house for the Duke of Bedford's steward.ⁿ In the only arch of the cloisters which remained in Mr. Gough's time, two large bones were shown, pretended to be Ordgar's, or rather Ordulf's, whose figure was there in 1718.

Various fragments of the abbey still remain, but for the most part incorporated with other buildings. An arched gate-way ornamented with pinnacles, formerly belonging to the abbey, adjoins the principal inn in the town of Tavistock. Several other buildings, the appearance of which indicates them once to have formed a part of the monastery, are now used for ware-houses.

Two REGISTERS of Tavistock abbey are in the possession of his Grace the Duke of Bedford; one of them appears to be the same with that which Dugdale mentions as formerly belonging to John Maynard, Esq., and from which he copied the larger portion of the Charters preserved in the Appendix to the present Account.

ⁿ The earliest authority for the mention of this Saxon school, as it is called, is probably to be found in Archbishop Parker's Preface to Asser's Annals of Alfred: "Quinetiam quoniam diplomata multa, et vetustioris ætatis monumenta, tum regiæ quæ in archivis custodiuntur chartæ, tam ante quam post Normannorum in Angliam adventum, adhuc extant, quæ Saxonice et verbis, et literis comprehenduntur, omnes qui in regni institutis addiscendis elaboraverint cohortabor, ut exiguo labore, seu pene nullo hujus sibi linguæ cognitionem acquirant. Quod si facere voluerint, multa proculdubio quotidie eruent, et elicient, quæ abdita jam jacent, et abstrusa, et plurimarum rerum involutas penitus naturas, et implicitas, nullo negotio expedient. Quem in finem superioribus sæculis a majoribus nostris monialium quædam collegia instituta sunt, in quibus essent quæ et hujus linguæ scientia imbuerentur, et eandem (cum aliis communicando) ad posteros transmitterent. Quod quidem in CENOBIO monialium TAVESTOKENSI in comitatu Deuonia, et multis aliis conventiculis (nostra memoria) receptum fuit, credo, ne ejus sermonis peritia, ob linguæ insolentiam penitus obsolesceret." It is also noticed by Camden. No notice whatever of such a foundation occurs among the ancient documents relating to the abbey.

Mr. Gough, in his Additions to Camden, says, "The foundation here for the encouragement of Saxon literature probably sunk at the Reformation: though had the divines of that time been aware how much the doctrines of the early Saxon church corresponded with those they were introducing, it would have been for their interest to have kept it up."

"The anecdote of a Saxon grammar," he adds, "being printed here in the beginning of the Civil wars (a very unlikely period) rests on the single authority of Bishop Gibson, or Dr. Musgrave, who sent him many particulars relating to Devonshire. Such a memorial of the typographic art among us, one would think, would have been preserved to the present age as well as Walton's translation of Boethius de Consolatione, 'enprinted in the exempt monastery of Tavestoke in Denshyre by me dan Thomas Rychard monke of the sayd monastery,' 1529, 4to. and 'The Confirmation of the Tynners' Charter,' 26 Hen. VIII. in sixteen leaves, 4to." Camd. Brit. edit. Gough, 1789, vol. i. p. 33.

Copies of a few Instruments relating to this monastery occur in the Harleian manuscript num. 862.^a

An impression of the conventual SEAL of the monastery of Tavistock is appended to a document in the Augmentation Office, marked Chartæ Antiquæ, R. 62, bearing date the last day of June, in the 15th year of King Henry the Eighth, and purporting to be an annual pension to Sir Henry Courtenay, Knight. It represents, under a Gothic canopy, the Virgin Mary seated, with the child on her lap. On each side is a compartment, containing an angel kneeling, and in the act of praying. In an arch under the middle compartment sits a bishop or mitred abbot. Of the legend nothing more can be traced with certainty than the words SIGILLUM MONASTERII DE

Est in Domnonia coenobium monachorum juxta Tau fluvium, quod Tavistok vocatur, quod per Ordgarum, comitem Domnoniensem, patrem Elfridæ, quæ fuit uxor regis Edgari surgendi exordium, per Livingum episcopum (Exon.) crescendi accepit auspiciū. Locus amœnus opportunitate nemorum, capturâ copiosâ piscium, ecclesiæ congruente fabricâ, fluvialibus rivis per officinas monachorum decurrentibus, qui suo impetu effusi, quicquid invenerint superfluum, portant in exitum. Rumonus sanctus ibi prædicatur, et jacet episcopus pulchritudine decoratus scrinii, ubi nulla scriptorum fides assistit opinioni, quod non solum ibi, sed in multis locis Angliæ, invenies violentia hostilitatis abolitam omnem gestorum notitiam, nuda sanctorum nomina, et si quæ modo prætendunt miracula sciri. Cernitur in eodem monasterio sepulchrum Ordgari, spectaculoque ducitur enormitas mausolei filii ejus. Edulfus hic vocatus est, giganteæ molis, et immanis roboris, sicut breviter demonstrare incidit animo. Viam agebat cum Edwardo rege, cujus erat cognatus, Exoniam versus. Ita cum juxta portam equis dissiluissent, offenderunt introitum forinsecus repagulis, intus seris damnatum. ^b For the sake of compression, and because the Instruments relating to this cell are all included in the Appendix to Tavistock (see Numm. XVIII. XIX. XX. XXI.), we shall dispose of it here.

From King Henry the First's Charter to the monks of Tavistock (Append. Num. XVIII.) it appears, that in or before the reign of Edward the Confessor, some of the Scilly islands, and the tithes of the whole, had been given to certain monks or hermits who had their abode in the island of St. Nicholas. King Henry the First made their house a cell to Tavistock. From the following entry in the Abbreviatio Rotulorum Originalium it should seem that in the 19th of Edw. III. A.D. 1346, two monks only were resident there; for whom two secular chaplains were allowed to be substituted during the war with France. “Abbas et conventus de Tavystok finem fecerunt cum rege per viginti solidos pro licentia habenda quod ipsi duos capellanos sæculares pro animabus progenitorum regis quondam regum Angliæ et hæredum suorum in insula de Sulby, celebraturos loco duorum capellanorum commonachorum suorum quos ibidem ex causa prædicta invenire solebant durante guerra inter Regem et homines de Francia mota invenire possint.” Abbrev. Rot. Origin. 19 Edw. III. inter gross. fin. ro. 34.

From their spiritual jurisdiction the abbats of Tavistock were frequently termed “Domini de Scilly,” although the property and temporal jurisdiction of all the islands continued vested from the earliest times in the earls of Cornwall. William of Worcestre, in his Itinerary, p. 116, says, “Insulæ de Sully sunt sub approtasmento Pii papæ Anno 1462, 6 idus Julij anno 3^o. pontificatus Pii papæ, ad instanciam abbatis Tavystoke, et domini Johannis Colsylle militis, domini principalium insularum, et dictus abbas est rector dictarum insularum.”

Since the Reformation the tithes have been vested in the lords proprietors.

Some remains of the conventual church of St. Nicholas in Trescaw are still to be seen. Dr. Borlase gave a view of it in his Observations on the Scilly Islands.

Bishop Tanner refers to Cart. 1 Joan. p. 1, n. 155 et 219, de Decimis Forestæ de Guffaer.

TEMPORIBUS bonæ memoriæ nobilissimi ac strenuissimi regis Edgari extitit quidam comes nomine Ordulphus de nobilissima gentis Anglorum prosapia, filius egregii ac venerabilissimi antiqui Ordgari, vir valdè Deo devotus, quod actionis suæ exitus probavit, sicut in sapientiæ laude canitur, omnis laus in sui fine demonstratur. Hic quadam nocte, sicut mos ei ab adolescentia inoleverat, de lecto suo surgens Deo supplicando extra limen suæ domus progreditur. Cum moras in oratione ageret, manusque suas ad cælum tendendo levaret, ecce Dei bonitas et gloria quæ famulo suo Moysi in igne rubi omnibusque filiis Israel heremum transeuntibus die in columpna nubis, noctuque in columpna ignis apparuit, adest et huic Dei famulo, à terra usque ad cælum pertingens, omnem meridiani solis fulgorem superans, se in igne atque splendore manifestando. Visa ergo tanti luminis superni splendoris claritate ex improviso, nec mirum extimuit. Ac intra suæ domus liminare sese recepit, atque in lectulo suo membra fessa locavit, ibique lacrimis suis lectum suum rigavit quousque sopor eum invasit. Cum ergo soporando quiesceret, ecce quidam vultus venustissimi ac candidissimi astitit ei dicensque illi: “Ne timeas vir Deo dilecte, scias pro certo preces tuas à Deo fore exauditas. Hoc enim tibi demonstravit cœlesti lumine quod in splendentis ignis columpna tibi ostendit. Surge ergo summo auroræ diluculo et illum locum quo prædicta columpna steterat inquirendo perquire, ibique signum sanctitatis invenies, quatuor scilicet virgulas quadris lateribus infixas, faciesque ibi oratorium in quatuor evangelistarum honore, tam amplum quam præfixio denotat virgarum, qui Salvatorem omnium gentium per quadrifidum orbem velud in quadrigæ curru intulerunt. Hocque faciendo peccatorum tuorum veniam mereberis.” Evigilans verò statim à sompno, stratu desiliens suo genua ad Deum flectendo et post orationem suam conjugii visionem recitavi. Illa verò hanc ut audivit Deo gratias reddidit, similemque se vidisse eadem hora noctis affirmavit. Itaque post gratiarum actionem postque communem allocutionem iterum membra sua quieti tradiderunt. Et ecce prædictus vir qui eis sicut suprafatum est aderat alia vice, eodem vultu venustatis ac candelationis affuit, eisque singulis singulariter inquit, ‘Quid moraris in obediendo præceptis? nonne audisti unquam ab ore alicujus doctoris quod melior est obedientia quam victimæ? Surge ergo vade quære et fac quod præceptum est tibi.’ Et talia fando, via qua venerat redit. Facta est autem illis eadem visio in eadem nocte usque tercio. Surgens verò summo mane sanctæ crucis signo signans se, viam quæ ducit ad nemus in quo prædictam visionem claritatis viderat, arripuit, ac prædictum locum summa intentione mentis quæsivit, et quasi eundem quem habuit revelatorem haberet viæ conductorem, statim locum signis sigillatum invenit amœnum apricum aptum. Qui exultans in Domino lætus magno gaudio et illum magnificè glorificavit qui ei tantam revelationem revelavit. Fecit quoque postea oratorium sicut ab angelo ei præceptum fuerat, et amplius quam acceperat præcepto addit Dei gratia proprio voto. Fecit ergo monasterium in honore sanctæ Dei genitricis Mariæ in prædicti oratorii parte occidentali quasi mille hominum capacem, domosque alias monachorum congregationi congruentes, et illius ordinis fratres quamplures inibi congregavit atque abbatem illius ordinavit, ut sub regulari meta mores suos componerent atque colligerent. Set quia morte prædicti regis interveniente quod deflet Anglorum gens undique. Erat emin Christianæ religionis amator et cultor devotissimus, omnibus regni sui incolis et divitibus et egenis benivulus super justissimus. Cui successit filius ejus Edwardus morum patris dulcedine atque bonitate decoratus, set ætate juvenis et tenellus, industria humanæ malignitatis ex toto minimè cautus, odientes se tanquam amantes et amabat et frequentabat, simplex ut columba inimicali dolo innocenter occiditur. Set anima ut credimus in cœlestibus coronatur. Cui successit frater ejus Ethelredus. Erat autem et ipse juvenis quidem ætate. Tempore quoque hujus Suein Danorum rex hanc insulam cum exercitu suo valde devastavit, et tandem per violentiam suam ad effectum perduxit, ut rex toto regno præsideret.

Ethelredus verò cum non posset ei resistere, transfretavit ad comitem Ricardum Normanniæ, et cum eo fuit, donec Suein ab hac vita in qua multos sibi subegerat et pene Anglorum omnem nobilitatem ac libertatem deleverat, decessit. Tunc Dani qui Angliam occupaverant elegerunt sibi eum in regem filium ejusdem Suein. Ethelredus rediit in Angliam et ab Anglis susceptus est, quare Cnut rex Danorum iratus, omnes obsoles quos habebat ab Anglis vel sibi traditos jussit interficere. Sicque in Daciam rediit quousque Ethelredus vitam finivit. Set Ethelredo adhuc vitali vita vivente ac regnante opus quod prædictus vir Ordulphus inceperat regali ac sacerdotali jure libertati dederat. Et dignum ducimus sicut et nomina regum in quibus temporibus hæc facta sunt imposuimus, nomina etiam archipræsulum et episcoporum huic nostræ revelationi imponamus.

Rexit itaque hiis temporibus Cantuariensem ecclesiam Dunstanus nomine, vir sanctissimus, qui benevolentiam prædicti regis et benedictione confirmavit et auctoritate sancivit. Oswaldus verò venerandus archipresul Eboracensis ecclesiæ triumphalem tropheum agiæ crucis impressit. Et Heluoldus autem vir magnæ sanctitatis Wyntoniensis ecclesiæ episcopus idem consignavit. Elfstanus quoque vir reverendus Londoniensis episcopus prædictum donum consensit et benedictione confirmavit. Elstanus verò Cridiatonensis ecclesiæ episcopus signum crucis infixit. Ethelgar quoque atque Ethelstan, Athul atque Aluric, Elfeac atque Estin, Ethelsi necnon et Wlsi, omnes hii episcopi propria manu subscripserunt. Regis verò munimine deinceps locus ipse tueatur Domino protegente. Et ipsius loci abbas Deo deserviens gregem sibi commissum dirocheè foveat. Sit igitur præfatum monasterium omni terrenæ servitutis jugo liberum, tribus exceptis, rata videlicet expeditione, pontis, arcisve restauratione. Si quis verò tam epylepticus philargiriæ seductus amencia (quod non optamus) hanc nostræ munificentiae dapsilitatem ausu temerario infringere temptaverit, sit ipse alienatus à consorcio sanctæ Dei ecclesiæ, nisi digna satisfactione humiliter penituerit. Abbas verò qui eligatur post abbatem qui nunc est, ex eadem eligatur congregatione qui dignus sit fungi tali officio; aliorum verò minimè nisi culpis promerentibus inibi inveniri nequiverit qui aptus sit animabus lucrandis. Quod si hoc, quod absit, miserabiliter evenerit, de alio noto et familiari monasterio unanimi fratrum consilio postuletur, cujus vita probabilis sapientia prædita cultuque religionis fulgida fidelibus clarescat, finitis namque diebus benivoli et laudabilis viri qui specialis lucris copia sanctum dapsilis ditaverat locum, laicorum nemo ipsius loci dominium usurpare sibi præsumat.

Rura verò quæ ab eo vel à sua conjuge vel à suis parentibus vel amicis domino nostro Jesu Christo ejusque genitrici semperque Virgini Mariæ ob æternæ vitæ remunerationem concessa, hæc sunt, Tavistok, Mideltun, Hatherleghe, Berlton, Leghe, Dunethem, Chovelin, Lankinhorn, hæc à viro. Hæc vero à conjuge, Hame, Werelgete, Orlege, Auri, Rame, Savyok, Panastan, Tornebiri, Colbrok, Lege, Wlsithetun, Clymesland. Hæc nec abbas nec alicujus personæ homo licenciam habeat pro pecunia vendendi vel gratis concedendi vel mutandi, set æterno Deo maneat imperpetuum quod ei concessum vel concedendum. Hæc confirmatio privilegii libertatis ecclesiæ Tavystochiæ, quam venerabilis comes bonæ memoriæ Ordulphus Dei gratia intus et exterius illuminatus propria sua hæreditate qua perfunctus, avina sive paterna vel propria conquisitione, licencia et consilio et benedictione Edgari regis incepit, ædificavit, consummavit, et tantis annorum curriculis, regni mutatione, et alienæ gentis scilicet Dacorum incursione, in tempore sui nepotis Ethelredi, perfecit, quando omnipotentis Dei gratia et misericordia Anglorum patria sanctorum in ea degentium meritis et precibus pacificata est, qui die ac nocte clamaverunt ad Dominum in prosperis et in adversis cum tribularentur, et de necessitatibus eorum liberavit eos. Facta est autem confirmatio anno ab incarnatione Domini ccccclxxxj. regnante adhuc prædicto rege Ethelredo et prædictis præsulibus ecclesiam Dei in Anglia gubernantibus.

Post compositionis primæ compositores et hujus operis constructores et revelatæ ædificationis ædificatores ac regalis atque sacerdotalis dispositionis dispositores necnon ecclesiastici regiminis primos rectores electione canonica secundum normam superius dictam, vir venerandus atque honorandus nomine Almerus, almus atque bonus sicut ex sui nominis præsidio ab hiis qui Latinam atque Anglicam linguam perfectè norunt interpretatur, litterarum studiis ac monasticæ religionis disciplina nobiliter imbutus, ad regendam sæpe nominatam ecclesiam et divini verbi pabulo pascendum gregem dominicum in ea congregatum eligitur. Qui ministerium sibi injunctum modestè ac discretè indeficienter exequens, lectioni atque orationi studium dans, bonæ vitæ suis subjectis et dictis et factis exemplum præbens, res ecclesiasticas diligenter tractans, iniqua execrans, justa dilexit, Deum super omnia proximum ut seipsum amans, inter prospera humilis, inter adversa fortis et securus, sicut res testantur quæ egit innumeris obsequiis cum adversitas Danorum omnem oppressisset gentem Anglorum, et intus et exterius quicquid habuerint vel in arvis vel in domibus ad suos rapuerunt usus, nullam nec de lactentibus infantulis nec de miseris matribus pietatem vel misericordiam habentes, ecclesias Dei undique expoliantes, ac post apertam nudationem atque expoliationem grave jugum cunctis terram tenentibus et pene omnibus importabile inponentes, ut sic primitus quicquid pecuniæ vel in auro vel in argento avina vel paterna vel propria alicujus industria ad defendendam hujus miseriæ vel aliquorum suorum inopem vitam elegerat, totum auferrent et sic postea fraudulenter utpote ab hiis qui non possent terras defendere nec haberent unde, quasi justa ratione omnes tollerent. Set vae impio semper iniqua cogitanti.

Inter has oppressiones et miseras et captivitates quibus gens Anglicana opprimebatur undique, prædictus abbas Almerus vir illustris et nobilis ex communi fratrum consilio dedit ex pecunia suæ ecclesiæ quam regendam acceperat, secundo danegildo pro dominio illius quod est in Devoniam libram et dimidiam secundum pensum, scilicet xxj^m. pro Tavystok, et pro Hecfelda et pro Berlitionia tantundem, et pro Tornebiria lx. denarios secundum pensum. Summa hujus pecuniæ xlvi. mancusæ.

[Cart. 22 Edw. III. n. 38, memb. 17.]

R. (&c.) Inspeximus cartam quam celebris memoriæ Ædelred, quondam rex Angliæ, fecit abbati et conventui de Tavistok in hæc verba.

P Universitatis Creatore in æternum regnante, ac justo moderamine cuncta creata visibilia et invisibilia miro ineffabilique modo gubernante; ego Æthelred Angliæ nationis, cæterarumque gentium triaviatim intra ambitum Britannicæ insulæ degentium, regie dignitatis solio ac tempus, Christi mundi redemptoris gratia, subtronizatus basileus, à quodam milite avunculo videlicet meo, qui secundæ regenerationis utero innovante gratia ineffabiliter editus, nobili Ordulf polens floret onomate, humili devotione compunctus, subnixis deposcens precibus efflagitare Deum compunctus gratia benivolutus ceperat ut arcisterium, cui notabile at Tavistoce fulget vocabulum, ubi mater ejus fraterque, ava videlicet mea et avunculus cæterique nostræ posteritatis prosapies mausoleis somate tumulati, tuba hujus caducæ vitæ clangente ultima, terciam resurrectionis nativitatem, animâ corpori Deo faciente in ictu oculi mirabiliter associatâ, diem judicaturi vel judicandi præstolantur extremum, ut ibi loco celebri domino nostro Jesu Christo ejusque genetrici semperque Virgini Mariæ dedicato, monachos non seculares set regulares in omnibus sanctæ regulæ obtemperantes præceptis, licenter constitueret, fideisque naturalibus devotus locupletaret. Ejus igitur votis applaudendo, voti compos animi, et quod fides catholica poposcerat admodum libens tripudiansque concessi. Admiranda namque ejus fidei constancia. Nam illo in tempore quo præfatus miles, Sancti Spiritus gratia compunctus, ad legitimos monachorum usus, ad æternæ vitæ lucrum, hoc construxerat cœnobium, cæteri quique infidelitatis nevo turpati, loca sancta dissipantes, sanctæ religionis monachos insipidi, me impote nolenteque, infantili adhuc, ut ita dicam, ætate vigente, atrociter, veluti pagani, ad perpetuum sui dampnum fugabant. Ejus igitur benivolentiæ congaudens, meorum optimatum usus consilio, libertatis privilegium præfato loco sanctæ Dei genitrici semperque Virgini Mariæ dicato, magna animi alacritate tripudians concedo, et secundum patroni nostri beati Benedicti traditionem, post obitum abbatis qui nunc sancto præsidet loco, abbas ex eadem eligatur congregatione qui dignus sit tali fungi officio; aliorum verò minimè nisi culpis promerentibus inibi inveniri nequiverit qui aptus sit animabus lucrands. Quod si hoc, quod absit, miserabiliter evenierit, de alio noto et familiari monasterio unanimi fratrum consilio eligatur, cujus vita probabilis sapientia prædita, cultuque religionis fulgida, fidelibus clarescat. Finitis namque diebus benivoli et laudabilis viri, qui specialis lucri copia sanctum dapsilis ditaverat locum, laicorum nemo ipsius loci dominium præsumens sibi usurpet. Rex verò, quæ ab eo Domino nostro Jesu Christo ejusque genitrici semperque Virgini Mariæ ab æterno usque remunerationem concessa sunt vel concedenda, nec abbas nec alicujus personæ homo licenciam habeat pro pecunia vendendi vel gratis concedendi vel mutandi, set æterno Deo maneat perpetuum, quod ei concessum vel concedendum est. Regum verò munimine deinceps ipse locus Domino protegente tueatur, ipsiusque loci abbas regi deserviens, gregem sibi commissum dirocheo, id est, duplici pasto foveat. Sit igitur præfatum monasterium omni terrenæ servitutis jugo liberum, tribus exceptis, rata videlicet expeditione, pontis, arcisve restauratione. Si quis verò tam epilepticus philargyriæ seductus amentia, quod non optamus, hanc nostræ munificentie dapsilitatem ausu temerario infringere temptaverit, sit ipse alienatus à consorcio sanctæ Dei ecclesiæ, necnon et à participatione sacrosancti corporis et sanguinis Jesu Christi filii Dei, per quem totus terrarum orbis ab antiquo humani generis inimico liberatus est, et cum Juda Christi proditore, sinistra in parte deputatus, ni prius hic digna satisfactione humiliter pœnituerit quod contra sanctam Dei ecclesiam rebellis agere præsumpserit, nec in vita hac practica veniam, nec in theorica requiem apostata optineat ullam; set æternis baratri incendiis trusus cum Anania et Saphira jugiter miserrimus crucietur. H. rex Angliæ Willielmo episcopo Exon. et Ricardo filio Baldwini vicecomiti, et omnibus fidelibus suis de Denescira et de Cornualia salutem. Volo et mando vobis, et præcipio firmiter, quod faciatis venire ad dominium ecclesiæ meæ de Tavistoch, Rueberge et Cudelipe, quas Wymundus Willielmo fratri suo injustè tradidit. Et prohibeo ne aliquis præter monachos ipsas terras amplius teneat, vel alias aliquas quæ de dominio ecclesiæ fuerunt, exceptis illis quas Gaufridus abbas dedit ad servicium miliciæ. Et præcipio ut ipsa ecclesia mea habeat et teneat omnes terras et tenuras suas liberè quietè et integrè, et ne aliquis abbas ulterius aliquam distrahat vel alicui donet præter confirmationem meam, et assensum etiam tocus capituli. Volo etiam et præcipio pro anima Willielmi regis et mea, hundredum de Tavestoch liberum esse per se et quietum, ne in aliquo hundredo Lifton subiaceat aut respondeat. Et concedo, sicut per aliam cartam concessi, mercatum esse omni die Veneris in villa de Tavistoch, et nundinas ad festum sancti Rumoni per tres dies. Et prohibeo ne aliquis emptor sive venditor thelonium suum ibi retineat, qui illud in vicinis burgis vel civitatibus meis juste dare debeat. Concedo quod Walterus abbas de Tavistoca habeat omnes warennas et defensa sua in bosco et plano, ita bene et in pace et honorificè sicut rex H. avus meus antecessori suo per breve suum concessit. Præcipio quod abbas et monachi mei de Tavestocha habeant et teneant omnes terras et tenuras suas et ministeria sua, ita bene et in pace liberè, et quietè, et justè et integrè, et honorificè, sicut prædecessores sui melius et liberiùs habuerunt et tenuerunt tempore regis H. avi mei. Et prohibeo ne ipsi inde in placitum ponantur nisi coram me, nisi nominatim præcepero. Teste Gaufrido archiepiscopo Cantuar. apud Silvestonam, &c.

Confirmatio Regis Willielmi II. de Wlurintuna.

[Ex Cartulario ut supr. penes Joh. Maynard, fol. 4 b.]

ANNO Dominicæ incarnationis millesimo nonagesimo sexto, regni autem inclitæ recordationis secundi Willielmi IX. misit idem rex in quadragesima optimates suos in Devenesiram et Cornubiam et Exoniam, Walcalinum videlicet Wyntoniensem episcopum, Randulphum regalem capellanum, Willielmum Capram, Hardinum Beldoldi filium, ad investiganda regalia placita. Quibus in placitis calumpniati sunt cuidam mansioni abbacie Taviensis, nomine, Wlurintune; dicentes et affirmantes illam mansionem injustè attinere Tavystochiensi abbacie, set potius illam regali dominio semper rectè insistere. Dictis quorum et calumpniis nos abnegantes comprobavimus, mansionem illam plurimorum auctoritate antecessorum nostrorum Tavystochiensi abbacie absque ulla calumpnia perhenni jure pertinere. Qua de causa una cum regalibus supradictis placitatoribus regem Anglorum requisivimus quatinus illam mansionem supradictam pro Dei amore et sanctæ Mariæ, Taviensi abbacie, absque ulla calumpnia perhenni jure, concederet subjacere. Quibus quidem auditis et enarratis ante regem, ipse rex petitioni nostræ adquiescens, pro anima patris sui et matris suæ, abbacie Dei et sanctæ Mariæ Tavyensis ecclesiæ illam mansionem, videlicet Wlurintune inperpetuo restituens in hæc verba respondit. Ego Willielmus rex Anglorum Osberno episcopo salutem et Willielmo filio Baldewyni et Guarino vicecomiti de Cornubia et omnibus fidelibus meis Francis et Anglis de Devenasira et Cornubia. Sciatis me dedisse Deo et sanctæ Mariæ et ecclesiæ de Tavystok pro anima patris mei et matris meæ ipsiusque mei manerium de Wlurintuna, et ut bene illud et honorificè in omnibus Guimundus successoresque sui abbates constituti indésinenter hætenus possideant. Hoc denique sciant omnes quod rex per cultellum eburneum quod in manu tenuit et abbati porrexit hoc donum peregit apud curiam, testimonio virorum illorum nomina quorum infrascripta dinoscuntur. Ego Walchalinus Wyntoniensis episcopus dedi testimonium. Ego Johannes Batoniensis episcopus consensi, et ego abbas Turstinus Glastoniensis assensum præbui, &c. Qui quidem cultellus jacet in feretro sancti Rumoni. In cujus manubrio inseritur talis scriptura. ✠ Ego Willielmus rex dedi Deo et sanctæ Mariæ de Tavistoc terram Wlerintun.

CELESTINUS episcopus servus servorum Dei dilecto filio Herberto abbati de Tavistochia ejusque successoribus regulariter substituendis imperpetuum. Commissæ nobis apostolicæ sedis auctoritas nos hortatur, ut locis et personis ipsius auxilium devotione debita implorantibus tuitionis præsidium impendere debeamus. Quia sicut injusta poscentibus nullus tribuendus est affectus, sic et legitima et justa desiderantium non est differenda petitio. Eapropter dilecte in Domino fili Herberte abbas tuis justis postulationibus clementer annuimus, et monasterium de Tavistoch quod in honore beatæ Mariæ et sancti Rumoni confessoris ædificatum esse dinoscitur, sub ejusdem beatæ Mariæ et sancti Rumoni confessoris et sacrosanctæ Romanæ ecclesiæ, cujus juris existit, tutela et proprietate tantum manere censemus, et præsentis scripti privilegio communimus. Statuentes ut quascumque possessiones quæcumque bona tam ecclesiastica quam mundana idem monasterium in præsentia- rum justè et canonicè possidet, aut in futurum concessionem pontificum, largitione regum vel principum, oblatione fidelium, seu aliis justis modis Deo propicio poterit adipisci, firma tibi tuisque successoribus et illibata permaneant. In quibus hæc propriis duximus exprimenda vocabulis. Ecclesiam beatæ Mariæ et sancti Rumoni confessoris de Tavistok in qua sedes abbatiae existit, cum eadem villa et mercato ejusdem villæ et capellis et omnibus aliis pertinentiis suis. Middelton et ecclesiam sancti Constantini confessoris in eadem villa constructam, cum omnibus pertinentiis suis. Hatherlegam cum ecclesia sancti Johannis Baptistæ in eadem villa fundata et omnibus pertinentiis suis. Boryngton cum ecclesia sanctæ Trinitatis in eadem villa sita. Lega et Abbedysham cum ecclesia sanctæ Helenæ ibidem constructa. Werdegete, Ordleg, Auri, Tornebury, Ruaburga, et unam domum in civitate Exoniæ, Devenebury, et ecclesiam beatæ Mariæ ibidem fundatam. Wella, Daggecumba, Plymstok, Raddon, Hundetorre, Odattrew, Savyok, et ecclesiam beatæ Mariæ ibidem fundatam. Anton cum ecclesiis ibidem fundatis et pertinentiis suis, Rame, Tregrenon, Penhangar, Talcar, Wulrynton, cum matrice ecclesia sancti Paterni et capellis ejusdem villæ et omnibus ad eam spectantibus. Oskereville, Pourton cum omnibus libertatibus et liberis consuetudinibus suis vobis rationabiliter collatis. Infra insulas etiam de Sully, insulam sancti Nicholai, insulam sancti Sampsonis, insulam sancti Elidii, insulam sanctæ Theonæ virginis, et insulam quæ Nutho vocatur, cum appendiciis suis, et omnes ecclesias et oratoria per omnes insulas de Sully constructa cum decimis et obventionibus et aliis pertinentiis suis. Et duas boscatas terræ in insula de Aganas, et tres boscatas terræ in insula de Ennor. Ecclesiam quoque sancti Michaelis de Rocta cum terris et redditibus suis, ecclesiam de Lamberton cum omnibus pertinentiis suis à domino fundi W. Giffard in puram et perpetuam elemosinam vobis et monasterio vestro collatam, et à bonæ memoriæ B. Exoniensi episcopo confirmatam, et de vobis ad mandatum de tribus pauperibus cotidie pascendis et ad alia pietatis opera exequenda J. quondam Exoniensis episcopi assensu assignatam. Ecclesiam quoque sancti Petri de Montocranhton, cum terra de Nordecumba et aliis pertinentiis suis.

Obeunte verò te Herberto nunc ejusdem loci abbate vel tuorum quolibet successorum, nullus ibi qualibet surreptionis astutia vel violentia præponatur nisi quem fratres communi consilio vel pars consilii sanioris secundum timorem Dei et sancti Benedicti regulam absque ullius contradictione decreverint abbatem eligendum. Custodiam eciam domus vestræ, et rerum et possessionumstrarum dispositionem in manibus vestris donec vestræ provideatur ecclesiæ manere censemus. Sepulturam quoque ipsius loci liberam esse decernimus ut eorum devotioni et extremæ voluntati qui se illic sepeliri deliberaverint nisi fortè excommunicati vel interdicti sint nullus obsistat. Salva tamen illarum ecclesiarum canonica justitia à quibus mortuorum corpora assumuntur. Indulgemus etiam ut liceat vobis ecclesias vestras cum vacaverint in hospitalitatis usum in domo vestra jugiter observandæ convertere, idoneos ad eas eligendo capellanos, qui diocesano episcopo præsentati eidem de spiritualibus vobis verò de temporalibus debeant respondere. Ita quidem quod episcopus illos repellendi qui sibi fuerint præsentati nullam prorsus habeat sine causa rationabili potestatem.

Sane novalium vestrorum et eorum quæ propriis manibus aut sumptibus excolitis sive animalium vestrorum nullus à vobis decimas exigere aut extorquere præsumat, sed potius vobis reservatæ in usus hospitalitatis convertantur. Decernimus ergo ut nulli omnino hominum nec episcopo fas sit præfatum cœnobium temerè perturbare aut ejus possessiones auferre vel ablatas retinere, minuere, seu quibuslibet vexationibus fatigare, set omnia integra conserventur eorum pro quorum gubernatione ac sustentatione concessa sunt usibus omnimodis profutura; salva sedis apostolicæ auctoritate. Si verò aliquod scriptum vel privilegium contra hanc libertatem vobis et monasterio vestro a nobis indultam et præsentis privilegii auctoritate confirmatam aliquando apparuerit, eidem libertati nulla ratione præjudicet. Ad indicium autem hujus à sede apostolica perceptæ libertatis tres aureos pro monasterio beatæ Mariæ et sancti Rumoni confessoris prælibati nobis nostrisque successoribus annis singulis exsolvetis. Si qua igitur in futurum ecclesiastica secularive persona hanc nostræ constitutionis paginam sciens contra eam temerè venire temptaverit, secundò terciòve commonita si non satisfactione congrua emendaverit, potestatis quæ honoris sui dignitate careat, ream seque divino judicio existere de perpetrata iniquitate cognoscat, et à sacratissimo corpore ac sanguine Dei et Domini redemptoris nostri Jesu Christi aliena fiat, atque in extremo examine districtæ ultioni subjaceat. Cunctis autem eidem loco justa servantibus sit pax Domini nostri Jesu Christi quatinus et hic fructum bonæ actionis percipiant, et in futuro apud districtum judicem præmia æternæ pacis inveniant. Data Laterani per manum Ægidii sancti Nicholai in carcere Tulliano diaconi cardinalis, iiij. kal. Junii ab incarnatione nativitatibus Dominicæ anno millesimo centesimo nonagesimo tertio, pontificatus domini nostri Celestini papæ tercii anno terciò.

Si autem dominus abbas et conventus Tavistochiæ necesse habuerint vocare priorem vel aliquos fratrum Plimpton ad capitulum suum, prior vel fratres vocati venire debent ad vocationem suam. Si autem aliqua causa pro defendendo jure ecclesiæ de Tavistochia pro aliquo alio magno negotio dominus abbas et conventus ejus præsentiam prioris vel alicujus fratris canonici desideraverit, prior Plimpton vel canonicus ille cum domno abbate vel priore Tavistochiæ per omnem episcopatum Exoniæ in equis et sumptibus ipsius prioris perget. Si autem necesse fuerit extra episcopatum Exoniæ negotium domus Tavistochiæ prosequi, prior vel canonicus ejus qui vocatus fuerit, in equis prioris et in sumptibus abbatis cum abbate vel priore ejus ibit. Cum autem capellanus ponendus fuerit in capellariam de Plimstocha, dominus prior Plimpton pro reverentia domni abbatis et conventus ejus in quorum fundo est sita supradicta capella, ducet eum ad Tavistociam coram abbate et conventu, et debet eis promittere dominus prior et capellanus suus pro eo honorabile servicium Deo et ipsis, et salubre hominibus suis. Unde nobis supplicavit ut dictum prioratum contra hujusmodi malefactores tueri velimus et defendere. Rumsey Nunnery,

IN

HAMPSHIRE.

ISHOP Tanner says, King Edward the elder,^a or Ethelwold, a Saxon nobleman,^b built a monastery here, wherein King Edgar, A.D. 967, placed Benedictine nuns, under the government of the abbess MERWENNA.^c It was dedicated to the Blessed Virgin and St. Elfleda, sometime a nun and abbess here, daughter of the said Ethelwold.^d

Considering that the nunnery of Rumsey continued for so long a series of years in high esteem, it is remarkable that our details of its history should be so few and scanty.

From the Saxon Chronicle we learn that, in 1085, Christina the sister of Edgar Atheling took the veil here.^e

In 1086, the Domesday Survey presents us with the sum of its endowments as they were then returned to the king's commissioners.

In Hampshire, the nuns held the vill of Rumsey, in which the abbey was situated. The manor paid geld in King Edward the Confessor's time for fourteen hides: in the Conqueror's time for ten only. In Winchester, fourteen burgesses paid twenty-five shillings. The nuns also held a separate hide of land at Rumsey, with a mill. In Stoeche, the land for which they had paid geld as for eight hides in the Confessor's time, in the Conqueror's was rated at six only. At Sidemanestone they held seven hides and a half, which had been rated in the Confessor's time at ten hides. In Dodintune one hide: and one hide in Sueia. In Wiltshire, they held thirty hides at Edendone, and forty at Aistone.

In Hampshire, the value of the lands belonging to the monastery had increased considerably within a few years after the Conquest. Their rents in the time of Edward the Confessor had yielded 38*l.* 10*s.*: at the time of the formation of the Survey they had risen to 48*l.* 10*s.* In the returns for Wiltshire the comparative produce does not appear: sixty pounds, however, are put down as the gross produce of rent arising to the nuns in that county.^f wards queen of Henry the First, was partly educated in her younger years at Rumsey.^g Mary, the daughter of King Stephen, as will hereafter be more particularly mentioned, was also first a nun, and afterwards abbess here.

In the 7th year of King John the nuns had a grant of lands and common of pasture in Tidolveshide.^h

The letters patent of King Henry the Third, in the 47th year of his reign, confirming the right of the abbesses to set up a gallows and try criminals, according to the grant of privileges made to the nuns by King Edward, will be found in the Appendix;ⁱ as well as the confirmation by King Edward the First, in the eighth year of his reign, of a previous grant of the wood of Northwod, in Hampshire.^k

In the 56th of Henry the Third, the abbess obtained a Charter for a fair at Rumsey.^l

Madox, in the Formulare Anglicanum, has given a release to the abbey of Rumsey, dated in the 7th of Edw. II., of a right which the releasor, Sir John le Rous, Knight, had claimed to present two nuns to be veiled in the abbey, with a valet to be likewise maintained there: and a release of his right in the manor of Edindone, and of his right to distrain the abbey by pretext of the premises.^m

In the 10th of Edward II. the church of Itchen-Stoke was appropriated to this nunnery.ⁿ

In the 43d, 44th, and 45th of Edw. III. Charters of free warren at Rumsey, and at Ashton and Edington in Wiltshire, were likewise granted.^o

A confirmation of privileges also occurs upon the Patent Roll of the 25th of Henry the Sixth.^p

Sir Robert Atkyns, in his History of Gloucestershire, in the account of the parish of Coats, says, "The abbey of Romsey had the advowson of a chapel, and was possesst of lands in this place, 36 Hen. VI."^q In another part of his History, tithes in Torlton, in the parish of Rodmarton, with a chapel lately belonging to Rumsey nunnery, are said to have been granted in the 34th of Hen. VIII. to Giles Pool.^r

The following list of the

where other authorities are not quoted, has been obtained from Browne Willis's communication relating to the principals of religious houses made to Mr. Tanner when editing the second edition of his brother's Notitia Monastica in 1743.

MERWINNA, or MERWENNA, has been already noticed as the first abbess. Willis calls her St. MARVENNE, A.D. 967.

ELWINA.

ELFLEDA, daughter of Ethelwold.

HAEDEWIS, about 1130.^a

MATILDA, A.D. 1155.

MARY, daughter of King Stephen, A.D. 1160. "Mary," says Sandford, "younger, but only daughter living of King Stephen, first became nun and Abbess of the nunnery of Rumsey in Hampshire; and after being secretly taken from thence, was married to Matthew of Flanders, the younger son of Theodorick of Alsatia, earl of Flanders; who, after the death of William her brother, was countess of Boulogne and Mortaigne, and bare to her said husband two daughters, Ida and Maud. Which Mary, the countess, having professed chastity, by the censure of the church, was separated from her said husband, and remitted back into her monastery: yet her children were legitimated by parliament, an. 1189, and she left the earldom of Boulogne to her daughters."^b

JULIANA, abbess of Rumsey, died in the month of February, A.D. 1199.^c She was succeeded, on the 3d of the nones of June following, by

MATILDA, the sister of Walter Walerand.^d Another

MATILDA, elected A.D. 1219. Probably the same with MATILDA PARIA, mentioned in the patent of the 47th of Hen. III.^e

AMICIA occurs in 1262.^f

ALICIA WALBOND, A.D. 1290. So Willis: but, more probably,

ALICIA DE WYNTRESHULL; who died of a forced inebriation here, while abbess, in the 8th of Edw. II.^g

CLEMENTIA DE GUILDFORD, A.D. 1307.

JOAN JACKE, elected in 1333.

JOAN JERVASE, elected in 1349.^h

ISABEL DE CAMEYS, elected in 1352.

LUCIA EVERARD, elected in 1396.

FELICIA occurs A.D. 1417. In the Harleian manuscript 6962, she is called FELICIA AAS. A licence for a fresh election, upon her death, was granted Oct. 25th, 7 Hen. V.ⁱ

JOAN BRIGGS, elected A.D. 1462. Willis mentions

ELIZABETH BROOKE, elected A.D. 1472; and ELIZABETH BROKE, her successor, elected A.D. 1478. These were probably the same person. According to better authority we find that

ELIZABETH BROKE had the temporalities of the monastery restored to her June 22d, 1473.^k

GUNDELA or JOYCE ROWE received the temporalities June 17th, 1502:^l upon whose resignation,

ANNE WESTBROOKE was elected abbess. She received the temporalities Oct. 9th, 1516.^m

ELIZABETH RYPROSE, the last abbess, was elected, according to Willis, in 1523.ⁿ

This abbey was rated, in the 26th of Henry the Eighth, according to Dugdale, at 393*l.* 10*s.* 10½*d.*: according to Speed, at 528*l.* 10*s.* 10½*d.* The site was granted, in the 35th of Hen. VIII. to the inhabitants of the town: and afterwards, in the 38th of the same king, to John Bellow and R. Bigot.^o

No REGISTER of Rumsey nunnery has hitherto fallen under the inspection of the present Editors of the Monasticon. From an entry in Bishop Tanner's Notitia Monastica, it might be supposed that a Register is preserved among the manuscripts formerly in the collection of the Marquis of Lansdowne. The manuscript so designated is now num. 436 of the Lansdowne collection in the British Museum: it is chiefly filled with Latin Lives of English Saints. The mistake seems to have arisen from the following inscription on the first leaf: "Iste Liber est de Librario Ecclesie Sanctae Mariae et Sanctae Ethelfledae Virginis de Romesey."

References to a few detached Instruments relating to this monastery will be found in the Note.^p

The SEAL of this monastery, as used by abbess Hadewis in the fourteenth century, is described by Madox. It was oval, bearing the impression on one side only, and representing in the area the figure of an abbess, with a staff in her right hand, and holding in her left a book put to her breast. The inscription, sigil. s'. MARIE ROMES'.^q

But few of the nunnery buildings are now standing, except the CONVENTUAL CHURCH. The other parts are chiefly confined to some fragments of walls.

The conventual church is spacious, and, for the most part, of Norman architecture, built in the form of a cross, with a low tower rising from the intersection of the nave and transept.

On the outer wall of the south transept is a remarkable piece of sculpture, in basso relievo, representing our Saviour on the cross. It is engraved in Carter's Specimens of Ancient Sculpture and Painting.

Two Letters upon some ancient Sculptures and Inscriptions on the capitals of two pillars in this church, one by Dr. Latham, the other by Sir H. C. Englefield, Bart. are given in the XIVth volume of the Archaeologia of the Society of Antiquaries, pp. 136, 141; and a third Letter, by William Latham, Esq. in the XVth volume, p. 306. In this last communication, the sculptures in question are conjectured to represent the victory obtained by King Alfred over the Danes at Eddington in Wiltshire, A.D. 878, near a hundred years before the foundation of the abbey. The conjectures in the two former Letters are even less plausible than this.

Monastery of Horton,

IN

DORSETSHIRE;

Afterwards a Cell to Sherbourne Monastery.

HERE is a trifling difference in the testimonies respecting the foundation of this monastery. Bishop Tanner, from William of Malmesbury, says it was originally built by Ordgar, earl of Devonshire, before the year 970.^a Others, according to Hutchins, ascribe the foundation to Ordulph, the son of Ordgar, the same who is stated to have finished Tavistock abbey.^b

From the Domesday Survey it appears that in 1086, in Dorsetshire, the church of Horton held the village in which it was situated, the lands of which were rated at seven hides: two of the best of these hides, however, in the forest of Winburne, the king held. A little church, or chapel, in Wimbourn belonged to the monastery, with a site for two houses; a church and five houses in Wareham, the latter producing a rent of sixty-five pence; and one house in Dorchester. The church in Wareham was that dedicated to the Holy Trinity. In Devonshire, this abbey held half a hide at Liteham; a hide and a half at Carsvelle; half a hide at Flueta; and half a hide at Bera. The total annual revenue of the house, from both counties, amounting to no more than 12*l.* 16*s.* 5*d.*^c

Sihtricus abbat of Tavistock, according to Malmesbury, burnt the church here.

Roger bishop of Salisbury is said to have obtained a grant from King Henry the First for the annexation of the remains of this abbey, together with its possessions, to the monastery of Sherbourne.^d

The Cotton MS. Faustina A. ii., as well as the Annals of Margan, date this union in 1122: but William of Malmesbury places it in the fourth year of King Stephen, A. D. 1139.^e Certain it is, that from that period Horton became a Cell subordinate to Sherbourne; the buildings being reinstated, and some monk of the latter monastery being usually deputed to preside over it.

HENRY TREW occurs prior of Horton in the 38th of Henry VI.^f

JOHN DORCHESTER occurs in 1504.^g

After the Dissolution, the manor of Horton, together with the cell, or priory, and the rectory and advowson of the vicarage, were granted in the first of Edward VI. to Edward duke of Somerset, and, after his attainder in the 7th of Edward VI., to the earl of Pembroke.

No traces whatever of the buildings of Horton priory now exist. The parish church of the village, before it was rebuilt, about 1720, is said to have been a part of the priory church. It was dedicated to St. Wolfride, or Wilfrid, the mother to St. Editha, abbess of Wilton.^h

Benedictine Monastery and Cathedral of Exeter,

IN

DEVONSHIRE.

EXETER Monastery and Cathedral are thus accounted for by Bishop Tanner: "This city is said by the Saxons to have been called Monketon,^a from the great number of monks in it; yet the account of the old religious houses here is but imperfect, by reason of the silence of our historians. There is no question but in a city so famous as this was in the Roman, British, and Saxon times, here were, early after their conversion to Christianity, congregations and societies of holy men and women; yet it is not certain whether this was the famous monastery of Adestancester,^b wherein St. Boniface the apostle of the Germans, who was born at Crediton in this county, had his education under abbat Wolfhard, about A. D. 690. The industrious Mr. Jo. Hooker, alias Vowell, the first restorer of the antiquities of this city, of which he was chamberlain, saith,^c 'that in ancient times, within the precincts of the close, were three religious houses; the first was a nunnery which is now the dean's house,' or as Mr. Risdon will have it^d the Kalendar Hay, 'the other was a house of monks, reported to have been built by King Ethelred, A. D. 868:^e the third was a monastery founded by King Æthelstan, A. D. 932.' For this last there is pretty good authority, and that it was dedicated to the blessed Virgin and St. Peter, and endowed by the munificence of that king with twenty-six villages, and filled with Benedictine monks, who not long after forsook the same for fear of the Danes: but King Edgar, that great restorer of monasteries, A. D. 968,^f replaced the religious here, who were again forced to fly upon the devastation of this city and country by the Danes under Swein, A. D. 1003. After this, King Canute encouraged the monks once more to settle here, confirming their lands and privileges, A. D. 1019. But upon the union of the episcopal sees of St. Germans and Crediton, and their translation hither, A. D. 1050, the eight monks remaining here were sent to Westminster abbey, and some secular canons placed in their stead by Bishop Leofric. However, the chapter of this cathedral was not fixed to a Dean and twenty-four Prebendaries till Bishop Brewer's time, A. D. 1225."^g

In the CATHEDRAL OF EXETER the sees of CORNWALL and DEVONSHIRE finally became united.

St. Petroc's at Bodmin, and St. Germans, appear both to have been seats of the BISHOPRICK OF CORNWALL. It has been already mentioned, that Mr. Whitaker supposes the see to have commenced at the latter place as early as the year 614: a supposition too wild to need a refutation. "The see of ATHELSTAN the bishoppe of Cornewal" (says Bishop Godwin) "was for a while Saint Petrockes in Bodmyn, and afterwards St. Germanes." The successors, he adds, of Athelstan^h in the diocese of Cornwall (as I find) were these:

The following is Bishop Godwin's list of the BISHOPS OF DEVONSHIRE:

WERSTANUS, called by some ADULPHUS, the first bishop of Devonshire, was consecrated A. D. 905, and had his see at Bishops Tawton. He died A. D. 906.

PUTTA succeeded Werstanus: after the murder of whom by Uffa the king's lieutenant, the see is stated to have been removed to Crediton.

EADULPHUS, brother to Alsius duke of Devonshire and Cornwall, was installed bishop at Crediton, A. D. 910.^k He died A. D. 932, and was buried in his own church. In his time K. Edward the elder gave to the bishop of Crediton three manors, Polton, Cœling, and Lanwithan; "ut inde, singulis annis, visitaret gentem

WOLOCUS, he adds, is omitted in the same manuscript. Canute's Charter to BURHWOLD, A. ETHELGAR, or ETHELGARUS, was bishop from A. D. 932 to A. D. 942, in which latter year

ALGARUS succeeded. He died about A. D. 952.

ALFWOLDUS, according to Matthew of Westminster, was consecrated, by the advice of Dunstan, in the same year. He died A. D. 972, and was buried in his own church.

ALWOLFUS sate nine years.

SYDEMAN, who is called abbat of St. Peters, was the next bishop. If he died in 977, Alwolfus could hardly have sate so long as is stated. In the text of Richardson's Latin edition of Godwin, his death is placed under the year 990.^b

ALFREDUS, or ALFRICUS, abbat of Malmesbury, was the next bishop of Crediton. He died A. D. 999.^c

ALWOLFUS, or ALFWOLDUS, succeeded.^d Malmesbury and Florence of Worcester here add the name of

EADNOTHUS.^e

LIVINGUS, abbat of Tavistock, was consecrated bishop of Crediton A. D. 1032. He was the nephew of BRITHWOLD, or BURWOLD, bishop of Cornwall; upon whose death he procured the county of Cornwall to be added to the diocese of Crediton.^f He afterwards became bishop of Worcester.

LEOFRIC, or LEURIC, the last bishop of Crediton, obtained permission from King Edward the Confessor, as has been already noticed, to transfer the seat of his diocese to EXETER, A. D. 1050.^g This prelate is said to have been by birth a Burgundian. King Edward the Confessor and his queen are stated to have enthroned Leofric in person in his new cathedral. William of Malmesbury is minute upon the subject of the change which Leofric made when he ejected the monks and substituted secular canons here.^h Leofric died on Feb. 10th, 1073; and was buried, according to Hooker and Godwin, in the cemetery of his church, under a plain stone, in a spot which, by the subsequent enlargement of the cathedral, is now within the south tower, where, in 1568, a new monument was erected to his memory at the charges of the dean and chapter.ⁱ The fact, however, is disputed. The manuscript history of the church now remaining in the Bodleian library says he was interred in the crypt: “Sepultus est in cripta ecclesiæ.”^k The lands, books, ornaments, &c. bestowed by Leofric upon the church of Exeter will be found enumerated in the Appendix.^l

BISHOPS OF EXETER subsequent to LEOFRIC.

OSBERT, or OSBERN, a Norman, was consecrated bishop of Exeter March 28th, 1074.^m He was bishop at the time of the formation of the Domesday Survey; when the following appears to have been the endowment of the See.

In Sussex, the church of Boseham, with sixty-five hides of land: at Halstede five hides and a half: three hides at Presteton: and six at Levitone. The whole of these possessions in Sussex appear originally to have been given to the church of Boseham. In Surry, Bishop Osbern held eight hides at Wochinges, and one hide at Tetinges. In Hampshire, five hides at Ferendone. In Berkshire, the bishop claimed land which paid geld at the time of the Survey for eight hides at BOCHELAND, but which, though placed under his name, was referred for trial at law. In Devonshire, one church in Exeter and forty-seven houses are entered, with the sites of two houses which had been burnt, and two acres and a half of land: at Critetone fifteen hides: at Niwetone three hides: at Berie a single virgate: eighteen hides at Tanton: seven hides at Dovles: two at Ide: two hides and a half at Sovretone: two virgates of land “ad ecclesiam S. Mariæ:” two virgates at Havstone: one virgate at Botintone: twelve hides at Tavtone: five hides at Cylmestoch: one hide at Stoch: seven hides at Talentone: five hides at Sideberie: three hides at Selcome: one hide at Bedricestan: twenty hides at Peintone: six hides at Essebreton: half a hide at Chenistetone: three hides at Nimetone: five hides at Branchescome: three at Didasham: and six at Sladone. In Cornwall, one hide and a half at Trewel: a hide and a half at Matele: twelve hides at Tregel: at Pavtone forty-four hides: two hides at Bernerh: at the church of St. Germans twenty-four hides; of which twelve belonged to the canons of that church, and paid no geld; at Lanherwey three hides: at Thinten one hide; eleven hides at Langvitetone: a hide and a half at Landicle: and one hide at Sanwinvec. In Oxfordshire, six hides at Bentone. In Gloucestershire, two hides at Aldelande: and five hides at Tidrentone. In Norfolk, one carucate at Benham: one in Wica: thirty-two acres at Hindringeham: thirty acres in Taseburc: and thirty in Foneseta.

The various manors belonging to the See in Sussex, Surrey, and Hampshire, appear to have been rated in the time of King Edward the Confessor at a greater extent and value than the returns of the commissioners made them in the time of the Conqueror. Under Critetone, i. e. Crediton, in Devonshire, it is expressly stated that Bishop Osbern produced Charters to substantiate the rights of his church. The manors of Dovles, Ide, Sovretone, St. Mary's Church, and Branchescome, in the same county, are noted as having been appropriated to the particular support of the canons of Bishop Osbern's cathedral. Havstone and Botintone are said to have been given to the bishop by the earl of Moretaine “pro excambio castelli de Cornualia.” At Matele, in Cornwall, the earl of Moretaine, at the time of the Sur-

^c Other accounts place his death as early as 988. See Richardson's edit. of Godwin, p. 399, Note 2.

I. EADULF.
II. ÆDELGAR.
III. ALFWOLD.
IV. SIDEMAN.
V. ÆLFRIC.
VI. ALFWOLD.

^e According to Godwin's Cat. ut supr. p. 395, Alwolfus, or Alfwoldus, died about the year 1030. In Richardson's edition the date of 1004 is placed against the name of Eadnothus.

Bishop Osbert died A. D. 1103, and was buried in his own church.^b

WILLIAM WARLEWAST was the next bishop. Le Neve, from what are called the Old Annals of Exeter, places his consecration in the year 1112: but the generality of authorities, and no doubt with greater accuracy, name the year 1107.^c Diceto expressly says he was consecrated on the 4th of the ides of August that year. He also was a Norman by birth, had been chaplain both to the Conqueror and to his two immediate successors, and had been much employed in embassies.

In the Chronicle of Exeter cathedral preserved among Archbishop Laud's manuscripts at Oxford, already referred to, we have this entry:

"Anno Domini m^o. centesimo xij^o. primo fundata est Exon. ecclesia."

This passage unquestionably supplies us with the date when Bishop Warlewast began to enlarge the cathedral. The original church belonging to the abbey, to which Leofric had removed his see, was in all probability but a mean structure: its site is supposed to be occupied by what is now called the Lady-chapel. Osbert, who governed the see so long, made no alteration whatever in the way of building. Malmesbury, it will be remembered, in a passage already quoted, describes him as "veteribus contentus ædificiis." Sir Henry Englefield, in his Observations on Bishop Lyttelton's Account of Exeter Cathedral, published by the Society of Antiquaries, ascribes not only the transept Towers to Bishop Warlewast, but an extent of building (including the site of the Lady-chapel) altogether making a length of two hundred feet; differing, with probability upon his side, both from Bishop Lyttelton and from the alleged opinion of Leland.

Godwin says, Bishop Warlewast obtained from King Henry the First the manors of Plimpton, Bampton, and St. Stephens in Exeter. Bampton he gave to the canons of his church, and they afterwards allotted it to the deanery; St. Stephens he reserved to himself and his successors in the see; and Plympton he bestowed upon the monastery which he founded there for Austin canons in 1121.^d

Bishop Warlewast, having lost his sight in his latter days, died, according to the Laud manuscript, in 1127.^e Matthew Paris places his death in 1136.^f Godwin says that previous to his death he resigned his see and became a canon in his own monastery at Plympton.

ROBERT CHICHESTER, dean of Salisbury, was consecrated bishop of Exeter, according to Godwin, in 1127. From the Continuation of Florence of Worcester, however, we have a corroboration of the date of 1136, as assigned to the death of Bishop Warlewast. The continuator expressly says, under the year 1138, "Rex Anglorum Stephanus, in octavis Paschæ, quod erat 4 idus Aprilis, tenuit concilium Northamptoniæ, cui præsidebant Eboracensis archiepiscopus Turstanus, episcopi, abbates, comites, barones, nobiles quique per Angliam. In quo etiam concilio quorundam electione, Exoniensi ecclesiæ jam pastoralis cura destitutæ, de medio facti præsulis Gulielmi de Warawast, archidiaconus nomine Robertus pastoralis curæ præficitur."^g

Previous to this, in 1136, during the siege of Exeter by King Stephen, as we are informed by Hooker, who (as before observed) was chamberlain of Exeter in the time of Queen Elizabeth, the cathedral had been materially injured: the goods of the church were plundered, and the labours of Warlewast almost destroyed.^h This is confirmed, Bishop Lyttelton says, by a grant of the said king, recited in a vellum ledger, compiled temp. Hen. VI., among the dean and chapter's muniments; whereby the said king grants to the church of St. Peter in Exon a yearly rent of seven pounds ten shillings, issuing out of his manor of Colyton, in Devon, together with the profits of the hundred of Colyton, "pro restauratione dampnorum quæ feceram eidem ecclesiæ in obsidione."ⁱ

Bishop Chichester is stated to have gone very frequently abroad in pilgrimage, sometimes to Rome, and sometimes to other places: "and ever," says Godwin, "would bring with him some one relic or other." He is also said to have expended much money in the repairs and recovery of the fabric of his church. Godwin and Le Neve, from the Old Annals before quoted, place his death in the year 1150. The generality of our historians, however, place it in 1155.^k

ROBERT WARLEWAST, OR WAREWAST, nephew of the former bishop of that name, was consecrated bishop of Exeter June 5th, 1155;^l having previously, like his immediate predecessor, held the deanery of Salisbury. He died in 1159, and was buried at Plympton. This bishop, as well as his two successors, continued the repairs of the cathedral.

BARTHOLOMEW ISCANUS, OR OF EXETER, was consecrated bishop in 1161.^m He was a great adversary of Archbishop Beckett. He died Dec. 15th, 1184. Bishop Tanner, in his Bibliotheca Britannico-Hibernica, gives an account of his works.ⁿ

JOHN THE CHANTOR, OR Præcentor of the cathedral, and sub-dean of Salisbury, was elected bishop in 1186.^o He died, according to Matthew of Westminster, in 1191.^p

HENRY MARSHALL, OR MARESCHALL, archdeacon of Stafford and dean of York, brother to William Mareschall, earl of Pembroke, was consecrated bishop in 1194. Godwin says, "he finished the building of his church according to the plat and foundation which his predecessors had laid; and that done, he purchased the patronage and lordship of Wodbery of one Albemarle, which he gave and impropriated unto the vicars choral of his church."^q He died in October, 1206;^r and was buried on the north side of the presbytery of his church.

SIMON DE APULIA, dean of York, was consecrated, according to Godwin, in 1206: but from various entries upon the Patent Rolls it should appear that the see of Exeter, after Bishop Mareschall's death, remained vacant for several years. Simon de Apulia, in reality, was not consecrated till the month of October, 1214.^s In his time, according to the Laud manuscript, the city of Exeter was divided into parishes.^t The register of

WILLIAM DE BRIWERE, or BREWER, was consecrated, according to Godwin, on Easter-day, 1224. The Chron. Brev. Exon. says, "Successit Willelmus nepos Willelmi Bruere senioris, qui consecratus est in episcopum Exon. Romæ ab Honorio papa die Paschæ anno Domini m.cc.xxiiij^o." He was of the privy-council to King Henry the Third, and much in favour with that monarch. In 1235, he went to Germany, to conduct the Lady Isabel, the king's sister, upon her marriage with Frederick the emperor. He afterwards attended the emperor to the Holy Land. "Being returned home," says Godwin, "and minding, as his predecessors had done, to leave some good memorial behind him, he made a DEAN, and constituted twenty-four prebendaries within his church."^b The deed by which the office of dean, however, was established, bears date in 1225,^c the year after his consecration. He died on the 9th of the kalends of November, 1244,^d and was buried in the presbytery. This inscription was engraved upon his tomb:

"Hic jacet Willelmus Brewer quondam hujus ecclesiæ cathedralis episcopus. Fundator quatuor principalium ejusdem ecclesiæ dignitatum."^e

RICHARD BLONDY, who had before been chancellor of the diocese, was consecrated Dec. 1st, 1245.^f Godwin says, "this Richard was a man of a mild spirit, but very stout against such as in his time did offer any injury to the church. In his old years being but a weak man, he was much carried and ruled by such as were about him. They taking the opportunity of time, used all the means they might to enrich themselves. His chiefest officers were one Lodosewell his chancellor, Sutton his register, Fitzherbert his official, and Erneston the keeper of his seal: these, with other of the household, compacted amongst themselves, whilst the bishop was yet living (who then lay sick and very weak in his bed), to make unto themselves conveyances of such livelihoods as then lay in the bishop's disposition; and accordingly made out advowsons and other such grants, as to them seemed best: all which were forthwith sealed and delivered according to the orders among them concluded. These their subtle dealings were not so closely conveyed, but that the next bishop following bouted and found the same out; and did not onely reverse all their doings, but also excommunicate them; neither were they absolved until they had done penance for the same at Saint Peter's church openly upon Palme Sunday being the 19th day of March 1267."^g Bishop Blondy died on St. Stephen's day, A. D. 1257,^h and was buried in his cathedral.

WALTER BRONESCOMB was consecrated March 10, 1257. Godwin says, "he was born in the city of Exeter of very poor and very mean parentage. At the time of his election he was not priest, and therefore not capable of any such dignity: but immediately he took that order upon him, and forthwith was consecrated bishop: all which was done within fifteen days."ⁱ

He founded the college of Penryn, alias Glaseney, in the parish of Gluvias in Cornwall, about the year 1270: and gave the Barton of Rokesdone and Clist, which he had purchased, to the hospital of St. John within the East-gate of Exeter.

Godwin says, "he instituted in his own church the feast called Gabriel's feast; and gave a piece of land for the maintenance thereof. He also did by a policy purchase the lordship and house of Clist Sachfield, and enlarged the Barton thereof by gaining of Cornish wood from his Dean and Chapter fraudulently; building then a very fair and sumptuous house there. He called it Bishop's-Clist; and left the same to his successors. Likewise he got the patronage of Clist Fomesone, now called Sowton, and annexed the same to his new lordship." This latter patronage, Godwin adds, he by power wrested from its true owner.^k

Bishop Bronescomb died on the 11th of the kalends of August, A. D. 1280.^l His tomb, beneath an arch in the south wall at the entrance of the Lady chapel, has the following inscription:

"Olim sincerus pater, omni dignus amore
Primus Walterus magno jacet hic in honore.
Edidit hic plura dignissima laude statuta,
Quæ tanquam jura servant hic omnia tuta.
Atque hoc Collegium quod Glaseney plebs vocat omnis
Condidit egregium, pro voce data sibi somnis.
Quot loca construxit, pietatis quot bona fecit,
Quam sanctam duxit vitam, vox dicere quæ scit?
Laudibus immensis jubilet gens Exoniensis,
Et chorus et turbæ, quod natus in hac fuit urbe.
Plus si scire velis, festum statuit Gabrielis.
Gaudeat in cœlis igitur pater iste fidelis."

PETER QUIVIL, canon of Exeter, was consecrated bishop of the see, according to Godwin, in 1281. Bishop Kennett's manuscript Diptycha says, on the 4th of the ides of November, 1280.

Godwin informs us that Bishop Quivil "first instituted a chanter and subdean in this church. To the one he impropriated Painton and Chidleigh, and to the other the rectory of Eglosheyl in Cornwall." Godwin likewise adds, that "he first began to enlarge and increase his church from the chancel downwards, and layed the foundation thereof:"^m a point which has been disputed with considerable labour by Bishop Lyttelton. Sir Henry Englefield, however, in his observations on the bishop's account, remarks, that "Godwin's assertion, that Quivil founded the transept, which Lyttelton so severely censures, is undoubtedly true; for he joined the two towers by arches on each side of the nave, and Prynn, in his Papal Usurpations, vol. iii. p. 170, has preserved the following writ, issued upon Bishop Bronescomb's complaint, in the 3d of Edward the First, to preserve the rights of the church of Exeter from the encroachments of the Earl of Cornwall. "Rex dilectis et fidelibus suis Henr. de Monteforti et S. de Roffa salutem. Monstravit nobis venerabilis pater W. cut away the interior walls of each tower, turning great arches in them, as appears by the roll quoted by Lyttelton; besides which, it appears from the same roll, that he broke out the two great windows which light the transept, in the opposite walls of the towers: he therefore formed the transept, although he did not build all the walls of it from the ground. A building of the dimensions of this cathedral could scarcely be erected in the life of one bishop: we accordingly find, that during the time of Quivil's successor, Bytton, great sums were in different years expended on the work; and the choir does not appear to have been finished till the year 1318, in the episcopate of Stapledon, when eighty-six pounds were expended upon the altar-piece. "It is probable," Sir Henry Englefield adds, "that when Quivil thus undertook to rebuild the church, he would, as long as possible, preserve the old choir for the celebration of divine service; and, when the new nave was completed, form that into a temporary church while the choir was rebuilding. Hence it appears that the choir and altar were among the last works of the new church."^a Pleadings in Quo Waranto, defended by Bishop Quivil and the dean and chapter of his time, in the 8th and 9th of Edw. I. will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.^b They relate to the bishop's manor of Flekeston, his rights in the hundred of Crediton, and his privileges in Asperton, Bishops Tauton, Crediton, &c.; also to the property of the dean and chapter in the advowson of Culmestoke, their privileges in Mydebyry and Doulis, in the hundred of Buddelegh, and at Saltcumbe.

In the 14th of Edward the First a licence was granted to the bishop, dean, and chapter, to enclose their churchyard with a wall, gates, and posterns.^c

Bishop Quivil died suddenly on the 2d of the nones of October, 1291.

THOMAS BUTTON, BYTTON, BURTON, OR DE BINTONE, was the next bishop. The temporalities of the see were restored to him Dec. 2d, 1292. Little is related of him, but that he continued the building of the church.

From the pleadings in Quo Waranto we learn, that, in the 30th of Edward the First, he was summoned to show the proof of the privileges claimed by him in his manors of Wictone, St. Germans, Poltone, Tragaer, and Penryn; which was accordingly shown.^d

He died Sept. 21st, 1307; and was buried before the high altar of his cathedral.^e

WALTER STAPLEDON, a man of good family and great learning, was consecrated bishop of Exeter on the feast of St. Edward the Confessor, A. D. 1308.^f

"Bishop Stapledon," says Lyttelton, "who sat in this see during the whole of the reign of King Edward

II., was so noble a benefactor, both in the building as well as in adorning the fabric of his cathedral, that, in an authentic record of the church, he is said to have made the choir, "Quod postmodum per W. Stapylton, Exon. episcopum, qui chorum ecclesie et novas imagines Petri et Pauli fieri fecit." But this expression must be taken with some restrictions; for it is very certain he did not build the choir, but vaulted the presbytery, or chancel part of it, as Leland positively asserts; who adds farther, that this generous bishop made the rich front of stone work at the high altar (probably removed anno 1639, when the present painting was given by archdeacon Hellyar), and likewise the rich silver table in the middle of it.^g The Fabric Rolls, Lyttelton adds, are an undoubted record, to prove what vast sums were expended on the church during all Bishop Stapledon's time: and for some years before, and many years after. Anno 1299, under Bishop Bytton's pontificate (who was Stapledon's immediate predecessor), "summa totius cunstus novi operis" (as expressed on the Roll), amounted to 170*l.* 6*s.* 2*d.*; and anno 1306, the last year of the same bishop, the sum of 156*l.* 19*s.* 1*d.*; but in 1310, the third year of bishop Stapledon, the whole fabric expence amounts to no less than 383*l.* 18*s.* 8*d.*; and in 1318, the sum of 179*l.* 16*s.* 5*d.*; of which 86*l.* 4*s.* 5*d.* was expended in "tablaturâ magni altaris," which was the rich front of stone work, I suppose, that Leland mentions. Towards raising the yearly sum necessary for carrying on the said buildings, the several dignitaries of the church paid every year the following sums, viz. "6*l.* 7*s.* 4*d.* de dignitate decani; 3*l.* de dignitate precentoris; 38 sol. de cancellar.; 64 sol. de thesaurar," &c. as they are entered on the Rolls. All the clergy of the diocese, too, were taxed by Bishop Stapledon towards this work;^h and the several religious houses throughout the diocese granted a participation of their prayers, &c. to all such who would contribute to the fabric of the cathedral."ⁱ

After an enumeration of benefits so munificently bestowed upon his cathedral, it may seem singular to state that Bishop Stapledon was chiefly engaged in political life. He was chosen one of the privy council to Edward II., appointed lord treasurer, and employed in embassies and other weighty affairs of state. He was likewise the founder of Exeter college and of Hart hall in Oxford. He finally fell a sacrifice to popular fury Oct. 15th, 1326, for his attachment to the cause of his unfortunate sovereign, by whom he had been made guardian of the city of London. He was beheaded, together with his brother, Sir Richard Stapledon, near the north door of St. Paul's cathedral. Godwin informs us that the populace buried the bishop in a heap of sand at the back of his house, without Temple-Bar:^k Walsingham says, they threw it into the river: but the

^a Account of the Cath. Church of Exeter, publ. by the Soc. of Antiq. p. 14. Bishop Quivil's alterations and new buildings must have been of very considerable extent. In the Chron. brev. ^b Numm. XI. XII. XIII. XIV. XV. XVI. XVII.

During Bishop Quivil's time the precentorship of the cathedral appears to have been increased.—"Ecclesiam de Peynton perpetuo duximus annectendam statuantes ut ipsa ecclesia una cum ecclesia de Chuddelegh unicum beneficium censeatur ad dignitatem pertinens memoratam—volentes ut tam is qui eam impresentiarum obtinet, quam qui deinceps obtinebunt juramento se obstringant de faciendi in dicta Exon. ecclesia per ii. partes anni continue vel interpolatim residentia personali. ^e Polwhele, in his History of Devonshire, fol. Exeter, 1797, p. 284, informs us that the remains of Bishop Bytton, which were buried in the middle of the choir, were dug up a few years since, when the choir was new paved. On opening his coffin the body was found entire, and the hair of great length. There were also found enclosed with it a ring, a silver chalice, and a crozier.

^f Chron. brev. Exon. Godwin says, "The Inthronization or installation of bishops was a ceremony of great solemnity in those days; the particularity whereof it shall not be amiss, once for all, to describe in this man. At East-gate he alighted from his horse, and went on foot to St. Peter's church: all the way where he should pass being laid and covered with black cloth. On each hand he was conducted by a gentleman of great worship, Sir Hugh Courtney (who claimed to be steward of his feast) going next before him. At Broad-gate he was received by his chapter and quier in their ornaments, with Te Deum, and so carried into the church. The usual ceremonies being performed there, at his palace a great feast was prepared, for the entertainment of such noblemen and other personages of account as repaired hither at that time. It is incredible how many oxen, tunns of ale, and wine, are said to have been usually spent at this kind of solemnity." Cat. of Bishops, edit. 1615, p. 404.

^g "Bishop Stapledon made also the riche front of stone worke at the high altare in the cathedrale chirch of Exeter: and also made the riche silver table in the middle of it. Yet sum say that Bishop Lacye made this sylver table; but ther is no lykelyhod yn it." Lel. Itin. edit. Oxf. 1770, tom. iii. p. 66.

^k Newcourt, in his Repert. Ecclesiasticum, fol. 1708, vol. i. p. 589, tells us, that soon after the dissolution of the Knights Templars, the advowson of the church of St. Clements Danes without London, which had belonged to them, came to the canons-regular of the church of the Holy Sepulchre, in Warwick, who had likewise, in the same parish, five mesuages, one carucate of land, and x*l.* yearly rent. "These premises the prior and canons of the Holy Sepulchre exchanged away unto Walter Stapledon bishop of Exeter, to the use of his bishoprick, for eight acres of land in Snitfield, in the county of Warwick, and the advowson of the church there, in the 17th of Edw. II. This being done, the right of advowson of this church of S. Clement became invested thereby in the bishops of Exeter, as did also the rest of the premises, which the said Bishop Stapledon converted to a house for himself and successors, bishops of Exeter, whence it was for many former account seems the true one; not only (as Mr. Chalmers observes in his History of Oxford) because most consistent with popular malevolence and contempt, but because the queen soon after ordered the body of the murdered bishop to be removed, and interred, with that of his brother, in Exeter cathedral; which she probably could not have done had it been thrown into the river.^a His monument, on the north side of Exeter cathedral, was erected by the rector and fellows of his college in Oxford.

Polwhele says, there is an account amongst the muniments of the dean and chapter of Exeter, of the administration of this bishop's goods, by Richard Braylegh, dean of Exeter, and one of his executors; by which it appears he left a great many legacies to poor scholars, several sums of money, from twenty to sixty shillings, for the repairing of bridges in the county of Devon, &c.^b

JAMES DE BERKELE, or BERCLEYE, of the noble family of that name, was consecrated March 22, 1326:^c and died in the month of June following.^d Godwin says, after the death of Berkele, the Chapter of Exeter, authorised by the king's congè d'elire, proceeded to an election, and made choice of one John Godley, a canon of their church, who was also dean of Wells; which election was confirmed by the king's royal assent. "Howbeit," he proceeds,

"JOHN GRANDESSON being in Italy with Pope John the Twenty-second, his friends found means to have a stay made of the consecration of Godley, till they might deal with the pope for disannulling of the same; as also for conferring the bishoprick by way of provision upon the said Grandesson, the which thing they effected, and caused him to be consecrate at Rome October 18th, 1327."

Bishop Grandesson, or Grandison, was descended of the house of the Grandessons dukes of Burgundy. Godwin enlarges on his appointments to foreign embassies: noticing also his foundation of the college of St. Mary Otery. He adds, that he was a liberal benefactor to the vicars choral of his cathedral,^e as also to the college of Glaseney in Peryn. Leland says, "Joannes de Grandisono bisshop of Exeter enlargid the west part of the chirch, making vij. archis wher afore the plot was made but of v. This Joannes," he adds, "voltid the body of the cathedrale chirch of Excester."^f "Sequestering himself," saith Hooker, "from all idle persons, he kept no more about him than were absolutely necessary, in order to compass the charge of such mighty works: likewise assembling his whole clergy, he persuaded them to bequeath all their goods, &c. to the building the mother church of the diocese; and he also prevailed on sundry temporal men to give of their store; as namely, Hugh Courtney, earl of Devon, from whom he got two hundred marks."^g

Bishop Grandison enriched his church also with plate and other ornaments: building for his successors a fair house at Bishops Teinton, to which he appropriated the church of Radway.^h He died July 16th, 1369.ⁱ

THOMAS DE BRENTINGHAM was consecrated March 31st, 1370. He was afterwards appointed treasurer of England. Bishop Lyttelton says, in his time the paving of the body of the cathedral was completed, and the cloisters finished, which were begun so early as Bishop Quivil's time. Anno 1390, towards the end of Bishop Brentingham's pontificate, the sum of one hundred marks were given by Henry Blackborne, a canon of this church, for the repair, or rather the entire new-making the great window above the high altar in the choir.^k Bishop Brentingham died Dec. 3d, 1394, at Bishops Clyst.^l

EDMUND STAFFORD, brother to Ralph earl of Stafford, was consecrated June 20th, 1395. Godwin speaks only of his benefactions to what was then called Stapledon's Inn, the name of which was by him changed to that of Exeter College, in Oxford.

Bishop Lyttelton informs us, that in 1410, the sixteenth year of Bishop Stafford, letters of indulgence were directed to the four archdeacons of the diocese of Exeter, for the raising of money to the use of the fabric of the cathedral. By an entry on the Fabric Roll of that year, it should seem that the pavement of the church was not then finished, for the sum of viij^s. viij^d. is charged "pro mxxxii. petris pro pavimento ecclesie."^m

Bishop Stafford died Sept. 4th, 1419. He was interred beneath a tomb of alabaster on the north side of the entrance to the Lady chapel.ⁿ

JOHN CATRICK, or KETERICH, was translated from the see of Lichfield to Exeter, having been previously bishop of St. Davids. The royal assent to his election was given Dec. 1, 1419. His translation was farther confirmed by a bull from Pope Martin the Fifth, dated at Florence Dec. 20th following.^o He died within a short time after, while at the papal court: and was buried in the church of the brethren of the Holy Cross at Florence.^p

JAMES CARY, bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, is reckoned by Godwin as the successor of Catrick, and, as Le Neve says, might be so designed by the pope; but certainly never took possession of the see.^q He also died at Florence.

EDMUND LACY, bishop of Hereford, was translated to this see by papal provision on the 5th of the nones of July, 1420; had the temporalities restored Oct. 31; years after called Exeter House; since that Paget House, because William lord Paget enlarged and possessed it; then Leicester House, from Robert Dudley earl of Leicester, who new builded there; and, at last, Essex House, of the earl of Essex his lodging there; but of late, pulled down and built into streets and tenements." Bishop Tanner says that in the 5th Edw. III. Richard Stapleton obtained the king's licence to build A HOUSE for CARTHUSIAN MONKS upon his own ground, any where within the diocese of Exeter, and to endow the same with rents and advowsons of churches to the yearly value of one hundred marks, for the soul's health of Walter Stapleton bishop of Exeter. Leland says, "Bishop Neville, as I hard say, made the chapitre house as it is now at Excester. Syns I hard that Edmund Lacy begun the chapter house, and Neville performed it."^a Godwin also ascribes the chapter-house to Lacy. Lyttelton says, anno 1439, in Bishop Lacy's time, the nodi, or finishment of the pillars in the nave or body of the church, were adorned with painting at the expence of the vicars choral; for in the roll of that year we have the following entry: "Solut. Joh. Badde, peyntor de Exon, pro pictura lvii. nodorum in australi ambulatoria ecclesie cath. Exon. videl. lxx. sol. de dono vicariorum de choro ibidem pro pictura cujus-libet nodi iii. sol." ^b

Bishop Lacy died Sept. 18th, 1455.^c Le Neve says,

JOHN HALS was then provided to this see by the pope, but he refused it.^d

GEORGE NEVILL, son of Richard Nevill earl of Warwick, was consecrated Nov. 26th, 1455.^e He was made lord chancellor in 1460: and in 1465 was translated to the see of York.

JOHN BOTHE, or BOOTHE, was consecrated Feb. 22d, 1465. The episcopal chair or throne, in the choir of Exeter cathedral, one of the finest pieces of Gothic wood-work in the kingdom, was erected by him. He died April 1st, 1478, at his house at Horsleigh in Hampshire; and was buried at London in the church of St. Clements Danes.^f

PETER COURTNEY, archdeacon of Exeter, was consecrated bishop Nov. 8th, 1478. He was translated to the see of Winchester Jan. 29th, 1486. Godwin speaking of him as bishop of Winchester, says, "At Exeter he bestowed much money in finishing the north tower, unto which he gave a goodly bell, called after his name Peter bell."^g

RICHARD FOX, LL. D. had the temporalities of the see restored to him April 2d, 1487. He was translated to the bishoprick of Bath and Wells Feb. 8th, 1491; and subsequently became bishop of Winchester.^h

OLIVER KING, appointed by papal provision Oct. 1, 1492, was consecrated in February, and had the temporalities restored to him May 5th following. He also was translated to the see of Bath and Wells.ⁱ

RICHARD REDMAN, D. D., was translated from St. Asaph to Exeter, the temporalities of which he received Jan. 7th, 1495-6. He was translated to Ely in 1501.^k

JOHN ARUNDELL, bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, was translated to Exeter June 29th, 1502, and had the temporalities restored July 5th following. He died March 15th, 1503.^l

HUGH OLDHAM, appointed by papal provision Nov. 27th, 1504, had the temporalities restored Jan. 6th following. He died June 25th, 1519.^m

JOHN VEYSEY, or VOYSEY, alias HARMAN, appointed by papal provision Aug. 31, 1519, had the temporalities restored Nov. 4th, and was consecrated on Nov. 6th following. He was also lord president of Wales, and had the government of the lady Mary, the king's daughter. Godwin says, "Of all the bishops in the land he was accounted the best courtier, and although he were well reported of for his learning, yet better liked for his courtlike behaviour, which in the end turned not so much to his credit, as to the utter ruin and spoil of the church. For of two and twenty lordships and manors which his predecessors had left unto him of a goodly yearly revenue, he left but seven or eight, and them also leased out:"ⁿ and where he

"Edmundus Lacy Exon. episcopus propriam quandam historiam novem lectionum cum Antiphonis, Responsoriis, Collectis, Versiculis, et Capitulis correspondentibus cum plena Missa et Orationibus ad hoc aptatis ex sacris codicibus probatæ lectionis collectam, cum plano cantu et tonis ac notis et notulis juxta morem ecclesiasticum ad hoc debite applicatis in unum contextum redegit. Ab isto auctoritate papali approbatum est officium ab episcopo compositum, et decretum est ut festum sancti Raphaelis 5 die Octob. in singulis ecclesiis ubi illud acceptum fuerit celebraretur. ^g Cat. of the Bishops of Engl. edit. 1615, p. 244. Bishop Lyttelton says, “if the tradition at Landaff may be depended upon, it was brought from thence to Exeter, in the time of Bishop Courtney, in exchange for five other bells, being styled the Peter bell before its removal to Exeter. This bell, which weighs sixty hundred, and is reckoned the third largest in England, was recast anno 1676, when these words were inscribed upon it, viz. ‘Ex dono Petri Courtney, episc. ^m Ibid. Godwin says, Bishop Oldham “was careful in the saving and defending of his liberties, for which continual suits were between him and the abbat of Tavistock. He was also liberal to the vicars choral of his church: and reduced them to the keeping of commons: towards the maintenance whereof he gave them certain revenues, and impropriated unto them the rectory of Cornwood.” “He chanced to die,” he adds, “excommunicate at the suite of the abbat of Tavistocke, and might not be buried until an absolution was procured from Rome. He lieth in a chapel of his own building, cast out of the uppermost end

ⁿ This charge is also repeated by Bishop Burnet, Hist. of the Reform. edit. 1683, Part ii. p. 166; but Dr. Henry Wharton defends Veysey. He says, “The memory of Veysey suffers upon this account on all hands. The case of his bishoprick indeed was very deplorable, which from one of the richest in his time, became the poorest of all the old English bishopricks. But had any bishop of England sate at Exeter at that time, he must have done the same thing, or have been immediately deprived. For Veysey alienated no possessions of his see, but upon express command of the king, directed to him under the privy seal in favour of certain noblemen and courtiers. All the bishops at that time were subjected to a like calamity. Even Cranmer was forced to part with the better half of the possessions of his see, and Ridley, soon after his entry into London, was forced to give away the four best manors of his see for ever in one day. These two were the greatest favourites among all the bishops in that reign. Others were yet more severely dealt with. The common pretence was to exchange some lands of their bishopricks with others of religious houses remaining in the king's hands since their suppression. Even then it was such an exchange as Diomedes made with Glaucus. But to Veysey no other recompence was made, than the promise of the king's good-will and favour, assured to him in the conclusion of all those mandates, in cases of compliance with them; the effect of which promises was, that after he had complied with them to the ruin of his see, he was forced to resign it, ‘per metum et terrorem,’ as himself afterwards alledged. All he could do was to enregister at length all those privy-seals for the vindication of himself to his successors for ever; which he hath carefully done.” Specimen of Errors and Defects in B^p. Bishop Kennett, in his manuscript Diptycha, has preserved the following memoranda from the Exeter Registers respecting the leases and alienations granted by Bishop Veysey. These bear Wharton out in his defence of the bishop.

“29 Hen. VIII. 26 Jul. Joh. episcopus Exon. concessit Johanni Killigrew et hæredibus suis terras suas in parochia Sancti Budoci in Cornub. et alibi existentes reservato successoribus suis annuo redditu 4l. 3s. 4d.”

found fourteen houses well furnished, he left only one house bare and without furniture, and yet charged with sundry fees and annuities."^a In the reign of Edw. VI. a commotion in the diocese of Exeter, which arose on account of the change of religion, being in some degree imputed to the negligence of the bishop, who resided at a distance from his see, he resigned it into the king's hands in 1551: living, Godwin says, "by the rents of the temporality of the bishoprick, which, when he alienated, he did reserve unto himself for the term of his own life."^b

MILES COVERDALE, a pious and learned man, who had the honour of editing the first English Bible allowed by royal authority, and the first translation of the whole Bible printed in our language, was the next bishop of Exeter. He was nominated to the see Aug. 14th, 1551; consecrated at Croydon on August 30th; and installed in his cathedral Sept. 11th following.^c The Instrument of his collocation states him to have been promoted on account of his extraordinary knowledge in divinity, and his unblemished character.^d

Mr. Chalmers, in his Life of Coverdale, says, when Lord Russell was sent down to quell the rebellion in the west of England in 1549, he was attended by Coverdale to preach among them; and it was probably the influence of his preaching in composing the religious differences in that quarter, which pointed him out as a fit person to succeed Harman; to whom, some time before, he had been appointed coadjutor, an office not uncommon in those days. On his appointment to this bishoprick, Mr. Chalmers adds, Coverdale was so poor as to be unable to pay the first fruits, which, therefore, the king, at the solicitation of Archbishop Cranmer, excused.^e

On the accession of Queen Mary, Coverdale was ejected from his see and thrown into prison: ^f when, on Sept. 28th, 1553,

Bishop VEYSEY was reinstated. This second enjoyment of his bishoprick, however, was not of long duration. He died October 23d, 1554, at his manor of Moreplace, in the parish of Sutton Colefield in Warwickshire, and was there buried.^g

JAMES TURBERVILLE was consecrated Sept. 8th 1555, and had the temporalities restored on the 21st of the same month. He was deprived about the beginning of January, 1559. The commission to the guardian of the spiritualities was issued on the 22d of that month.^h Godwin says, "He was very careful to recover some part of the lands of his bishoprick which his predecessor wasted; and did obtain of Queen Mary, to him and his successors, the fee-farm of the manor of Crediton."ⁱ

WILLIAM ALLEY, D. D., was consecrated July 14th, 1560. The temporalities of the see were restored to him on August 26th following.^k He afterwards held the rectory of Newton Ferrers, in his own diocese, in commendam.^l He was concerned in what is called Bishop Parker's Translation of the Bible; his share in which appears to have been the Pentateuch.^m He died early in the month of April, 1570;ⁿ and was buried on the south side of the presbytery of his cathedral.

WILLIAM BRADBRIDGE, D. D., and dean of Salisbury, was elected March 1st, and consecrated at Lambeth March 18th, 1571. He held with his bishoprick the rectories of Lazante, in Cornwall, and of Newton Ferrers, in Devon:^o dying at the latter place, suddenly, June 27th, 1578. He was buried on the north side of the high altar of his cathedral, near Bishop Lacy.^p

JOHN WALTON, WOLTON, or WOOLTON, D. D., was elected July 2d, 1579, confirmed the 24th of the same month, and consecrated August the 2d following.^q He was admitted to the rectory of Lazante before mentioned Oct. 2d, 1583.^r He died March 13th, 1593; and was buried toward the south side of the presbytery of his church.

GERVASE BABINGTON, D. D., was translated from Llandaff to the see of Exeter Feb. 4th, 1594, confirmed March 11th, and installed in his cathedral March 22d. He was translated to Worcester October 4th, 1597.^s

WILLIAM COTTON, or COTON, D. D., was elected Sept. 6th, 1598, confirmed Nov. 11th, and consecrated the next day. He died at Silverton, in Devonshire, August 26th, 1621, and was buried in the cathedral.^t

VALENTINE CARY, D. D., was elected Sept. 27th, 1621, confirmed Nov. 17th, and consecrated next day. He died June 10th, 1626.^u

JOSEPH HALL, D. D., dean of Worcester, was elected Nov. 25th, 1627, confirmed Dec. 15th, and consecrated the 23d of the same month. He was translated in 1641 to the see of Norwich.^x

RALPH BROWNRIGG, D. D., was elected March 31st, 1642.^y Richardson says he was consecrated May 15th. He died December 7th, 1659.

JOHN GAUDEN, D. D., was elected Nov. 3d, 1660, confirmed Nov. 17th, and consecrated the next day.^z He was translated in 1661, to Worcester.

SETH WARD, D. D., was elected July 8th, 1662, and consecrated July 20th. He was translated Sept. 12th, 1667, to the see of Salisbury.

ANTHONY SPARROW, D. D., was elected Oct. 14th, 1667, and consecrated Nov. 3d. He was translated to the bishoprick of Norwich in the month of September, 1676.

THOMAS LAMPLUGH, D. D., was elected Octob. 3d, 1676, and consecrated on the twelfth of the same month.^a Bishop Kennett, in his MS. Diptycha, says, "The prince of Orange landing at Torbay 5 Nov. 1688, Bishop Lamplugh immediately quitted Exeter, and fled to London;

^m Mr. Chalmers, speaking of the intercession for him on this account made by the king of Denmark, and of the letters which his Majesty wrote to Queen Mary, says, "By one of these, dated April 25th, 1554, it would appear that Coverdale was imprisoned in consequence of being concerned in an insurrection against the queen; but this is not laid to his charge in the queen's answer, who only pretended that he was indebted to her concerning his bishoprick. As the first fruits had been forgiven by Edw. VI. this must be supposed to allude to his tenths; and Coverdale's plea, as appears by the king of Denmark's second letter, was that he had not enjoyed the bishoprick long enough to be enabled to pay the queen." General Biogr. Dict. ut supr. p. 343. On Queen Elizabeth's accession, Coverdale, who had been an exile in Germany, received an offer of, but refused, the bishoprick of Llandaff. He was afterwards collated to the rectory of St. Magnus London-bridge. The date of his death is differently, and in both instances erroneously stated by Richards in his Notes on Godwin, and by Neal. The parish Register of St. Bartholomew behind the Exchange, where he was interred, proves him to have been buried Feb. 19th, 1568.

^a The body of ecclesiastics anciently belonging to the cathedral, exclusive of the bishop, consisted of a dean, twenty-four canons, twenty-four vicars, an indefinite number of anniversaries, or annivellaries, twelve secondaries, four custors, or keepers, and fourteen choir-boys; besides other inferior officers and servants. The anniversaries were chantry priests, appointed to celebrate, during the course of the year, the obit of some deceased person, with a certain stipend of marks or pounds, and other profits.

Bishop William Alley, or Alleigh, with the unanimous consent of the dean and chapter, and under the royal authority, by a statute of 22d February, 1560, limited the number of canons residentiary to nine, of whom the dignitaries were to be four; and amongst these the revenues of the church were thenceforth to be shared.

In consequence of complaints made to Charles the First by the rest of the prebendaries (forso the non-residentiaries then were, as they still are styled), of the exility of their stipends, the king had determined to increase them; but his purpose was prevented by the breaking out of the civil war. But, on the restoration of Charles the Second, Bishop Seth Ward, with the like consent of the dean and chapter, and under the royal authority, by a statute of 28th March, 1663, decreed, that the number of canons residentiary ought never to exceed nine; that the small stipends of the rest of the prebendaries should be extended to the sum of twenty pounds each annually; and defined and prescribed their future duties in the cathedral choir, consisting merely of the attendance of two of them at the time of the assizes and quarter sessions of the peace, and the weekly preaching of the Sunday afternoon sermon or divinity lecture, on the penalty, for neglecting to preach the sermon, of twenty shillings, to be converted to the use of the cathedral library. See Mr. Jones's "Account of the Ancient Constitution, Discipline, and Usages of the Cathedral Church of Exeter," printed in the XVIIIth volume of the Archæologia of the Society of Antiquaries, p. 413.

^c The only manuscripts which bear relation to the history of the church, or its bishops, in this collection, exclusive of those already noticed in the account of Bishop Grandison, are,

1. Statuta Ecclesiæ Crucis per Tho. Button Exon. episcopum.—Statuta Joannis Grandisoni.—Statuta Edmundi Lacey pro Ecclesia de Crediton.

10. Pontificale Edm. Lacy episcopi Exon. fol.

Of these manuscripts, the eighth article is erroneously described. It is, in fact, the volume which has been since published by the Commissioners on the public Records, under the title of the EXON DOMESDAY.

Its main body presents a description of the western parts of the kingdom, comprising the counties of Wilts, Dorset, Somerset, Devon, and Cornwall; and it is supposed, so far as it extends, to contain an exact transcript of the original Rolls or Returns made by the Conqueror's commissioners at the time of forming the General Survey, from which the Great Domesday itself was compiled in a form somewhat more compressed. It is written on vellum, in the manner of a book, of the small folio size: containing five hundred and thirty-two double pages.

the second volume of the "Catalogus Librorum Manuscriptorum Angliæ et Hiberniæ," fol. Oxon. 1697.^c

Wanley, in the Catalogue of Saxon manuscripts which forms the second volume of Dr. Hickes's Thesaurus, has minutely described a Collection of Poems, chiefly on religious subjects, on a few leaves; at the beginning of which, certain Instruments, relating chiefly to the possessions of the church, appear to have been entered in different hands.^d

The opening of the manuscript preserves the Inquisitio Geldi, or Taxation of the Hundreds for the five counties already mentioned. The Geld or Tax here alluded to was that of six shillings upon every hide, noticed by most of our historians, but expressly stated by Matthew Paris and Matthew of Westminster to have been an immediate consequence of the Great Survey. Then follow the Returns of property above described.

The most striking feature of difference between the Exon manuscript and the Domesday Survey in the Exchequer, is in the former giving the enumeration of the live stock upon every estate, exactly as it occurs in the second volume of the Exchequer Survey, in the counties of Essex, Norfolk, and Suffolk: but which was omitted when the Returns which form the first volume were breviated.

The manuscript is supposed to have been deposited at Exeter, as in the metropolis of the western counties. No more ample details occur in it of the bishop's lands than of those belonging to the other tenants in capite.

There is a valuation of the possessions belonging to the see of Exeter in the Augmentation Office, stated to have been made in the second year of the translation of Bishop Richard Redman, consequently in the year 1496. This valuation is unfortunately very imperfect in some of its parts, particularly in the heading of the Returns, so that the names cannot always be collected; and the premises are only to be ascertained by conjecture.

The following list of estates, with their gross annual values at that period, has however been with some difficulty extracted.

The EDIFICE of Exeter cathedral consists of a nave, with two side aisles; two short transepts formed by towers; a chapter-house, a choir, with side aisles; and ten chapels, or oratories: with a room called the consistory court. The roof of the nave is supported by fourteen clustered columns, from which spring sixteen pointed arches: above these are two tiers of small open arches. The towers, which form the transepts, though similar in their shape and general character, differ externally in their ornamental embellishments. The elevation of the west front of the cathedral presents a magnificent screen, or portal, in the centre of which is the chief entrance. The windows of the cathedral are large, and many of them enriched with painted glass; more especially the great east and west windows.

The following are the dimensions of the building as given by Mr. Dallaway:

Length of nave 180 feet; of choir 132 feet; breadth across the transept 32 feet; length of Lady-chapel 65 feet: making a total of 409 feet.

Breadth of nave 40 feet; of choir 34 feet; of aisles 20 feet; of Lady-chapel 35 feet.

Length of transept 140 feet. Length of one aisle 148 feet; of the other 132 feet.

Heighth of nave, choir, and transepts 68 feet. Height of aisles 35 feet. Height of Lady-chapel 40 feet. Height of towers 145 feet.

The editors of the Beauties of England and Wales give a different account of the dimensions. They state the nave to measure 76 feet in width within the walls, and 175 feet in length from the western door to the organ screen. The choir, as of the same width with the nave, and 128 feet in length. St. Mary's chapel 51 feet in length. The whole cathedral 408 feet from east to west, including the walls; the height of the roof, or vaulting, 69 feet; and of the Norman towers, to the top of the battlements, 130 feet.^a De Sede Episcopali Exon.

[Ex vetusto MS. in Bibl. Bodleiana, MS. Bodl. 579.]

ANNO illo quo transacti sunt à nativitate Domini nostri Jesu Christi anni dccccv. misit Formosus, pontifex apostolicus Romanæ ecclesiæ, in terram Anglorum ad regem Eaduardum, filium Alfridi, motus cum magna iracundia ac devocione, et mandavit ei cum suis omnibus maledictionem contra benedictionem quam beatus papa Gregorius per sanctum virum Augustinum genti Anglorum antea misit, nisi cum episcopis instituisset destitutas parochias episcoporum secundum antiquam traditionem quæ tradita est genti Anglorum à sede sancti Petri; nam per septem annos plenè destituta est regio Jeuissorum, vel Uest-Saxonum, ab omni episcopo. Quo facto, congregavit Eaduardus rex synodum senatorum gentis Anglorum, in quo præsidebat Plegmundus archiepiscopus, regi recitans et disputans districta verba apostolicæ legationis quam misit beatus papa Formosus. Tunc sibi rex cum suis, et Plegmundus archiepiscopus salubre consilium invenerunt, assumentes sibi dominicam sententiam, Messis quidem multa est, operarii verò pauci; singulisque tribubus Jeuissorum (vel Uest-Saxonum) singulos constituere episcopos, et singulis episcopia constituere, et quod dudum duo habuerunt in quinque diviserunt. Acto illo consilio, cum honorificis muneribus Plegmundus archiepiscopus Romam rediit, apostolicum Formosum cum magna humilitate placavit, regis decreta et seniorum regionis enuntiavit, quod et apostolico maximè placuit. Rediens ad patriam, in urbe Dorobernia, VII. episcopos VII. ecclesiis in uno die ordinavit: Frythestanum ad ecclesiam Uentaniensem, Æthelstanum ad ecclesiam Corvinensem, Wærstanum ad ecclesiam Sciraburnensem, Æthilhelmum ad ecclesiam Fontaniensem, Eadulfum ad ecclesiam Cridionensem. Insuper addiderunt illi tres villas in Cornubia, quorum nomina Polltun, Caelling, Landuithan, ut inde singulis annis visitaret gentem Cornubiensem ad exprimendos eorum errores: nam antea, in quantum potuerant, veritati resistebant, et non decretis apostolicis obediebant; sed et aliis provinciis constituit duos, Australibus-Saxonibus virum idoneum Beornh ordinavit, et Mercionibus Coenuulfum ad civitatem quæ dicitur Dorceceaster: hoc Sic papa apostolicus in synodis ecclesiæ sancti Petri conclusit, ut dampnaretur imperpetuum qui hoc salubre mutaret consilium.

Anno verò Dominicæ incarnationis mliij. loco xj. post Eduardum prædictum, filium scilicet Alfridi regis, imperium totius Anglorum regni suscepit Eduardus, filius Athelredi regis, die Dominico Pascae id est iij. non. Aprilis cum magno gaudio totius gentis Anglicæ, in Uintonia civitate consecratus. Tertio autem anno imperii sui, id est anno mxlvj. Dominicæ incarnationis, dedit episcopatum Cridionensis ecclesiæ, atque Cornubiensis provinciæ, capellano suo Leofrico, vita moribusque modesto; qui vir venerabilis accepto pontificatus honore diocesim suam perlustrans, populo sibi commisso verbum Dei studiosè prædicabat, clericos doctrina informabat, ecclesias non paucas construebat, et cætera quæ officii sui erant strenuè amministrabat; cernens verò utramque provinciam diocesis suæ, id est Devenoniam et Cornubiam piratarum barbarica infestatione sæpiùs devastari, cœpit, divina, ut credimus, inspiratione, diligenter meditari qualiter episcopalem cathedram Cridionensis loci ad urbem Exonicam transferre posset. Et quia sagaci animo prospexit hoc absque Romanæ ecclesiæ auctoritate fieri non posse; misso illuc idoneo legato, id est Landberto presbitero suo, ad sanctissimum papam Leonem, humiliter postulavit, quatinus, directis paternitatis suæ literis regem Eduardum rogaret, ut de Cridionensi villa ad urbem Exoniensem episcopalem sedem transmigrare concederet; ubi, ab hostilitatis incursu liber, tutius ecclesiastica officia disponere posset. Apostolicus verò pontifex libenter rationabili ejus petitioni annuens, hujusmodi literas regi Eduardo direxit.

Leo episcopus servus servorum Dei, Eduardo, Anglorum regi salutem karissimam cum benedictione apostolica. Si bene habes et bene vales, inde non modicas domino Jesu Christo referimus gratias, et hoc optamus ut ita luculenter possideas regni gubernacula, ut in æterna maneat tabernacula. Et quia audivimus te circa Dei ecclesias et ecclesiasticos viros studiosum et religiosum esse, inde multum gaudemus, et hoc ammonemus atque benignè rogamus, ut ita in Dei opere perseverare studeas, quatenus regi regum Deo placere valeas, atque cum illo in cœlesti regno permanes. Notum itaque est nostræ pietati qualiter Leofricus episcopus sine civitate sedem pontificalem tenet, unde multum miramur, non de illo solo, sed et de omnibus illis episcopis qui talia agunt. Cum verò ad vos nostrum miserimus legatum, de aliis dicemus, nunc autem de nostro fratre jam dicto Leofrico præcipimus atque rogamus, ut propter domini et nostri amoris causam adiutorium præbeas, ut à Cridionensi villula ad civitatem Exoniam sedem episcopalem possit mutare. Hæc et alia bona opera ita agere studeas, ut a Christo Domino æternum regnum acquirere valeas. Vale karissime semper in Domino.

His rex litteris cum magna devotione assensum præbens, ilico dedit prædicto episcopo monasterium sanctæ Mariæ et sancti Petri apostoli in civitate Exonia, ut ibi episcopale solium construeret, et post aliquot menses illuc veniens rex ipse gloriosus, per brachium dextrum episcopum ducens, et nobilissima regina Edgitha per sinistram, in cathedram pontificalem in præfato monasterio constituerunt, præsentibus ducibus, multisque Angliæ proceribus.

Sicque venerabilis vir Leofricus, anno Dominicæ incarnationis ml. indict. iij. cum magna gloria inthronizatus, primus episcopus factus est Exoniensis ecclesiæ, jussuque regis canonicos ibi constituit. Et quia locus ille terris, libris, omnibusque ornamentis ecclesiasticis pene despoliatus erat, (nam ex xxvj. terris quas rex religiosus Æthelstanus illuc dedit vix una vilissima remansit, et tres codices, feretrumque reliquiarum) præsul ipse de suis propriis multo tempore congregationem pavit, et cum maximo studio, quantum potuit, locum illum restauravit et emendavit, datisque illuc tribus proprietatis suæ terris augmentavit. Anno autem Dominicæ incarnationis mxxj. episcopatus verò sui anno xxvj. die quarto idus Februarii, ex hac erumnosa vita subtractus, sepultus est in cripta ejusdem ecclesiæ, pro cujus animæ requie, pie lector non omittas orare.

Hic ostenditur in hoc Christi codice, quid Leofricus episcopus contulerit sancti Petri monasterio Excestrensi, ubi sedes ejus episcopalis est. Scilicet, quod ea recupe- ravit quæ antea alienabantur, Dei auxilio et suâ advoca- tione ac thesauro. Id est, primò fundum illum apud Culmstocam, et fundum illum apud Brancescumbam, et apud Sealcumbam, et fundum illum apud S. Mariæ ec- clesiam, et fundum illum apud Stofordtunam, et apud Sweartæ fontem,^c et fundum illum apud Morceshillam, et Sidefullæ familiam, et fundum illum ad Brihtrici lapi- dem, et fundum illum apud Toppeshamme, quamvis eum Haraldus postea injustè ademerit, et fundum illum apud Stocam, et fundum illum apud Sydeberiam, et fundum illum apud Niwantunam, et apud Northtunam, et fundum illum apud Clistam quem Wido habuit.

Hæc autem est augmentatio terrarum, quâ de pro- prio monasterium illud ampliavit, pro domini ipsius ani- mæ, et suâ; ad victum Deo servientium qui pro ipsorum animabus intercederent. Id est, primò, fundus ille apud Bæmtunam, et apud Estunam, et apud Ceomeneiam, et fundus ille apud Doſſicam, et apud Holacumbam, et apud Suthwudam. Ipse autem quando monasterium suscepit [regendum] non invenit fundi quid eidem loco subjecti plus duabus hidis apud Idam, et inibi haud plura erant pecora quàm septem boves.

Hæc autem est remuneratio, quâ Deum agnovit (i. e. honoravit) et sanctum Petrum apud sanctum illud cœno- bium in ecclesiasticis thesauris. Videlicet, quod illuc introduxit duas cruces episcopales, et duas magnas cru- ces osseas [vel, osse, ebore fortè, paratas] præter alias parvas cruces collares argenteas, et duos magnos Christi libros osseos,^d [vel, ebore ornatos] et tria feretra [vel, scrinia] ossea, et unum altare osseum, et quinque calices argenteos, et quatuor corporalia [quibusdam, pulvinaria sacrosancta, quibus scilicet panem imponunt consecra- tum] et unam fistulam argenteam, et quinque completa ad usum missæ vestimenta [al. vestes sacerdotales] et duas dalmaticas, et tres tunicas epistolares [ab epistolas sc. legentibus gestari solitas] et quatuor suddiaconorum mantilia [vulgò, manutergia, et manipulos] et tres can- torum pileos, et tres cantorum baculos [vel, virgas] et quinque altaris pallia, et septem stragulas, et duo tapeta, et tria coria ursina, et septem scamnorum [vel sedilium] tegmina [vulgò, bancalia] et tria dorsalia [aulæa, scil. à tergo mensæ dominicæ suspensa] et duo vela [vel, cortinas] et sex conchas fagineas, et duos calices os- seos, quatuor cornua, et duo magna candelabra ossea, et sex minora candelabra ossea, et unum thuribulum ar- genteum, cum thuriaria ferula [vel, virgula] argentea, et octo aquiminaria [vasa sc. lustralia] et duo labara [vel, vexilla sacra] et unam mensam, et sex arcas, et unum plastrum viaticum, et unam cistam. Erant autem an- tea nisi septem campanæ suspensæ, nunc sunt tredecim suspensæ, præter duodecim tintinnabula. Item duo [sunt] completa missalia [divinor. scil. officiorum libri] et unum collectaneneum [collectarum sc. ecclesiasticarum liber] et duo epistolarum libri, et duo completi cantio- num libri, et unus cantionis nocturnalis [vulgò, comple- torii] liber et unus [liber] Ad te levavi [dictus] et unum troparium, et duo psalteria, et tertium psalterium secundum Romanum cantandi modum, et duo hymno- rum codices [al. antiphonaria] et unus pretiosus bene- dicendi codex, et tres alii, et unus Anglicus Christi liber, et duo æstivales lectionum libri, [vulgò, legendæ] et Et post dies suos [vel, obitum ejus] concessit suam capellam, simul cum seipso eò transferendam, et omnibus ad Dei servitium pertinentibus quorum ipse author [vel, donator] erat, eà lege ut servi Dei inibi existentes, semper in suis orationibus et missis animæ ejus sint memores, apud Christum, et apud sanctum Petrum, et apud omnes sanctos illos quibus sacrum illud monasterium consecratur, ut anima ejus Deo sit acceptior.^b Et qui hæc dona, et hanc concessionem Deo et sancto Petro abstulerit, auferatur ei regnum cœlorum, et ad inferni cruciatus sit in æternum depulsus.

Id est,

Hic ostenditur in hoc scripto de sacris reliquiis quas Æthelstanus inclutus rex dedit sanctæ Mariæ, et sancti Petri cœnobio apud Exceſtriam, ad Dei laudem, animæque suæ redemptionem, omniumque eorum qui sacrum illum requirerent et honorarent locum ad æter- nam salutem.

Scilicet, idem rex Æthelstanus, quando post patrem Edwardum regnum ipse capessebat, et Dei gratiâ totius Angliæ monarchiam, quam ante eum nonnulli reges in- ter se divisam habuerant, quodam tempore huc Exces- triam (quod et veracium hominum fuerat super eo vati- cinium:) accessit, et meditari, ac consilium inire cœpit, quid sibi maximè conveniens, quod, de thesauris suis regalibus ad Dei laudem et populi sui æternam utilita- tem, erogaret.

Deus omnipotens, qui omnibus bene proponentibus semper est adiutor, et promotor, illam regi immisit co- gitationem, quâ gazis ipse transitoriis indeficientes im- petrare valeret thesauros. Ipse autem ultra mare viros misit fideles et discretos, qui quam latè poterant terram peragrarunt, et gazis illis pretiosissimos acquisiverunt thesauros, qui, ullo tempore usquam terrarum acquiri possint, id est, reliquias præstantissimas ex omni loco longè lateque collectas, easque dicto regi attulerunt; rex autem multâ cum lætitia Deo propterea gratias egit.

Deinde præcepit, ut hic Exceſtriæ, ubi Deus illam salubrem ei immisit cogitationem, monasterium extrue- rent, in honorem Dei, et celestis reginæ divæ Mariæ, Christi genitricis, et S. Petri apostolorum principis, quem idem rex sibi in patronum elegerat, et eò contulit viginti (et) sex villas, item tertiam prædictarum reliquiarum partem illuc inferri fecit, in æternam animæ suæ re- demptionem et eorum omnium auxilium qui sacrum illum locum quo reliquie illæ insunt, in fide requirerent et honorarent.

Ordinatio Decanatus Exon.

[Ex Apographo veteri. MS. Lansd. 935, Kenn. Diptycha.]

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus præsens scriptum inspecturis capitulum beati Petri Exon. perpetuum in Domino salutem. Noverit universitas vestra quod cum Exon. ecclesia usque ad tempora nostra decano caruerit, nos ad honorem Dei et cultum in ecclesia Christi ampliandum ad imitationem aliarum cathedralium ecclesiarum ordinarum de consensu venerabilis patris nostri W. Briwere [Exon. episcopi concessimus et providimus ut in Exon. ecclesia temporibus nostris et in perpetuum, canonicæ, a Capitulo et de capitulo unus de canonicis eligatur decanus, et solempniter instituatur. Decani autem officium in Exon. ecclesia hoc erit, ut cum ipse omnibus canonicis, vicariis, et aliis clericis de choro et de capitulo in animarum regimine et morum correctione præmineat, causas omnes spirituales eorum ad capitulum spectantes audire, et iudicio capituli teneatur terminare, excessus canonicorum et aliorum de choro corripere et delinquentium personas juxta delicti quantitatem et personarum qualitatem in capitulo et iudicio capituli debita animadversione punire. Ad eundem etiam spectabit confessiones canonicorum et aliorum de choro audire et penitencias injungere in propria persona, vel ad eum cui ipse hoc officium de consensu capituli assignaverit, ni aliquis de choro petita licentia a Decano vel ad hoc officium deputato alium confessorem petierit. Præterea canonici institutionem ab episcopo, a Decano vero possessionem præbendarum accipient. Decani erit etiam canonicis jam institutis communam ecclesiæ conferre, et eis stallum in choro, et locum in capitulo assignare. Vicarias vacantes de consensu capituli ad præsentationes canonicorum præsentium idoneo clerico conferre; absentium vero canonicorum vicariæ ordinentur per decanum et capitulum prout viderint expedire; ita tamen quod canonicus ad ecclesiam suam rediens possit pro voluntate sua vicarium admissum amovere. Præterea nullus clericorum in superiori gradu vel in secunda forma in choro admittetur nisi de licentia decani. Item omni duplici festo, absente episcopo et in prima Dominica Adventus, et in Dominica Palmarum, et in capite jejunii et in tribus diebus ante Pascha, et in vigilia Pentecostes, et in anniversariis episcoporum et decanorum ecclesiæ divinum tenetur exequi officium. Tenetur item in ecclesia Exon. residentiam facere secundum consuetudinem aliorum Decanorum in Ecclesiis ordinatis in Cant. provincia. Dignitas autem decani est ut nullus Vicariorum ecclesiæ sanguinem minuat vel a civitate recedat foris per unam noctem moram facturum ex ecclesia sancta ni licentia decani petita et optenta. Item decanus chorum vel capitulum intranti vel transitum facienti clerici omnes tenentur assurgere. Erit autem decanus contentus unica communia sicut simplex canononicus, donec communæ aliquæ aliunde de novo conferantur, ad hoc ut plenius et uberius possit et debeat ei in communâ provideri. Item nullam habebit jurisdictionem vel potestatem in ecclesia vel extra de communâ vel re aliqua temporali ad eam spectante aliam quam alius simplex canonicus. Hanc autem ordinationem decani et eorum quæ ad eam pertinent et ad capitulum futuris temporibus firmiter observandam in Exon. ecclesia providimus, et quo minus in aliqua parte mutiletur. Nos pro posse nostro procuraturos invocato Dei omnipotentis nomine promisimus et si quid contra hoc fuerit impetratum quod nullius momenti censeatur, sed irritum et vacuum habeatur; salvis dignitatibus, consuetudinibus, libertatibus, archidiaconi Exon. archidiaconi Totton. præcentoris, thesaurarii in Exon. ecclesia, quibus libertatibus, dignitatibus, et consuetudinibus, ipsi vel ipsorum prædecessores usi sunt ratione dignitatum suarum ante creationem Decani. Et ad hæc omnia fideliter observanda et ad procurandum pro posse suo ut observentur obligavit se capitulum jurejurando corporali præstito. Canonici scilicet qui hiis agendis interfuerunt videl. archid. Exon. et cæteri scilicet B. archidiaconus Totton. A. Thesaurarius, H. archid. Tanton. magister H. de Warewike, magister Ysauc, W. de Swyndon, R. Colc. A. de Limesi, Eustachius, Daniel de Longo Campo, Thomas Mandut, G. de Bisman, magister R. de Didesham per G. fratrem suum procuratorem. Acta sunt hæc anno ab incarnatione Domini mcccxxv. die sancti Andreæ apostoli, pontificatus venerab. patris W. Briwere anno secundo in Exon. ecclesia.

[Cart. de aº. 55 H. III. n.]

HENRICUS Dei gratia rex Angliæ, dominus Hiberniæ, et dux Aquitanniæ, archiepiscopis, episcopis, abbatibus, prioribus, comitibus, baronibus, justiciariis, vicecomitibus, præpositis, ministris et omnibus ballivis et fidelibus suis, salutem. Inspeximus cartam Æthelredi quondam regis Angliæ factam Deo et ecclesiæ beati Petri Exoniæ in hæc verba.

‘Rector altipolorum culmine atque architector summæ fabricæ æthereæ aulæ ex nihilo quidem cuncta creavit, cælumque scilicet et terram et omnia quæ in eis sunt; candida quidem angelica agmina, solem, lucidaque astra et cætera quæ super firmamento sunt, mundi autem fabricam inenarrabili disponens ordine, ut Genesis testatur, et hominem sexto die formavit ad similitudinem suam, Adam videlicet, quadriformi plasmatum materia; unde nunc constat genus humanum, quæ in terris moratur, et ima terra larvarica latibula, ubi et Lucifer cum decimo ordine per superbiam de cælo ruit. Sed et hoc invidet pestifer Chelidrus, protoplastum à Deo conditum intellexerat ut hoc impleret, à quo ipse miser cum satelliti illius de cælo projecti sunt. Heu quidem boni creati sunt, sed miserabiliter decepti. Ideo invidus Zabulus totis viribus homini invidet, suadet mulieri, mulier viro; per suasionem atque per inobedientiam ambo decepti sunt fraudulenter per gustum pomi ligni vetiti, atque amœnitate paradisi dejecti sunt in hoc ærumnoso seculo, et lethum sibi ac posteris suis promeruerunt, atque in tetrum abyssi demersi sunt. Sed hoc misericors et piissimus pater indoluit perire tamdiu nobilem creaturam, sui imaginem, misertus est generi humano, misit nobis in tempore, id est, post quinque millia annorum, proprium filium suum, ut mundum perditum iterum renovaret, ut sicut mulier genuit mortem in mundo, ita per mulierem enixa est nobis vita in mundo; et sicut per delictum Adæ omnes corruimus, ita per obedientiam Christi omnes surreximus: et sicut mors per lignum introivit, ita et vita per lignum sanctæ crucis venit et antiquum inimicum superavit, et fortis fortem alligavit et in imo baratro retrusit. Justè periit qui injustè decepit, atque omnes antiquas turmas à fauce pessimi leonis eripuit, et ovem perditam in humeris posuit, et ad antiquam patriam reduxit, et decimum ordinem implevit.

Unde ego Æthelredus, compunctus Dei misericordia, totius Albionis cæterarumque gentium triviatum persistentium basileus, dum plerumque cogitarem de hujus seculi caduci rebus transitoriis, quomodo superni arbitris examine, cuncta quæ videntur vana sunt, et quæ non videntur æterna, et cum transitoriis rebus perpetua præmia adquirantur. Qua de re nunc patefacio omnibus catholicis, quod cum concilio et licentia episcoporum ac principum et omnium optimatum meorum, pro amore Domini nostri Jusu Christi, atque sancti confessoris Germani, necnon et beati eximii Petroci, pro redemptione animæ meæ, et pro absolutione criminum meorum, donavi episcopium Ealdredi episcopi, id est, in provincia Cornubiæ, ut libera sit eique subjecta omnibusque posteris ejus, ut ipse gubernet atque regat suam parochiam sicuti alii episcopi qui sunt in mea ditione, locusque atque regimen sancti Petroci semper in potestate ejus sit successorumque illius. Itaque omnium regalium tributorum libera sit atque laxata, vi exactorum, operum, pœnaliū causarum, necnon et furum comprehensione, cunctaque seculi gravedine, absque sola expeditione atque libera perpetualiter permaneat.

Quicumque ergo hoc augere atque multiplicare voluerit, amplificet Deus bona illius in regione viventium, paceque nostra conglutinata vicens et florens atque inter agmina beatitudinis tripudia succedat qui nostræ donationis muneri consentiat. Si quis verò tam epilenticus philargyriæ seductus amentia, quod non optamus, hanc nostræ elemosinæ dapsilitatem ausu temerario infringere temptaverit, sit ipse alienatus à consortio sanctæ Dei ecclesiæ, necnon et à participatione sacrosancti corporis et sanguinis Jesu Christi, filii Dei, per quem totus terrarum orbis ab antiquo humani generis inimico liberatus est, et cum Juda, Christi proditore, sinistra in parte deputatus, ni prius hic digna satisfactione humilis pœnituerit quod contra sanctam Dei ecclesiam rebellis agere præsumpsit, nec in vita hac practica veniam nec in theorica requiem apostata obtineat ullam, sed æternis baratri incendiis trusus jugiter miserrimus crucietur.

Hiis testibus consentientibus quorum inferius nomina decusatim Domino disponente caraxantur.

Ego Athelredus, Britanniæ totius Anglorum monarchus, hoc agyæ crucis taumate roboravi.

Ego Ordbright legis Dei catascopus, hoc eulogium propria chyra devotus consolidavi. Ego Ælrich episcopus Wiltanæ civitatis consensi et subscripsi. Ego Wulfryc episcopus Shireburnensis ecclesiæ consensi et subscripsi.

Ego Athelwerd dux. Ego Ælfric dux. Ego Leofric dux. Ego Leofwine dux. Ego Leofric abbas. Ego Ealfred abbas. Ego Ælfric abbas. Ego Brichtelm abbas. Ego Athelwin minister. Ego Alfrie minister. Ego Alfwine minister. Ego Leofwyne minister. Ego Osulf minister.

‘Rector altipolorum culmine atque architector summæ fabricæ æthereæ aulæ ex nihilo quidem cuncta creavit, cælum scilicet et terram et omnia quæ in eis sunt, candida quidem angelica agmina, solem, lunam, lucidaque astra et cætera quæ super firmamento sunt; mundi autem fabricam inenarrabili disponens ordine ut Genesis testatur, et hominem sexto die formavit ad similitudinem suam, Adam videlicet quadriformi plasmatum materia. Unde nunc constat genus humanum et ima terra larvarica latibula, ubi et Lucifer cum decimo ordine per superbiam de cælo ruit. Sed et hoc invidet pestifer Chelidrus, prothoplastum à Deo conditum intellexerat ut hoc impleteret à quo ipse miser et satellites illius de cœlo projecti sunt. Heu quidem boni creati sunt, sed miserabiliter decepti, ideoque invidus Zabulus totis viribus homini invidet, suadet mulieri, mulier viro; per suasionem atque per inobedientiam ambo decepti sunt fraudulentè per gustum pomi ligni vetiti, atque amœnitatē paradysi dejecti sunt in hoc ærumpnoso seculo, et lethum sibi et posteris suis promeruerunt, atque in tetrum abyssi demersi sunt. Sed hoc piissimus pater indoluit perire tamdiu nobilem creaturam sui imaginem, misertus est generi humano, misit nobis in tempore, id est, post quinque millia annorum, proprium filium suum ut mundum perditum iterum renovaret, ut sicut mulier genuit mortem in mundo, ita per mulierem enixa est nobis vita in mundo. Et sicut per delictum Adæ omnes corruimus, ita per obedientiam Christi omnes surreximus; et sicut mors per lignum intravit, ita et vita per lignum sanctæ crucis venit et antiquum inimicum superavit, et fortis fortem alligavit, et in imo baratro retrusit. Justè periit qui injustè decepit; atque omnes antiquas sanctas turmas à fauce pessimi leonis eripuit, et ovem perditam in humeris posuit, et ad antiquam patriam reduxit, et decimum ordinem implevit.

Unde ego Cnhut rex Anglorum cæterarumque gentium persistentium in circuitu, patefacio omnibus hanc cartulam legentibus et auscultantibus, quod Athelredus dux revelavit mihi, quod mei præpositi in Devēna provincia imponebant jugum servitutis prædiis sanctæ ecclesiæ Dei et ejus genetricis Mariæ omniumque sanctorum quæ est in Excestria, diruto monasterio à paganis et crematis privilegiis quæ antiqui reges concesserant supradicto cœnobio. Quamobrem ego Cnhut Deo favente totius Albionis primicerius, pro petitione supradicti ducis, et pro remedio animæ meæ, mearumque culparum emendatione, atque incolumitate mei regni, hanc cartulam concedo Athelwoldo abbati, ejusque fratribus ut suis successoribus in prædicto monasterio commorantibus, ad perpetuam libertatem, et liberum permaneat ipsum monasterium cum omnibus prædiis illi concessis, et cum omnibus rebus ad eum ritè pertinentibus, id est, campis, pratis, pascuis, silvis, venationibus, piscariis, ab omni regali et seculari gravedine majori aut minori, exceptis assiduis orationibus, nisi sola expeditione, et pontis constructione. Et si aliquid pro expeditione aut pro aliquo regali tributo reddatur, detur monasterio.

Quicumque ergo hoc donum vel hanc nostram libertatem augere vel multiplicare voluerit, amplificet Deus bona illius in regione viventium, paceque nostra conglutinata vigens et florens, atque inter agmina beatitudinis tripudia succedat qui nostræ donationis muneri consentiat. Si quis verò tam epilenticus philargyriæ seductus amentia, quod non optamus, hanc nostræ elemosinæ dapsilitatem ausu temerario infringere tentaverit, sit ipse alienatus à consortio sanctæ Dei ecclesiæ, necnon et à participatione sacrosancti corporis et sanguinis Jesu Christi filii Dei per quem totus terrarum orbis ab antiquo humani generis inimico liberatus est, et cum Juda, Christi proditore, sinistra in parte deputatus, nisi priùs hîc digna satisfactione humilis pœnituerit quod contra sanctam Dei ecclesiam rebellis agere præsumpserit, nec in vita hac practica veniam, nec in theorica requiem apostata obtineat ullam, sed æternis baratri incendiis jugiter miserrimus crucietur. Anno Dominicæ incarnationis mxi. indictione secunda, scripta est hujus munificentie singrapha. Hiis testibus consentientibus quorum inferius nomina, secundum uniuscujusque dignitatem utriusque ordinis decusatum, Domino disponente, caraxantur.

Equidem gloriosum est nimiumque laudabile destructas ædes sanctorum locorum ad divinum adminiculum exposcendum reædificare, sacraque altaria venustis velis cum nitore pii cordis velare, et unamquamque nocturnam sive diurnam synaxim innovatis modulis resonare. Quapropter, ego Edwardus Dei gratia Anglorum rex, consilio imbutus bonæ voluntatis quam promissum est mihi,^a juxta quod præcipitur in divinis decretis, cathedram pontificalem consolidare Exoniæ civitatis in monasterio beati Petri apostolorum principis, quod est situm infra mœnia ejusdem urbis, auctoritate superni regis, mea meæque conjugis Eadithæ ac universorum episcoporum ducumque meorum per hoc privilegium testamenti atque cautionem chyrographi in perpetuo tempore constituo et præsulem Leofricum, ut sit ibi pontifex et post illum cæteri affuturi, ad laudem et gloriam sanctæ et individue Trinitatis, Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti, et ad honorem sancti Petri apostoli. Dono etiam omnes possessiones ad eundem locum pertinentes quæcumque sint, tam in ruribus quàm in pascuis, pratis, silvis, aquis, liberis, servis, ancillis, legibus, censu, pagis, Deo sanctoque Petro fratribusque canonicis ibi famulantibus, ut habeant jugiter subsidium ubertim corporis quo valeant Christo militare sine ulla molestia animi. Hoc autem notum Domino in primis Leoni facio, ipsiusque attestatione confirmo, deincepsque cunctis Anglorum magnatibus, quod Cornubiensis diocesis quæ olim in beati Germani memoria atque Petroci veneratione episcopali solio assignata fuerat, ipsam cum omnibus sibi adjacentibus parochiis, terris, villis, opibus, beneficiis, sancto Petro in Exoniensi civitate trado, scilicet ut una sit sedes episcopalis unumque pontificium et una ecclesiastica regula propter paucitatem atque devastationem bonorum et populorum quam piratici Cornubienses et Crutunenses ecclesias devastare poterant, ac per hoc in civitate Exoniæ tutiorem munitionem adversus hostes habere visum est.^b Et ideo ibi sedem esse volo, hoc est in Cornubia cum suis ecclesiis et Devenonia, cum suis simul in uno episcopatu sint et ab uno episcopo regan-

Benedictine Abbey of Ramsey,

IN

HUNTINGDONSHIRE.

RAMSEY Abbey appears to have been founded in the year 969,^a by Ailwine, duke or earl of the East Angles, at the instigation of Oswald archbishop of York. Ednothus, who was sent by Oswald, from Worcester, to prepare the foundation, built offices for the monks, who, four years after, A.D. 972, were removed hither, twelve in number, from Westbury.

In 974, the church was dedicated, by Dunstan archbishop of Canterbury and Oswald, to St. Mary, All Holy Virgins, and St. Benedict. Oswald and Ailwine appear to have lived till 998; in which year the former died on the 2d of the kalends of March, the latter on the 8th of the kalends of May.^b Ailwine, Ethelwine, or Egelwine, the founder, was buried at Ramsey. His monument was nearly perfect till the middle of the last century.^c

A chronological list of the donations to this monastery, from A. D. 969, to A. D. 1056, together with more minute enumerations of the gifts from King Edgar, Archbishop Oswald, and Ailwin, will be found in the Appendix of Instruments, together with a copy of King Edgar's Charter of confirmation.^d Another Charter from King Edward the Confessor, likewise confirmatory of their lands, adds different privileges and immunities, and gives the monks the power not only of choosing their abbats, but establishes the right of sanctuary within the abbey-precinct.^e

The following is a statement of the possessions of Ramsey abbey as recorded in the Domesday Survey.^f In Hertfordshire, the abbey held ten hides and a virgate of land in Furreuuelde. In Cambridgeshire, one hide in Brone, two in Stov, five in Gravelei, nine hides and a virgate in Elesworde, five hides in Chenepewelle, half a hide in Brocheuuorde, three virgates in Draitone, ten hides and three virgates in Ovre, ten hides and a virgate in Bvrewelle, eight hides two virgates and a half in Gretone, in Cetriz, in the two hundreds of Ely, three hides all but a virgate. In Wisbece the abbey had eight fishermen who paid a rent of 5260 eels. In Huntingdonshire, at Stivecle the abbey held seven hides, in Rep-tune ten, in Broctone four, in Wistow nine hides, in ^a Bishop Tanner says, "This is the date according to Ramsey books, which hath several circumstances to support it rather than A. D. 986, according to the Worcester Annals (Angl. Sacr.) though this last agrees better with the bringing monks hither from Westbyri, if Westbury was not filled with monks before 983, as in the same Annals. Westmonast. saith, Ramsey was founded A. D. 968. Bolandus corrects Sim. Dunelmensis for saying, that Ramsey was consecrated Id. Nov. 991; and in Vita S. Oswaldi apud Acta Sanctorum, Feb. 28 vel 29, saith, Ramsey was five years in building, and dedicated 6 id. Nov. A. D. 974." Compare Simeon Dunelm. Script. X. Twysd. col. 162. Hoveden also speaks of 991 as the year of foundation, in the following passage:

"Anno 991. Sanctus Oswaldus archiepiscopus monasterium Ramese, quod ipse, et Dei amicus dux Orientalium Anglorum Ethelwinus construxerant divino adjutus auxilio, et confortatus adminiculo 6 idus Novembris, feria tertia, dedicavit. Anno 992. Sanctus Oswaldus archiepiscopus indictione quinta pridie kalendas Martii feria secunda ante pedes pauperum, ubi mandatum more solito faciebat, transiens ex hac vita, sicut ante prædixerat, regni cælestis gaudia conscendit, et Wigornia in ecclesia sanctæ Mariæ, quam ipse à fundamentis construxerat, requiescit, cui venerabilis Medeshamstundensis abbas Adulfus successit, nec diu post excessum beati patris Oswaldi egregiæ dux memoriæ Athelwini Dei amicus defunctus est, et in Ramesege honorificè sepultus." Rog. de Hoved. Script. post Bedam, edit. 1596. fol. 245 b. The ancient situation of Ramsey is described by Henry of Huntingdon, ibid. fol. 204.

^b Compare Num. I.

^c Mr. Gough says, "The figure of Ailwin, who founded Ramsey abbey, A. D. 969, is one of the oldest genuine sepulchral monuments among us, and almost the only remains of that rich house, where it now lies neglected in a yard. It is habited in a kind of mantle, buskins, and pileus: the right hand holds two keys and a ragged staff, the left lies on the breast: over the top of the Gothic arch over him is a representation of two angels carrying off his soul as it rises from the tomb. Ailwin is styled duke or earl of the East Angles, and alderman of all England. The title of Aldermannus is shewn by Spelman to be synonymous to that of Dux and Comes; and that of Alderman of all England to that of Half-King, which his father Athelstan held on account of his great influence with the king of that name. His epitaph calls him cousin to king Edgar: I suppose because his mother Alswen was that prince's nurse. On his tomb was this epitaph:

"HIC REQUIESCIT AILWINUS INCLITI REGIS EDWINI COGNATUS, TOTIUS ANGLIÆ ALDERMANNUS, ET HUIUS SACRI CŒNOBII MIRACULOSUS FUNDATOR."

"The Cromwells converted the abbey-house into a mansion-house; and this figure was dug out of a pond belonging to it, in the time of Charles II., when Col. Titus owned it. The head was broken off in the frost, 1745." Sepulchr. Mon. vol. p. xcii.

Mr. Maurice Johnson, of Spalding, however, thinks it was one of the monuments made and devised in honour of great men in after times. See Gough, Sep. Mon. ut sup. p. lxxxiv. and in all probability he was right. There seems some reason to believe that it was the work of abbat William de Gomecestre, in the time of Edward the First.

An engraving of Ailwin's monument will be found in Stukeley's Itinerarium Curiosum, Pl. xvii. There is also a drawing of it with a pen, in one of Cole's MSS. now in the British Museum, vol. v. fol. 101, where the figure is said to have been of grey marble.

^d See Numm. II. V. VI. VII. VIII.

^e Num. IX. Malmesbury, in his Account of Edward the Confessor, mentioning royal saints, enumerates some relatives of Egbert king of Kent who were murdered; the remains of whom, in the time of K. Edgar, were removed to Ramsey. Script. post Bedam, edit. 1596, fol. 49. See also fol. 166 b.

Alword, or Ælfword, bishop of London, is noticed by Hoveden as a benefactor of books and ornaments to Ramsey in 1044.

"Anno 1044, Alwordus Lundoniensis præsul, quiet ante episcopatum, et in episcopatu abbatis jure Eoveshamnensi cœnobio præfuit, cum pontificatum administrare pro sua infirmitate minus sufficeret, et Eoveshammi residere voluit, sed fratres illius locis ad id omnino consentire noluerunt. Quapropter ablatis ex magna parte libris, et ornamentis, quæ ipse eidem loco contulerat, et quibusdam ut fertur quæ alii contulerant, ad monasterium Ramesege secessit, et omnia quæ attulit, sancto contulit Benedicto, ibique resedit, et eodem anno octavo cal. Augusti feria quarta defunctus sepelitur ibidem." Hoved. Script. post Bedam, edit. 1596, fol. 252.

^f See Num. XI. One or two farther particulars respecting Ramsey abbey will be noticed under the extracts from Domesday relating to Thorney monastery.

Vpetvne ten, in Haliewelle nine, in Slepe twenty, in Hoctune seven, in Witune seven, half a hide in Bluntesham, ten hides in Wardebosc, seven and a half in Saltrede, ten in Adelintune, two and a half in Lodintune, five hides in Ghellinge, nineteen in Emingeford, in another Emingeforde five, in Upeforde four hides, in Delinctune six, in Redinges one hide, four in Bierne, four in Breninctune, in Westune ten, in Redinges seven, and ten in Elintune. In Bedfordshire, ten hides in Cranfelle, eleven in Bertone, ten in Pechesdone, a virgate and a half in Wiboldestone, five hides in Bereforde, one in Clistone, ten in Sethlindone, three and a half in Holwelle, and half a hide in Standone. In Northamptonshire, a virgate and a half in Hala, half a hide in Luditone, half a hide in Adelintone, two hides and a half in Hemintone, six hides in Bernwelle, three in Wicetone and Dodintone, and a house in Brachefeld belonging to Wicetone with five acres of land. In Lincolnshire, at Corninctvne one carucate and six bovates of land; with half a carucate in Trichingham, and half a carucate of meadow at Cranewelle in Coteland. In Norfolk, two carucates at Hidlingeia, two carucates in Winebotesham, half a carucate in Snora, one carucate in Walsoca, three carucates in Broncestra, two in Rincteda, and half a carucate in Bruneham. In Suffolk, eight carucates in Lawessela. The produce of these different possessions, at the time of taking the Survey, amounted to the annual sum of 328*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.* In King Edward the Confessor's time, the rents of the different manors belonging to the abbey had been almost uniformly higher than in the time of the Conqueror.

King Henry the First's Charters to Ramsey were numerous, as will appear hereafter. His chief grants were those of the manor of Walton,^a the firm of Hirstingstan hundred,^b the fair of St. Ives,^c the liberty or privileged circuit round the monastery,^d and a general Charter of liberties.^e In his time the church of Ramsey was rebuilt: the new work being begun in 1116, and finished in 1123.

Geoffrey de Mandeville, during the wars of Stephen, appears to have done much mischief both to the abbey and its possessions. He expelled the monks, and fortified the monastery as a castle. Henry of Huntingdon states that in a skirmish before the church Geoffrey was the only person killed, being shot with an arrow by one of the meanest of the soldiery. Blood, the historian adds, flowed plentifully from the walls of the church while it was thus held, manifesting the divine wrath.^f This must have been about the year 1144.

King Henry the Second's Charters to the monastery of Ramsey were hardly less numerous than those of Henry the First. They appear chiefly, however, to have consisted in confirmations of particular grants.

Three Charters to this monastery are extant from King Richard I. one of which will be found in the Appendix.^g

King John granted to it no fewer than eight Charters; one of which constituted the market of Ramsey.^h

The Cottonian manuscript Vespasian E. ii. preserves copies of two Charters of liberties from King Henry the Third; one in the ninth, the other in the thirty-seventh year of his reign.

Three Charters of King Edward the First occur in the Cottonian manuscript Otho B. xiv.; with one of the 12th of King Edward the Third, "de catallis felonum exitibus, finibus," &c. Among Peck's manuscripts, also in the British Museum, is a copy of an Inspecimus of the 8th of Edward the Second, A. D. 1315.ⁱ

ABBATS OF RAMSEY.

ÆDNOTH, the first abbat, who had been sent from Westbury in 970, had the name of prior only, till the death of Ailwyn, the founder, in 992.^k He was then chosen abbat regularly, and received the benediction from St. Elphege. In 1008 he was made bishop of Dorchester. He was slain by the Danes in 1016 at Ashdown. The Cotton manuscript Vespasian A. xviii. speaks of two persons of the name of Ednoth, as superiors of this monastery: one, who has been already mentioned in a Note as EDNOTH senior, prior of the monastery; the other, EDNOTH junior, who was the first abbat, and afterwards bishop of Dorchester.^l

WLFIVS or WLSIVS, succeeded to the abbacy in 1008. The Register in the King's Remembrancer's Office in the Exchequer, quoted by Dugdale, represents him to have been slain at the same time with Ednoth. The Cotton Chartulary, of older date, says, "Iste apud Ely interfectus fuit a Danis in tempore Cnutonis."^m Etheric, a monk of Ramsey, who succeeded to the bishoprick of Dorchester, is said at this time to have been a considerable benefactor to the monastery. He caused the remains of St. Felix of Seham to be translated to Ramsey in 1026.

WITHMAN became abbat in 1016. In the fourth year of his abbacy he undertook a pilgrimage to Jerusalem, and, returning the next year, found Ethelstan made abbat. Ethelstan would have resigned to him, but Withman refused to permit the resignation. Withman chose a solitary life at Northeye, where he is said to have lived above twenty-six years.

Duos namque qui, monachis avulsis, ecclesias Dei converterant in castella similiter peccantes, simili pœna multavit. Robertus namque Marmiun vir bellicosus hoc in ecclesia de Coventre perversus exegerat. Porro Gaufridus de Magna Villa (ut diximus) in ecclesia Ramesiensi scelus idempatrat. Insurgens igitur Robertus Marmiun in hostes inter ingentes suorum cuneos coram ipso monasterio solus interfectus est, et excommunicatus morte depascitur æterna. Similiter Gaufridus consul inter acies suorum confertas, à quodam vilissimo pedito solus sa-

Dum autem ecclesia illa pro castello teneretur, ebullivit sanguis e parietibus ecclesiæ et claustris adjacentis indignationem divinam manifestans, sceleratorum exterminationem denuncians. Quod multi quidem, et ego ipse oculis meis inspexi. Quia igitur improbi dicebant Deum dormire, excitatus est Deus, et in hoc signo, et in significato. Eodem quippe anno et Ernulfus filius consulis, qui post mortem patris ecclesiam incastellatam retinebat, captus est, et per hoc exulatus: et princeps militum suorum in hospitio suo ab equo corruens effuso cerebro expiravit: princeps autem peditum suorum Reimerus nomine, cujus officium fuerat ecclesias frangere, vel incendere, dum mare cum uxore sua transiret (ut multi perhibuerunt) navis immobilis facta est. Quod monstrum, nautis stupentibus, sorte data rei causam inquirentibus, sors cecidit super Reimerum: quod cum ille nimirum totis contradiceret nisibus, secundò et tertio sors jactata in eum devenit. Positus igitur in scapha est, et uxor ejus, et pecunia scelestissime acquisita: et statim navis cursu velocissimo, ut prius fecerat, pelagus sulcat. Scapha vero cum nequissimis subita voragine circumducta in æternum absorpta est." Henr. Huntind. Script. post Bedam, edit. 1596, foll. 225, 225 b. See also Hoved. fol. 280.

^l The Exchequer Register says that Ednoth the Second was chosen bishop of Dorchester in the time of Ethelstan, who became abbat in 1020.

ETHELSTAN was made abbat in 1020, and continued till 1043; when he was slain in his church, on the eve of St. Michael, by a servant. The Exchequer Register says, "a quodam Hibernico."

AYLWYNUS, or ALFWINUS, became abbat in 1043; and was abbat thirty-six years.

AILSIUS, or EYLSINUS, was made abbat in 1080. He governed the monastery eight years. He is said to have instituted the feast of the Conception of the Virgin Mary.

HERBERT DE LOSINGA was chosen abbat in 1087; four years after which he became bishop of Thetford. Malmesbury's character of him will be found in the Note below.^a He translated his episcopal see to Norwich in 1095.^b

ALDWIN, or ELDWINUS, was promoted in 1091. He made the assize at Ramsey, and held the abbacy eleven years; when he was deposed, according to the Exchequer Register, by Archbishop Anselm. Malmesbury, and the Cotton manuscript already quoted, say by Lanfranc. Malmesbury adds, for simony.^c

BERNARD, a monk of St. Albans, was made abbat by the king in 1102. His government continued for five years: when, upon his death, ALDWIN was restored. Upon his death, a vacancy ensued of a year; when, in 1114, REGINALD was made abbat. He began to rebuild the abbey church, which, as has been already noticed, was completed in 1123.

WALTER became abbat, upon Reginald's death, in 1133. It was during his abbacy that the monks of Ramsey were expelled by Geoffrey de Mandeville.^d He was abbat twenty-seven years. The Cottonian manuscript Vesp. A. xviii. names

DANIEL as the immediate successor of Walter. "Daniel abbas. Iste supplantavit ipsum Walterum de abbacia sua, et confusus recessit a curia Romana." The Exchequer Register names

WILLIAM as the successor of Walter, in 1161.^e

After he had governed the monastery sixteen years, William was made abbat of Cluni,^f A. D. 1177. Ramsey abbey remained vacant, as to an abbat, for two years.

ROBERT TRIANEL, who had been prior of St. Andrew Northampton, became abbat of Ramsey in 1180, and continued abbat twenty years. In his time, A. D. 1186, Ralph prior of Ramsey became abbat of St. Benet Holm. In 1192, the bones of St. Felix, Ethelred, and Ethelbriht, were placed in shrines at Ramsey.

EUDO, prior of Peterborough, was made abbat of Ramsey, A. D. 1200.^g

ROBERT DE REDINGES, or ROBERT abbat of Reading, as he is called in the Cottonian manuscript, on the death of Eudo, became abbat of Ramsey, A. D. 1202, by the procurement of John de Grey, chancellor of England, and afterwards bishop of Norwich. He continued abbat five years, and then resigned his pastoral staff into the hands of William of Lincoln, and had for his maintenance the manor of Cranfeld. After this, King John kept the abbey in his own hands for seven years, because the monks of Ramsey refused to choose the prior of Fronton for their abbat.

RICHARD abbat of Selby became abbat of Ramsey in 1214, by the procurement of Nicholas bishop of Tusculum, cardinal and legate.

HUGH FOLIOT, prior of Ramsey, became abbat in 1216; in which year, on June 14th, the royal assent was given to his election.^h He received benediction from the bishop of Bath.

RALPH, prior of Ramsey, was chosen abbat in 1231; the royal assent being given to his election July 22d.ⁱ In his time, A. D. 1234, King Henry the Third passed four days at Ramsey. In 1239, he was made one of the king's justices at Norwich.^k

WILLIAM ACOLT had the royal assent to his election Oct. 10, 1253.^l He enjoyed the abbacy but one year. Upon his death, which happened at Brancestre, 16 kal. November, 1254,^m the custody of the abbey

Fuit ergo vir ille magnus in Anglia symoniæ fomes, etiam abbatiā episcopatumque nummis aucupatus, pecunia scilicet regiam sollicitudinem inviscans, et principum favori promissiones non leves assibilians. Veruntamen erroneum impetum juventutis abolevit pœnitentia Romanæ profectus severioribus annis, ubi loci baculum symoniacum et annulum deponens, indulgentia clementissimæ sedis iterum recipere meruit. According to Matthew Paris, in this abbat's time, the church of Ramsey received a fresh dedication. A. D. 1238. "Circa idem tempus, dedicatæ sunt nobiles ecclesiæ conventuales, in diocesi Lincolnensi, in Marisco; videlicet Rameseie, Burg, et Sautereje; a venerabili episcopo Lincolnensi Roberto. ^l Pat. 37 Hen. III. m. 2. A drawing of a fragment of a seal of William abbat of Ramsey, supposed to be abbat Acolt's, occurs in Cole's MSS. vol. xii. p. 232.

^m Mat. Par. edit. 1684, p. 769. It was in the time of this abbat that a dispute began with the king respecting the fair of St. Yve:

A. D. 1252. "Tempore quoque sub eodem, dominus rex, plus quàm decuit, aut expedit, diversis intendens emolumentis, perturbavit possessionem nundinarum de sancto Yvone abbate de Rameseia, consilio Roberti Passeleve: licet eas dictus abbas a tempore cujus non exstat memoria, sine aliqua calumnia pacificè obtinisset. Et quamvis chartas authenticas beati Edwardi, quem rex diligit specialiter, et beati Vlstani abbas memoratus pro jure suo ostendisset, non est rex veritus eas infirmare. Ipsi vero sancti omnes chartarum super liberationibus Ramesiæ (præcipuè tamen de nundinis supradictis) infractores, cum assensu multorum aliorum sanctorum episcoporum, horribiliter excommunicaverunt. Istam nempe pro se cavillationem, rex perverso fretus ostendit consilio, quòd secundum chartas abbatis, obtinendæ forent nundinæ supradictæ usque ad diem sancti Yvonis, non ultra. Item vendicavit rex iter stratæ et fluminis, licet utrumque de antiquo jure quietè obtinisset. De retardatione autem mercatorum confluentium post illam diem, non imputandum foret domino regi, sed eas voluit nundinas et earum emolumenta sine contradictione sibi retinere: quod omnino in præjudicium et jacturam abbatis, videbatur redundare. Et hoc quidem rationi et pietati donatorum consonum non videtur, ut videlicet ipsa ecclesia, dono gauderet umbratili ac mutilato. Sic igitur processum est, ut domus illa nobilis Rameseie jacturam tantam incurrit, ut mallet aliquorum maneriorum suorum subisse jacturam." Mat. Par. ut supr. p. 724.

appears to have been committed to the abbat of Pershore and Henry de Malo Lacu.^a

HUGH DE SULGRAVE, or SOLEGRAVE, was the next abbat, elected, according to the Exchequer Register, in 1254. The royal assent was given to his election Jan. 1st.^b This abbat Hugh began the refectory: he made St. Yvo's shrine, and a silver-gilt table for the high altar: he likewise purchased Gravenhurst, and assigned a pittance for the suppers of the convent. He was also a benefactor in other respects, acquiring different lands and tenements for the monastery. He governed the abbey for thirteen years and a half.

WILLIAM DE GURMECESTRE, or GOMECESTRE, was admitted abbat by the bishop of his diocese on the 5th of the nones of March, 1267.^c The Exchequer Register informs us that he received confirmation from Ottobon the legate. The good deeds of this abbat are chronicled at considerable length in the Cottonian manuscript so often quoted.^d In 1276 the convent entered their new refectory. Abbat Gurmecestre ruled the monastery more than eighteen years. In the 19th year of his abbacy, being struck with the palsy, he resigned his office: when

JOHN DE SAUTRE became abbat A. D. 1285. He went over to Gascony to be approved by the king; and, according to the Exchequer Register, paid, as a fine for the custody of his house during the vacancy, two thousand marks. King Edward is said to have obtained by extortion of him one half of all the revenues of his abbey. In 1309 Queen Isabella passed eighteen days at Ramsey abbey. Abbat Sautre is represented to have endured numerous afflictions and burthens:^e though, in spite of all, he appears to have acquired some little property for his monastery. Out of his acquirements he assigned ten pounds to the convent for hose and shoes. He ruled the monastery thirty years; but was blind during the last six.

SIMON DE EYA, or EYE, received the royal assent to his election on Dec. 9th, and had the temporalities restored Dec. 29th, 1316.^f He received the bishop of

The free possession of the fair, according to the Charters of the monastery, was not recovered, however, for near six years

A. D. 1258. "Eodem anno, per industriam abbatis Radulphi de Ramsey, readepta est ecclesia Rameseia nundinas sancti Yvonis plenarias, quas donatione regis Edgari, et aliorum antiquorum confirmatione obtinuerat. Quas etiam beatus Thomas archiepiscopus et martyr, scriptis suis autenticis roboraverat. Dedit autem idem abbas Robertus pro dictarum nundinarum recuperatione, quingentas marcas argenti, ut dictum est. Has autem nundinas non proprio perdidit ecclesia delicto, sed cavillatione aliena, ut pluribus manifestum est, falsidica." Ibid. p. 834.

Lincoln's confirmation on the 10th of the kalends of January following.^a He purchased land for the monastery in Hauker, and contributed to the new work of the church which he is said to have begun. He ruled twenty-six years.^b He was buried in the new building, on the left of the great altar. Upon his death,

ROBERT DE NASSINGTON was elected: to whom the temporalities of the monastery were restored Jan. 22d, 1342.^c He died in the month of July, 1349,^d according to the Exchequer Register, in the time of the plague. He also was buried in the new building, on the right of the altar.

RICHARD DE SHENYNGDON, or SHENYNGTON, to whom the temporalities were restored Aug. 21st, 1349,^e is stated to have been burthened with his predecessor's debts to the amount of two thousand five hundred marks, beside the ordinary charges at the time of his creation. His death was announced to the king Nov. 11th, 1379; on the 28th of which month the royal assent was given to the election of

EDMUND DE ELYNGTON.^f Of this abbat we have but few particulars. He died Sept. 18th, 1396.^g

THOMAS BUTTURWYK was the next abbat. According to the Exchequer Register, he began his abbacy in 1400: but the entry on the Patent Rolls states the temporalities of the monastery to have been restored to him Nov. 2d, 1396.^h His confirmation by the bishop of Lincoln is also noticed in the Registers of that diocese, as having been given on the eve of St. Simon and St. Jude.ⁱ

JOHN TYCHEMERSH was chosen abbat on the 8th of the kalends of November, 1419. He died on the vigil of the Assumption, 1434. The Exchequer Register says, "Iste fuit nobilis pater, renovavit lapsa, construxit et posuit nova."

JOHN CROYLAND, or CROWLAND, was elected abbat Aug. 27th, 1434. He received the bishop of Lincoln's confirmation October 3d following.^k He died on the 13th of the kalends of April, 1436.

JOHN STOWE was elected on the 4th of the kalends of April in the same year. By his industry, and at his cost, a licence was obtained from King Edward the Fourth, for the purchase of the manor of Le Moyne, with its appurtenances, in Raveley and Sautre. Having governed the monastery thirty-two years, being disabled by age and want of health, he resigned his pastoral staff. He lived three years after; when dying, he was buried before the altar of St. John Baptist, on the north side of the church.

WILLIAM WITLESEY, or WYTTLESEY, then recently made abbat, professed obedience to his diocesan Oct. 19th, 1468.^l He was succeeded in this abbacy by JOHN WARDEBOYS, to whom the temporalities were restored Nov. 5th, 1473.

JOHN HUNTINGTON was elected abbat in 1488. The temporalities of the monastery were restored to him July 20th.^m

HENRY STEWKLEY had the temporalities restored April 16th, 1506.

JOHN WARDEBOYS, alias LAWRENCE, received the temporalities July 14th, 1507. Wood informs us, that in 1519 he supplicated at Oxford for the degree of bachelor of divinity. He continued abbat till the Dissolution, in 1539; when, Willis says, "he was very forward in procuring not only his own abbey to be surrendered to the king's use, but in influencing others to submit."ⁿ In the Cottonian manuscript Cleopatra E. iv. two original letters are preserved from Thomas Bedyll, one of King Henry the Eighth's commissioners, probably to Lord Cromwell, dated 13th and 15th January; which clearly show the abbat and monks to have surrendered their house more readily than many of their neighbours. A third letter follows, from Richard Cromwell to his uncle, reporting his going to Cambridge, Ely, and Ramsey, dated Oct. 15th, probably in the preceding year. The whole of these letters will be read with interest.^o Abbat Lawrence had a pension of 266*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*^p

At the Dissolution, the yearly income of this monastery was rated, according to Dugdale, to 1716*l.* 12*s.* 4*d.*: according to Speed, at 983*l.* 15*s.* 3¼*d.*^q The site (with several of the manors belonging to the monastery) was granted, in the 31st of Hen. VIII. to Sir Richard Williams, alias Cromwell: whose grandson, Sir Henry Cromwell, sold it to Col. Titus.

The abbey stood at the upper end of the town, towards the south, at a little distance from the present church. The only remain of importance now standing is the ruined gateway, a rich specimen of architecture in the florid Gothic style.

The manor-house of Ramsey, according to Willis, was built out of the ruins of the abbey. Mr. Gough says, it rose upon the site of the monks' hall, or abbat's parlour, and dining-room above. In 1782, he adds, a neglected abbatial chair was remaining there.^r

The abbats of Ramsey had a seat in parliament. The head of their barony being Broughton, at some distance to the south; which had annexed to it, in this shire, four knights' fees. Leland says, "Engayne had sumtyme Broughton, the barony in Huntenduneshir, of the abbate of Ramesey."^s

Of the REGISTERS of Ramsey abbey, that which remains in the office of the king's remembrancer in the Exchequer, as far as the earliest period of its history is concerned, is certainly the most curious.^t

The next, in point of importance, is the Chartulary in the Cottonian collection marked Vespasian E. ii. en-

Bishop Tanner mentions a Register of the abbey, belonging, A. D. 1650, to Henry Cromwell, Esq. ^c Leland, in his Collectanea, vol. iv. p. 44, has noticed the titles of a few of the works which he saw in the LIBRARY of Ramsey abbey.

Among the ancient Rolls belonging to the Cottonian collection, there is one, marked II. 16, on five skins, containing an extensive Catalogue of the library,

In the chapter-house at Westminster the following Documents occur respecting Ramsey abbey:

I. A bag, containing divers ancient Charters and Grants to the abbey; amongst which are, 1. A Charter of Hen. I. of a fair and other liberties. 2. A Charter of Hen. I. of lands in Adelungton and Wardeboys, and of the churches of Hotton and Witton. 3. A Charter of Ric. I. of allowances of liberties. 4. Deed of Walter Holbec, of the manor of Walton.

with the names of the different persons by whom the respective manuscripts were given or bequeathed. It is imperfect; but furnishes a substantial proof of the great encouragement which literature received within the walls of the monastery. It was, probably, one of the largest abbatial libraries then existing. The Catalogue seems to have been made about the time of Richard the Second. Among the works enumerated are:

"Hystoria Normannorum et Anglorum."—"Liber Naturarum Aristotelis in uno volumine."—"Liber Physicorum Aristotelis."—"Casus decretalium."—"Compositus et Algorismus."—"Metaphisica et Liber Ethicorum."—"Priscianus constructus."—"Anselmi Opera."—"Seneca."—"Augustinus de Spiritu et Anima."—"Marcianus."—"Duo Donati."—"Boecius de Consolatione."—"Ovidius magnus."—"Oracius."—"Lucanus."—"Grecismus Thomæ de Warewyk."—"Prudencius."—"Terentius."—"Plato."—"Macrobius."—"Remigius super Therencium, et Salustius, in uno volumine."—"Virgilius."—"Itinerarium Clementis."—"Stephanus Cantuariensis super xii. prophetas."—"Sententiæ Petri Lombardi."—"Gesta Britonum."—"De Ortu Pilati."—"Petrus Blesensis."—"Vita Sancti Georgii."—"Prosæ magistri Henrici Versificatoris."—"Bibliotheca Hebraica."—"Martialis."—"Josephus."—"Solinus."—"Orosius."—"Liber Organicus fratris Willielmi de Chilteham."

The ARMS of Ramsey Abbey, given in the initial Letter of the present Account, are those assigned to the convent by Bishop Tanner; Or. on a bend Az. 3 rams' heads coupé Argent: and they agree exactly with those in an illuminated roll of parchment, exhibiting the procession of the lords of parliament to their house in 1512, described in one of Cole's MSS. vol. xxx. p. 9.

In another of Cole's manuscripts, vol. xviii. p. 30, he informs us, that in a window of a gentleman's house, at Over in Cambridgeshire, the patronage of the church of which was formerly in the abbey, the arms of the convent were differently given, viz. Az. three rams passant Arg. He also describes two other coats in the same church of Over, still different, yet certainly designed for the arms of the abbey. One carved in stone, over the west door of the church; on a bend three rams' heads, caboshed. The other, carved on a stall in the chancel of the church, gave three rams' heads, caboshed 2 and 1. See also Cole's MSS. vol. xx. pp. 34, 37. His Notes were made in 1748. From these circumstances, Mr. Cole observes, we may well conclude the great uncertainty and little exactness in matters of this sort; and that the same convent often made use of different Arms; at least the same Device variously disposed.

Peck says, the abbat of Ramsey (though which abbat is not said) set in his Seal a ram in the sea, with this verse about it:

"Cujus signa gero Dux gregis est, ut ego."^a

The chapter-house at Westminster contains two impressions of the abbat of Ramsey's seal: both unfortunately much mutilated. The most ancient is appended to a deed of abbat Hugh, without date, which recites; that abbat Robert de Trianel had acquired the marsh of Winebodesham, and had directed 40s. yearly to be expended out of it, on his anniversary; but as the marsh had failed in its rent, by common consent it was agreed that the said marsh should belong wholly to the chamber of the abbat, and the anniversary be supplied by 40s. from the manor of Repton Abbot. Of this seal nothing more remains than the head and part of the body of an abbat, with his pastoral staff; and of the legend only the first and last words, viz. SIGI . . . ESEIE. The other seal is appendant to a Deed of Robert abbat of Ramsey, dated in 1342, concerning the infirmary of Ramsey: of this the greater part remains, and represents a figure, clothed, apparently a female, but the head of it is wanting. The figure stands within a building; on the left side is a shield; containing the arms of the abbey, viz. on a bend three rams' heads; in a niche under the figure is a king, crowned, and praying.

The CELLS to Ramsey Abbey were, ST. IVES in Huntingdonshire, and MODNEY in Norfolk. Of St. Ives, an account will be given in a subsequent page of the present volume. Of Modney, in the parish of Helgay, near the bank of the river Ouse, in Norfolk, little can be said. The particulars of its first establishment are unknown. Its site was granted, in the 35th of Henry the Eighth, to Robert Hogan.^b

NUM. III.

De Situ Insulæ quæ Ramesia dicitur.

QUUM igitur in orientali angulo territorii Huntingdonensis, quem Usæ fluvii alveus terminus coangustat

mariscorum memorata insula sita est, palustrium insularum juxta quantitatem sui pulcherrima est. Quæ quia apud plerosque sui commendatione jam nititur, stili nostri officio non indiget commendari. Attamen ne adjacentem materiam omninò intactam prætergrediamur, locum illum à parte occidentali, nam aliàs palustria loca humanis gressibus haud pervia longius protenduntur, à tellure solidiori duobus ferè balistæ jactibus interjacentes luteæ salubre^a dirimunt. Qui locus olim segni tantummodò ampne naves serenâ advectas aurâ placido jocundi marginis excipiens gremio, nunc gravi labore et sumptu, lignorum arenæ pariter et lapidum congerie lutosâ obstructa abyso, via publica vel calle solido in eadem parte pedibus aditur. Hæc autem insula duobus fermè millibus in longum extensa, egena latitudine paulò strictior habetur. Quæ tam alneto quidem quàm arundinetum cum virore calami et juncti^b pulchrè in girum coronata, multo antequam inhabitaretur arborum genere, potissimum autem humidanti tota vestiebatur orno. Quæ cujus proceritatis fuerit, et quantitatis, ex trabium et tignorum quorundam ad tectum ecclesiæ exinde assumptorum inspectione poterit quilibet edoceri. Nunc verò longiore temporis tractu nemoribus ex parte demolitis, terra ubere gleba arabilis cernitur et opima, fructibus et frugibus jocunda, hortis consita, pascuis opulenta, nonnullis adhuc arboribus nemorosa, et pratorum gratia verno tempore spectantibus et arridente velut depicta floribus tota insula vario coloratur colore. Ambitur præterea idem locus paludibus anguillois, maris^c latè patentibus et stagnis multimodi generis piscium, et avium natatiliū nutritivis, de quibus maris^d una est Ramesmere de nomine insulæ dicta, quæ cæteras adjacentes aquas pulchritudine et fertilitate superexcellens, ab ea parte qua major insula silva densior habetur, arenosam ipsius horam in loco qui dicitur Mereham pulchre allambens, delectabile videntibus spectaculum præbet. In cujus vastis gurgitibus laxatis tam sageis quam alterius generis retibus, immissis quoque inescatis hamis, cum cæteris artis piscatoriæ instrumentis, admirandæ magnitudinis lutei^e, qui ab incolis Hakedes nuncupantur, per sepe extrahuntur, et tam diebus, quàm noctibus indesinenter ibi laborat aquatiliū industria venatorum. Semper ibi multiplex aquatici generis capitur foetus, semper quod capiatur, habundat. Hæc de situ insulæ et adjacentibus aquis, ad notitiam ignorantium exarata sufficiant, nunc de nominis ratione aliquid breviter subjungamus.

NUM. IV.

De Ethimologia Nominis et triplici Ratione.

[Ibid.]

IGITUR Ramesia congruè satis dici potest à duobus nominibus Anglicis, Ram, quod est aries, et Eye quod insulam sonat, ut inde composito Ramesia, quasi insula arietis nominetur. Siquidem antiqui hujus loci patres junioribus suis, quorum relatione et nos sibi relata didicimus, referre solebant in eadem insula olim postquam^f ab ullo inhabitaretur homine vel domestico animali, arietem inter silvestres feras carpentem germina reperitur. Qui, ut putatur, limosis locis et humantibus aliqua parte insulæ, vel gelu hiemali obduratis, vel æstivi solis longo fortè calore arentibus, relicto alibi grege suo illuc errabundus deveniens, eisdem iterum locis in humorem et mollitiem solitam resolutis, tortis ac recurvis de naturæ artificio cornibus armatus heremita remanere compulsus, sempiternum loco nomen temporalis inhabitator reliquit. Ut autem hoc dictum similium casuum quodam confirmemus exemplo: Augustunum in finibus Burgundiæ nominatissimam urbem, a duobus hædis qui in initio fundandæ civitatis, omnium pecudum domesticarum soli ibi inventi sunt, alio nomine Eduam usque hodiè constat esse nominatam. Possumus et aliter nomen ipsum de autoritate veterum à ramis interpretari, quasi insula ramorum, ob copiam videlicet arborum, quæ, ut supra taxatum est, antiquitus ibi habebatur, sicut restantes adhuc reliquæ testantur. Ex divina autem, ut credimus, providentia, tale loco inditum est nomen, quæ ab exordio nascentis mundi à sanctis viris et religiosis hanc præviderit et præciverit inhabitandam. Et proculdubio de oleastro sterili mundanæ conversationis securi divinæ vocationis abscisi, verè olivæ, et tanquam boni rami socii intimæ pinguedinis effecti, solius gratiæ insitioni adhærentes, diversos virtutum et bonorum actuum fructus velut virentia folia protulerunt. Jam verò, ut interpretationem ipsius nominis aptius ad mysticum intellectum reducamus, congruè dici potest à Ramesse, urbe quondam opulentissima in extremis, ut vult Ysidorus, Juliacæ regionis sita finibus, quam filiis Israel divino monitu ab eisdem locis post diuturnam duræ servitutis calamitatem demigrantibus, primam legimus præbuisse mansionem. Ramesses quoque, commotio vel tonitruum interpretatur. Rectè igitur huic loco hoc congruit nomen, quod demorantes in eo viri sancti psalmodiæ vel lectionis divinæ sonitu quasi terrore tonitruum a malis compescuntur, et cum Ezechiele propheta vocem commotionis magnæ post se frequenter audiunt, dum per exhortationis verbum ad poenitentiam concussi in lacrimas et gemitum plerumque erumpunt. De hujusmodi commotione per prophetam alium dicitur, pedes ejus steterunt et mota est terra. Quia, ut ait Gregorius, cum veritatis vestigia in mente audientium figuntur, ipsa mens in sui consideratione turbata commovetur. Congruè ergo Ramesia commotio vel tonitruum dicitur, quandoquidem peccatores quilibet in ea ad servitium Dei, de subdolè blandienti et malè pacato mundi amores conversi, ex contritione commoti et contriti sua acta condempnantes, in mœrore poenitentiae salubriter perturbantur. Hæc triplici jam ratione de ipsius ethimologia nominis breviter perstrinximus. Si quid rectius super hoc aut utilius dici potest, tuo, ô lector, arbitrio relinquentes, dummodò omnimodis tuæ constet prudentiæ, honestum esse de incertis honesta æstimare, et in re ambigua, de qua nulla invenitur auctoritas majorum, in meliorem semper partem deflecti debere æstimationem.

Itemque idem rex, ad petitionem ejusdem sancti pontificis, et devotionis suæ memoriale æternum, dedit ecclesiæ Ramesiensi et fratribus ibidem Deo servantibus, et per successiva tempora servituris, ecclesiam de Guthmuncester, cum tribus hidis terræ, et regalis munificentiae donum scripto quod hodiè apud nos habetur, confirmavit. Qualiter autem hæc ecclesia cum memorata ruris portione à nobis alienata sit, in sequentibus nosse cupienti curabimus indicare. DEINDE vir domini Oswoldus, calliditatis et malitiæ, quam hac nostra ætate contra simplicitatem veterum, et fidem turgescere videmus, præsciis et judex, missis nuntiis ad Johannem papam qui tunc temporis Romani pontificatus arcem tenebat, privilegium suum in libertatem et munimentum ecclesiæ noviter construc-tæ et dedicatæ adquisivit; ne successoribus suis calumpniandi occasio arrideret, nihil de episcopi jure, sed quæ familiaris loculi emunctione in jus suum transierant nevo exposita,^a seu quæ legitima cambitione fuerant adquisita, hæc sola ecclesiis quarum vel fundator extiterat vel patronus, liberius et quietius possidenda conferre studuit et confirmare. Emerat igitur à rege Ædgaro villam quæ Nidingworth dicitur, competentis pretii mutatione, multis scilicet et pretiosis reliquiis, quæ in duabus crucibus de sexies viginti marcarum auri pondere fabricatis continebantur. Pro qua itidem villam de Wy-stowe, quia ecclesiæ Ramesiensi viciniore accessu magis competens erat et recessu, à memorato rege in escambium accepit, acceptam Deo, et sancto Benedicto in perpetuam solempniter tradidit hæreditatem. Provida autem antecessorum nostrorum sagacitas suspecta prudenter præcavens pericula, prædictam villam de Nidingworth pro commutatione memoratæ ecclesiæ, et trium hidarum de Gumecester ecclesiæ Ramesiensi in funicularem hæreditatis perpetuæ sortem redemit; sicque quemadmodum superius promissimus referendum, eadem ecclesia et terra in alienæ jus potestatis usque hodie concessit. Dedit præterea vir sanctissimus O. v. hidas apud Burwell, alias ab illis quas piissimum regem Ædgarum superius retulimus nobis contulisse. Hæc est illa terra quam, sicut in vetustissimis sceculis Anglicè scriptum reperimus, vir quidam, Edwynus nomine, filius Othulfi, venerabili antea concesserat archiepiscopo Odoni, pro mercede sollicitudinis et laboris quo regem Ædredum ad consensum inflexerat, ut ei liceret filiam cujusdam viri Ulfi quam concupiverat maritali sibi fœdere copulare. Hanc autem donationem cum presbiter quidam Æthelstanus, prædicti archipræsulis Odonis germanus, inficiari conatus, ejusdem terræ medietatem suo juri legitimè competere allegasset, pacificus Christi vernula Aylwynus alderium,^b facultatum suarum dispendio, semper Ramesiensis ecclesiæ obvians detrimento, datis ei in mutuam commutationem pro eodem agello octoginta marcis auri, sub testimonio regis Ædgari, et Dunstani archipræsulis, et Alferi et Oslaki comitum, omnem calumpniæ viam obstruxit, et jam dicto viro posterisque ejus perpetuum, ut putabatur, super hoc silentium induxit. Postea verò, quia rebus humanis nil solidum, nil diu quietum, piissimo rege Ædgaro vita præsentem exempto, quidam Wynsigus à præfato Othulfo longam consanguinitatis lineam trahens, ex sola successionis hæreditariæ fiducia, sine ulla auctoritate judiciali memoratas quinque hidas sibi vendicavit, mansumque suum in eis constituit, unde vir illustris Ailwinus, nobilis animi indignationem nobilis iræ stimulis urgens, tantæ temeritatis præsumptionem ferro vindice ulcisci spiravit, et profectò conceptum tumentis pectoris opus explesset, nisi cujusdam fratrum Ramesiensium, Ædnothi nomine, prudens et provida discretio obstitisset, qui cum homicidium in dampnum ecclesiæ Ramesiensis factiosa contrariæ partis criminatione redundare posse manifesta affirmaret ratione, pacatum prudentis viri animum à proposito revocavit. Deinde, communicato idem frater Ædnothus salubriori consilio, majores et prudentiores de comitatu Cantebrigie convocavit, quorum opera et industria ad hoc memoratum Wynsigum induxit, ut quandam terram de Delsingetune in mutuam jam dictæ terræ de Burwell cambitionem gratanter acciperet, sicque eadem terra in jus Ramesiensis ecclesiæ rediit, ab omni tam ipsius Wynsigi, quam totius posteritatis suæ calumpnia soluta penitus et quietata. Cujus laboris proventu, quidam vir, Alfgarus nomine, aldermanni familiaris et à secretis, congratulans, prædictæ terræ ab omni reclamatione jam liberæ, domos suas et curiam, tres quoque hidas cum xl. acris et unam præterea virgatam, et ecclesiam de Burwell, cujus fuit advocatus, pro sua prædecessorumque suorum animabus, mera liberalitate adjecit. Quædam quoque matrona, Æthelgiva nomine, aliorum provocata devotione et exemplo, dedit Deo et sancto Benedicto Ramesiæ, in eadem villa lx. acras, et unam virgatam terræ quæ fuerat Guthredi, et octo hidas apud Erninge. Fratres quoque Ramesienses favorem domini, cum gratia sancti patris arridere cernentes, plurimas ibidem terras tam in campo arabili quam in villæ mansis multotiens pretio comparaverunt. Sæpeditus etiam Wynsigus, læsam præcedentis temeritate facti Dei et ecclesiæ Ramesiensis gratiam plenius sibi gestiens referre, sub testimonio aldermanni et uxoris suæ, et filiorum, dedit dimidiam hidam in Stivecle. Cujus occasione doni fratres Ramesienses postea, dato cuidam filio ejusdem Wynsigi competenti pretio, aliam hidam integram in eadem villa justo emptionis titulo possederunt.

[Ibid.]

Hæc verò sunt quæ piæ recordationis dux Ailwinus, tanquam pater filiæ maritatæ, dedit ecclesiæ Ramesiensi in jus patrimoniale perpetuò possidenda. Primò scilicet insulam ipsam ubi xenodochium constructum est, cum adjacentibus mariscis et stagnis. Deinde terram de Upwode quam à rege Ædgaro regalis munificentiae largitate, cum vicinorum gurgitum piscariis ad eam pertinentibus fuerat assecutus. Ibi tamen aulam suam et curiam tanti viri nobilitati in vita sua habuerit congruentem. Quia enim locus et nemoribus consitus, et mariscorum paludibus erat vicinus, frequenter ibi in venatu et aucupatione vel aucupio spatians morabatur. Dederat ei præterea idem rex Raffeam illam quæ propinquior prædictæ uillæ de Upwode adhæret, quam ipse inde Deo et sancto Benedicto cum dominio et debito hominum servitio, in perpetuam hæreditatem concessit. Dedit etiam totum quod juri suo in Saltretha competeat. Nam pater Æthelfledæ uxoris suæ cum adhuc viveret, et quandam ejus ruris portionem legitimo patrimonii jure possideret, dedit eam cuidam viro, Æthelstano nomine, aldermanno, in mutuam alterius cujusdam terræ quæ ei erat acceptior permutationem. Postea verò eadem Athelfleda, patre suo prædicto et eodem Æthelstano alea fatali delusis, super terra memorata calumpniam instruens, ordine judiciario eam in hæreditariæ sortis suæ jus revocavit, revocatam deinceps Deo et sancto Benedicto Ramesiæ cum funere corporis sui conferens, in redemptionem peccatorum suorum, et pretium sepulturæ. Idem præterea verus Israelita, Ailwinus, terram de Helvigeye quæ undique aquis accincta est, et profunda uligine mariscorum, dedit Ramesiæ cum Snores, berewico suo, quod foris insulam habetur, et molendino adjacente; medietatem quoque piscariæ ejusdem loci dedit ecclesiæ, alteram verò partem filiis suis. Dedit etiam v. hidas apud Walsokne et dimidium piscariæ suæ quæ eum in Wella continebat. Postea verò terminum vitæ positurus, alteram medietatem reliquæ adjiciens portioni, totam simul piscariam Ramesiensi ecclesiæ contulit cum mansis et toftis piscatorum. Terram quoque de Brininton, quæ post patris sui obitum, et x. hidas quæ post decessum matris in hæreditariam sibi sortem ceciderunt, dedit Ramesiæ pro sua et utriusque parentis salute.

Hæc est illa terra de Weston, quam sicut supra in prima hujus opusculi distinctione retulimus, rex Ædgarus dederat eidem Alfwen matri comitis, pro ea quam sibi in cunabilis impenderat sedulitate nutrituræ. Dedit etiam idem vir Deo devotus Alwinus x. hidas apud Giddinge et Wedeton, quas sub regis et optimatum testimonio, appenso cuidam viro Othingaro non modici æris pretio, justo possederat titulo emptionis. Nec in hiis quoque fervori devotionis suæ terminum ponens, dedit septem hidas apud Stivecle, et quandam partem decem hidarum quas habuit apud Tofte, pro anima jam dictæ Athelfledæ uxoris suæ: pro alia verò illarum hidarum parte, ut integrè omnes cederent ecclesiæ Ramesiensi in possessionem, à fratribus ejusdem loci accepit in escambium terram quandam de Lincolniam quam vir quidam, Wlfhunus nomine, in liberam eis contulerat elemosinam quandò seculo renunciens collegio eorum sociatus est. Porro terram de Aceia prædictis donationibus suis vir fidelis adjecit, quam quidam presbiter, Kinemundus nomine, vivendi finem faciens, multis testibus ei in testamento reliquit. Dedit et sex hidas in Wammeford, quas postea fratres Ramesienses per posterorum calumpniam ablatas numerata pecunia redemerunt; pratum præterea apud Hoctun, et molendinum quod à quodam cognato suo Sirico, dato ei non modico probatæ monetæ pretio, comparaverat, eidem ecclesiæ in jus perseverabile concessit. Terram quoque de Hemmingford, quæ oppido Huntingdoniæ ex opposita parte fluminis vicinior, eidem ecclesiæ in fidei suæ et devotionis monumentum contulit sempiternum; hanc autem terram quæ accessu propiore sibi erat acceptior, in publicam et legitimam acceperat permutationem à sancto Athelwino, Wyntoniensi episcopo pro terra de Hathfeld, multis à præfato episcopo precibus sollicitatus, xxx. scilicet hidas pro xl. fertilitatis fortè vel vicinitatis gratiâ, pluris reputans pauciores.

Charta Foundationis Monasterii de Ramsey in Comitatu Huntingdon.

[Ibid. fol. 136 a. It. Cart. 8 E. III. n. 293. vide etiam Cart. 2 H. V. parte 2, m. 18.]

REGE regum, et Domino dominantium, in æternum et ultra omnipotente ubique regnante, et ineffabili sua clementia universa cœlestium, et terrestrium, ac infernorum agmina gubernante. Ego Edgarus, per magnam ipsius Dei misericordiam, totius Anglorum regni solio sublimatus, omnibus post me futuris regibus, archiepiscopis, episcopis, abbatibus, comitibus, vicecomitibus, centenariis, cæterisque sanctæ ecclesiæ filiis innotesco: quod quidam vir dilectissimus mihi necnon et propinquitatis consanguinitate connexus, Alwynus Aldreman nomine, instigante divina clementia, cum benevolo meo assensu, ac licentia, in insula quæ nuncupativo usu ab incolentibus Ramseya promulgatur, in honorem beatæ Dei genitricis, ac perpetuæ Virginis Mariæ, sanctique Benedicti, omniumque sanctarum virginum, arcisterium construxit, prævidens itaque incertum futurorum temporum statum, omnibus posteris meis scire pro futuro decrevi, quale Omnipotentis gratia operante, ibidem miraculum emicuit; sicut non incerta relatione quorundam episcoporum meorum, imò et ipsius Aylwini didici.

Igitur diuturno ac laborioso cruciatu podagræ pedum suorum prædictus illustris vir Aylwinus multis laborans annis, usque quo vox affuit salutifera, in qua piscator quidam ipsius, qui Wlfget vocabatur, cum carinula, et asseclis suis, et lino aquam, quæ Anglico nomine Rammesmere dicitur, ingressus est, piscem videlicet gratia ad usum domini sui prædicti usu consueto acquirendi. Sicut itaque noverat velle dominum suum, rete suum sedulo huc, et illuc projiciendo, aliquid capere nitebatur, sed ex prædestinatione Dei omnipotentis frustra laborans, et tandem piscario labore nimium fagittatus, in carinula sua soporatus obdormivit, cui sanctus in somnis apparuit sic fando Benedictus: 'Aurora spargente polum, tuum ejiciens tragus multitudini copiosæ voti compos obviabis piscium; captorum itaque piscium majorem, quem vos Haked nuncupatis, Aylwino domino tuo ex mea parte offerens, dices ei, ut meam donationem benignè assumens piæ matri misericordiæ, et mihi, omnibusque sacris virginibus in hac insula monasterium, monachorum habitationi, cum officinis necessariis congruum sine dilatione studeat fabricare: ut ei igitur hæc omnia per ordinem innotescas exhortor, sermonem addens sermoni, quatenus scrutetur diligentius in loco prædicto, quomodo noctu fessa terræ sua incumbant animalia, ac ubi taurum surgentem pede dextro viderit percutere terram, ibidem proculdubio xenodochii sciat se aram erigere debere. Et ut mente perspicaciori, et fide constantiori, meis his credat mandatis; hunc tuum tibi exteriorem incurvo digitum, quem et ipse, mox a nexu podagræ solutus, et signi certioris judicio roboratus, tibi erigat reparandum.'

Prædictus igitur piscatorum didasculus hiis auditis evigilans, lucisque diei spiculum in oriente conspiciens, in aquam, sicut sibi jussum fuerat, tragus suum laxare cœpit, et sicut sanctus pater prædixerat, copiosam multitudinem piscium conclusit, quorum majorem eligens ea parte sancti Benedicti eum domino suo obtulit, eique omnia quæ in somnis didicerat, revelavit; digitumque suum a sancto incurvatum, ut erigat obnixè rogavit, quæ omnia mente sagaci concipiens Aylwinus, digitum viri hærentem erexit, piscemque suscipiens, matri Domini Jesu Christi, et sancto Benedicto grates innumeras benedicendo exsolvit, surgensque vir insignis festivus jubet mannum præparari, et in insulam ipsam vadens, quomodo jacent sua animalia, ut præceptum erat, explorat. Mira res, et miranda, ubi vir prædictus insulam est ingressus, ab intractabili statim, et gemino morbo, nutu Dei, funditus liberatus est, animaliaque sua in modum crucis, taurum verò in medio eorum jacere prospexit. Et sicut quondam sancto Clementi agnus pede dextro locum fontis; sic viro isti taurus terram pede percutiendo locum mensæ futuri arcisterii significavit divinitus. Unde vir præfatus Deum laudans, confestim truncatis lignis excitari capellam ibi pulchro opere præcepit, ac deinde scemate condecienti, sicut mandatum sibi fuerat, regulare futuræ congregationi monachorum construxit cœnobium. Deinde revoluto quinquennio, diebusque duodeviginti, precibus venerabilium amicorum meorum Dunstani, Dorobornensis, et Oswaldi, Eboracensis archiepiscoporum, eandem ecclesiam in honorem beatæ Virginis Mariæ, sanctorumque prædictorum, sexto idus Novembris, anno ab incarnatione Domini nongentesimo septuagesimo quarto, indictione secunda, solemniter, ut decebat, dedicari concessi.

Eodem verò anno, cum in natali Dominico omnes majores totius regni mei, tam ecclesiasticæ personæ quam seculares, ad curiam meam celebrandæ mecum festivitatis gratia convenissent: à prædictis amicissimis meis archiepiscopis itidem rogatus, omnes donationes terrarum, vel possessionum, quas vel idem Aylwinus, vel quæcunque aliæ personæ, in dotalitium ejusdem ecclesiæ, et jus hæreditatis perseverabile, ad victuale subsidium monachorum Christo jugiter ibi famulantium indulserant, dando, et concedendo hoc regiæ majestatis meæ privilegio, coram tota curia mea corroboravi, et tam ipsas donationes quam nomina donatorum, literis meis ad futuræ posteritatis notitiam exprimere curavi, hoc est, primitus dona ipsius aldremanni, scilicet insulam, in qua sedet xenodochium prædictum, cum omnibus sibi pertinentibus pratis, pascuis, campis, paludibus, silvarumque densitatibus. Deinde rus illud, quod Upwode nominatur, cum Raveleya berewico suo, Hemmingford, Saltreiam, Stivecleiam, Brinton, Weston, Hebugeh, Walsocnam, cum omnibus ad easdem villas pertinentibus; in Welles quoque viginti homines piscatores, sexaginta millia anguillarum singulis annis debentes ad usum fratrum prædictorum; Wulfina uxor ejusdem aldremanni, Brancester, cum omnibus ad eam pertinentibus; Dunstanus, archiepiscopus Dorobornensis, Wardebule cum omnibus sibi pertinentibus; Oswaldus, archiepiscopus Eboracensis, Kingeston, id est, Wistow, cum Ravell, et Biri berewicis suis ac omnibus sibi pertinentibus; Athelstan Mannessune, Slepam, et Chateriz, et de Elsworth partem orientalem cum omnibus sibi pertinentibus; Brithnot aldremannus, Wythenton, et Ysham cum omnibus sibi pertinentibus; Aylfwoldus frater Aylwyni præscripti, Honaon, ^a Witton, Riptonam, Clinton, et Withernam, cum omnibus sibi pertinentibus; Hinith vidua, Gravel, Belington, Stocton, et Gillinger, cum omnibus sibi pertinentibus.

Hæc itaque rura, ut supradixi, pro adipiscenda dulcedinis divinæ misericordia, et pro stabilitate regni mei, libenti animo in dote perseverabili annui, cum ecclesiis, cum terris cultis, et incultis, exitibus, redditibus, viis, inviis, segetibus, silvis, brueriis, secundum antiquos diu servatos confinium terminos, in pratis, pascuis, aquis, aquarumque decursibus, paludibus, piscariis, mariscis, molendinis, et theloneis, ad se pertinentibus, et cum omni utilitate, quæ inde poterit omni tempore evenire, et cum omnibus per circuitum terminis, et metis suis, ab regia actione, et angaria, vel à qualibet humanæ servitutis subjectione, liberrima, lege, libertate, consuetudine, tam benè, et tam plenè, sicut ea sub mei juris dominio, suffragatore Deo, meliùs, et liberiùs prænominati nobilissimi possiderunt viri, favore et consensu primatum et optimatum meorum, prænominatæ ecclesiæ firmiter perpetuò habenda concessi et confirmavi.

Ut igitur hoc donationis meæ decretum fixiori firmitate, et stabilitate perduret, præsentis paginæ privilegio decerno, et statuo, ut sint libera, et expedita, tam prædicta territoria ibidem jam data, quàm ea quæ à fidelibus deinceps sunt danda, ab omni angaria constructionis pontis, arcisve restorationis, et ab omnibus secularibus servitiis, et operibus: ita quod nullus unquam regum, vel episcoporum seu principum, procuratorum, sive exactorum, ab illis pastum, nec opera, vel tributa exigat; sed omnia sint libera omnino, et quietia, quæcunque superiùs prænotantur. Præterea ex consulto, et admonitione venerabilium amicorum meorum, Dunstani, Dorobornensis, et Oswaldi, Eboracensis archiepiscoporum, decreta utilia statui, ut quicumque majestatis regiæ reus, vel cujuslibet alterius offensæ, ad locum illum confugerit, ejus rei, et membrorum, ac vitæ impunitatem consequatur: semperque sit habitatio monachorum, ac secundum beati Benedicti traditionem, post obitum abbatis, ex eadem congregatione alter, qui dignus sit, eligatur: aliunde verò nullus ibi præficiatur, nisi nullum, quod absit, ibi contigerit, qui dignus tali officio sit, inveniri; quod si contigerit, potestatem habeant de alio noto monasterio abbatem eligendi, cujus vita sapientia et religione clarescat: laicorum autem, aut clericorum nemo loci illius dominium usurpare præsumat. Possessiones verò, quæ ibi à quibuscunque donatæ sunt, non abbas, non alia quælibet persona licentiam habeat vendendi extraneis, vel dandi, sed regum munimine locus ille semper tueatur, ipseque abbas regi Deo soli serviens, spirituali et temporali commissum sibi gregem pastu diligenter foveat: liceatque ipsi congregationi quod sibi per rectam delegationem collatum est, perpetuò possidere, et pro me, et pro stabilitate regni mei Deum jugiter exorare. Post hujus itaque privilegii mei donationem, excommunicaverunt omnes episcopi, abbates, presbyteri, qui in plurima numerositate eodem die affuerunt, eos qui hoc constitutum infringerent, vel infringi permetterent, quantum in ipsis essent.

Et ut hæc auctoritas meis, et futurorum post me regum temporibus, circa ipsum sanctum locum firma perenniter permaneat, et inviolata, et ut ab omnibus optimatibus meis, et iudicibus privatis, et publicis meliùs et certiùs credatur; manus meæ subscriptione, hanc chartulam quinto kalend. Confirmatio Foundationis Monasterii de Ramsey per S. Edwardum, Confessorem dictum.

[Ibid.]

IN onomate summi Kyrios omnia jura regnorum gubernantis, et ab alto cœli fastigio cuncta cernentis, ego Edowardus, totius Albionis, Dei moderamine, gubernatione basileus, archiepiscopis, episcopis, abbatibus, centenariis, cunctisque sanctæ fidelibus ecclesiæ clericis, et laicis, insuper et omnibus post me futuris regibus salutem, perpetuamque pacis fœlicitatem. Præterea in perpetuum confirmo, ut monachi ejusdem ecclesiæ per successiones secundum regulam sancti Benedicti eligere sibi idoneos abbates habeant potestatem; et quisquis fugitivorum de quocunque loco, pro quacunque causa, cujuscunque conditionis sit, ipsum sanctum locum, vel procinctum ejus intraverit, fugiens; membrorum suorum, ac vitæ impunitatem consequatur. Possessiones verò, quæ ibi à quibuscunque donatæ sunt, non abbas, non alia quælibet persona licentiam habeat vendendi, vel extraneis dandi: sed regum munimine deinceps locus ipse tueatur; ipseque abbas regi soli serviens, atque ei soli os ad os respondens, commissum sibi gregem spirituali et temporali pastu abundanter foveat. Concedo, et confirmo omnes donationes terrarum vel libertatum, aut aliarum rerum, quæ à regibus, Edgardo videlicet, et Hardeknut, seu aliis fidelibus ante me donatæ sunt; hoc est, Upwode, cum Raveleya, berewico suo et cum insula, in qua prædictum stat arcisterium, cum omnibus sibi pertinentibus; Hemingeford, cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus; Walsoke, cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus; Sautrey, cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus; Hellingh, cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus; in Welles viginti piscatores ibidem singulis annis ad usum fratrum lx. m. anguillarum reddentes; Brances-trei, cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus, et cum omni maris projectu, quod nos Anglicè Shipwrec appellamus; Ripton, cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus; Tinell, cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus; Kingeston cum Rafflea, et Byri berewicis suis, omnibusque sibi pertinentibus; Wardebult, cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus; Scepton, cum omnibus pertinentiis suis; Chaterih, cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus, et unam mansionem orientalem de Elesworth, cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus; Houcton, cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus; Witton, cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus; Eliuton, cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus; Bitherum, cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus; Briumton, cum omnibus ad se pertinen-

Relaxamus igitur istis, et omnibus supra nominatis terris, consuetudines omnes, et exactiones regalium, et episcopalium ministrorum, sicut antecessores mei reges primò fecerunt, ut nullis graventur oneribus expeditionum, nec pontium, nec castrorum restructione, nec furis apprehensione, et emissionem, nec sanguinis effusione, et omnia quæ ad locum ipsum pertinent sint omnino libera; cellæ, ecclesiæ, cœmeteria, terræ, pascua, silvæ, venationes, aquæ, piscationes, cum redditibus, servitiis, debitis, oblationibus, luminaribus, decimis, donariis, censu morthidis, legibus, consuetudinibus, causarum discussionibus, emendationibus, sive ecclesiasticis, sive secularibus, et cum omnibus quæcunque maris procellosis tempestatibus in aquam vel in terram eorum ejecta fuerint, quod Anglicè Shipwrec promulgatum est onomate, et omnibus, quæcunque scriptis, et testimonio bonorum hominum rememorari potuerint, quæ à regibus concessa vel concedenda sunt; et nullus ex iis subtrahere vel diminuire, aut dispergere qualibet occasione, judicio, vel potestate præsumat.

Renovamus etiam, et confirmamus privilegia antiquorum regum, atque ob reverentiam Domine nostræ perpetuæ virginis Mariæ, sanctique Benedicti, sanctorumque virginum, omnibusque futuris ibidem abbatibus in tota possessione monasterii, sacham et socham, theloneumque suum in terra, et in aqua concedo, et consuetudines, ut ob omnibus apertius, et plenius intelligantur, Anglicè scriptas, scilicet, mundbriche, feardwite, fitwite, blode-wite, miskeninge, frithsoke, hamsocne, forstall, forphange, thiefphang, haugwite, frithbriche, utlep, infongenthef, sypbriche, tol, et tem, aliasque omnes leges et consuetudines quæ ad me pertinent, tam plenè, et tam liberè, sicut eas in manu mea habebam.

Et, ut omnia concludam, nullus succedentium regum, episcoporum, principum, comitum, vicecomitum, procuratorum, seu aliorum regum clientium, vel alia quælibet magna, vel parva persona, per vim, aut per consuetudinem, pastum, censum, vel impensionem, non opera, non tributa, xenia seu munuscula, vel aliud quidlibet ab eorum possessionibus exigat: sed omnimodam libertatem perpetualiter in terra, et in aqua, in urbe et extra, in domo et extra, in villa et extra, in via et extra, in placito, in soco et saca, in theloneo, et in omnibus suis appendiciis habeant. Quisquis igitur fidelium hanc nostram munificentiam amplificare propriis donis sategerit, augmentet illi omnipotens Deus gaudium perenne ubi perpetuitas viget. Si quis verò, quod absit, eam destruere voluerit, vel hujus nostri decreti contradictor, convulsor, et temerator extiterit, perpetuo anathemati subiaceat, nisi Deo, et ejus gloriosæ matri digna poenitentia satisfecerit.

‘Henricus rex Angliæ, episcopo Eliensi et baronibus et justiciariis et vicecomitibus et omnibus fidelibus suis Francis et Anglis de Grantebricscira salutem. Sciatis quoniam Bernardus abbas de Rameseia dirationavit in curia sua apud sanctum Yvonem, coram justitia mea quam illuc miseram, terram de Stowa et Gristona versus Paganum Pevrellum, quam ipse Paganus clamabat tenere de ecclesia de Ramesey, et recognitum ibi fuit quod nullum jus in terra illa reclamare poterat, sed remansit terra illa ecclesiæ de Ramseia et abbati solida et quietata de tota calumnia Pagani et successorum suorum, et hoc dirationamentum warantizo et per cartam meam confirmo, et ideo volo et præcipio quod ecclesia de Rameseia et abbas eam amodò in pace et quietè et liberè teneant, sicut dominium ecclesiæ ejusdem, ita ne ulterius ei inde respondeat, nec alicui de successoribus suis nec alteri qui per illum clamet. Testibus R. episcopo de Sarum et Pagano filio Johannis et Willielmo de Hoctona apud Westmonasterium.’

Inspeximus insuper quandam aliam cartam ejusdem progenitoris nostri in hæc verba. ‘Henricus rex Angliæ, Roberto episcopo Lincolniensi, et Aldvino abbati de Rameseia, et toti conventui monachorum, et Hugoni de Bochland, et omnibus fidelibus suis Francis et Anglis de Bedefortscira et de Hertfordscira salutem. NUM. XXXVII.

[Ex Cod. MS. olim penes Johannem Murray, hodie MS. Harl. 5071. Edidit cl. Tho. Hearne ad calcem Sprotti Historiæ, p. 171.]

IN exordio fundacionis ecclesiæ Burgi tempore regis Peadæ, fundatoris ejusdem, erat primus abbas nomine Saxulphus, ex multitudine fratrum ad Dei servicium in eadem ecclesia electus. Deinde post mortem Peadæ regis, ad exemplum fratris sui rex Wulferus regia largitate terras concessit, et sua auctoritate subnotavit fines possessionum certos in longitudine, sicut in carta ejusdem regis plenius continetur.

Item quod pater Saxulphus, habens monachos anachoriticæ conversacionis amatores, suggessit regi cum eisdem fratribus, velle se quidem, Dei nutu et ipsius assensu, monasterium in ipsa subjacente heremo cum heremiticis cellulis construere in loco qui jam nomen acceperat Ancarig, quod posteris temporibus Thoryng vocabatur, quibus idem rex, augmentum religionis divinæ anelans, libentissime annuebat, quod prius collata et perpetuata ad usus converterent præordinatos juxta laudabilem voluntatem et discrecionem ejusdem. Quibus, ut præmittitur, ecclesiis fundatis in locis de Medehamstede et Ancarig, post temporum curricula per divini ordinis contemptores utraque ecclesia destructionem patiebatur et ruinam. Postque dicto cænobio de Medehamstede tam regaliter prius constructo, per sanctum Athelwoldum in antiquo statu gloriosissime restaurato, reparavit idem episcopus ecclesiam in Amaryng^a modo Thorneye, quam quondam Saxulphus primus abbas et constitutor Medehamstede fundaverat et construerat,^b qui locus propter spineta circumquaque succressentia^c Thoryng Anglico vocabulo nuncupatur, qui antea melius Ancaryg vocabatur, id est, insula inclusorum vel solitariorum. Non enim venit illuc nisi navigio ex una parte, ita palude conclusa est. Idemque episcopus abbatem Godmannum præponens monasterium illud bonorum possessionibus gratanter ditavit. Succedente itaque janua abbaciæ de Thorneye ordinata fuit in villa de Staneground in comitatu Huntingdoniensi, tanquam loco competenciori, ex parte occidentali ejusdem abbaciæ. In quo tam familiares quam extranei apud Thorneye accedere volentes recipiebantur, ac inibi eis subministrabantur necessaria tam in veniendo quam in redeundo, quorum eciam tenentes ex antiqua institucione onerantur ad ducendum et reducendum navigio quoscunque fluentes ab abbacia de Thorneye in comitatu Cantebrigiensi. Et sciendum, quod præfati religiosi de Thorneye nec sui liberum aumagium apud Burgum in aqua de Nen, nec apud Fletton, nec eciam liberum transsitum^d in passagio de Burgo unquam habuerunt ante concessionem specialem religiosorum de Burgo. Et sic apparet, quod metas terrarum suarum transgredi non valebant religiosi de Thorneye religionis de Burgo invitis, quorum dominia per cursum aquæ de Nen à Burgo usque ad Croylond à dominiis religiosorum de Thorneye noscuntur fuisse distincta. Apparet eciam ex supradictis, quod non licuit religionis de Thorneye à manerio suo de Saneground,^e distanti à villa de Burgo per dimidiam leucam, liberum habere transsitum in passagio Burgi versus partes comitatus Northamptonensis absque speciali concessione religiosorum de Burgo. Multo forcius non licuit eis apud molendinum de Thorneye, ventriculum novissimis temporibus dictum, ultra aquam de Nen, prata separalia et dominicas terras religiosorum de Burgo, transsitum habere liberum versus partes Burgi in comitatu Northamptoniensi distantis à dicto molendino fere per tres leucas. Verum eciam quod, cressente^f hominum malicia per studiosas adinvenciones, non nulli ecclesiæ de Thorneye abbates, eorum exonerationem, quæ in manerio eorum de Staneground ex frequenti hominum accessu imminebat, sollicite querentes, fossatum, quod vocabatur Rondyk, ab abbacia de Thorneya usque ad molendinum Ventriculum et cursum aquæ de Nen repararunt, nec non molendinum secundum in ultimis finibus dicti fossati versus villam de Eye construxerunt, ut sic tenentes religiosorum de Burgo in villa de Eye in comitatu Northamptoniensi transsitum facerent ultra aquam de Nen ad dictum molendinum, et sub eo colore transsitum haberent venientes et redeuntes apud Thorneye, quibus intellectis, abbates de Burgo successivis temporibus religiosos de Thorneye et eorum servientes, nec non quoscunque alios per locum supradictum accedentes pro libito suo impedierunt et vadiaverunt, et quam graciose perniserunt religionis intuitu ipsos de Thorneye transsitum habere, quem ad jus et proprietatem eorum injuste nunc trahere intuentur. Propterea religiosi de Thorneye opturarunt vadum in aqua de Nen versus Croylond et Depyngge quod vocatur Seggeforth, et fossata tendencia versus Thorneye et Wysebech per fossata lata et profunda levata, juxta aquam de Nen secundum longitudinem per salices inibi cressentes,^g ut sic viam haberent magis usitatam et à pluribus notam ultra aquam de Nen inter Thorneye et Eye, crebris sermonibus vociferantes cum impediti fuerant, quod abbacia de Thorneye non fuit fundata sine via tendente ad eam, deserentes debitas vias et solitas quærentes alias in exheredacionem aliorum et dampnum irreparabile si eorum conatum sequatur effectus, quod absit. Ad hæc abbas de Thorneye Odo qui nunc est et conventus ejusdem convenerunt cum abbate de Burgo prædecessore istius abbatis pro via habenda loco prædicto continente certum numerum pedum in prato de Eye in quo positæ fuerunt metæ, videlicet pro tanta terra apud Witlesmere ubi possent retia sua exsiccare vel ædificare, ac deficiente consensu conventus Burgi unanimi deletæ fuerunt metæ positæ, adeo quod conventio non sorciebatur effectum. Et sic apparet quod si jus habendi viam habuissent, de suo dando non optulissent.

Cirograffum^h Alexandri filii Nicholai dicit, quod faciet forinsecum et assidebit servicium domini regis cum militibus et aliis libere tenentibus pro una virgata terræ quæ fuit Odgari clerici, pro qua respondet pro quarta parte unius hidæ. Et pertinent ad abbatem ccc.lx. hidæ ad inveniendos quatuor milites ad servicium domini regis ut cirograffum testatur.

Dominus rex mandat Johanni de Metringham et Thomæ de Belhous per litteras suas patentes, quod, quia idem dominus rex ex gravi querela hominum Burgi Huntingdoniæ accepit, quod aqua magnæ ripariæ inter villam de Huntingdon et villam de Sancto Ivone, per quam naves tam majores quam minores, et batelli cibis et mercimoniis cartati, ad eandem villam Huntingdoniæ de diversis locis regni ad maximam utilitatem ejusdem villæ et parcium adiacencium venire solebant, jam per quam plures cursus à riparia illa in plerisque locis ejusdem emanantesⁱ et diversas obstrucciones in eadem riparia factas in tantum diminuitur, quod hujusmodi naves et batelli taliter cartati ad eandem villam Huntingdoniæ venire non possunt ut solebant, per quod eadem villa et ceteræ villæ adjacentes ac homines Burgi prædicti manifeste depauperantur: idem dominus rex, volens super hoc remedium congruum adhiberi, assignavit eosdem Johannem et Thomam ad ripariam prædictam videndam, et ad inquirendum in præsentia eorum quos negocia prædicta contingunt, et qui per eosdem Johannem et Thomam inde præmunirentur si interesse voluerunt per sacramentum proborum et legalium hominum de comitatu Huntingdoniæ per quos rei veritas melius sciri poterit, &c. de cursibus à riparia prædicta fluentibus, et obstruccionibus in ea in præjudicium domini regis et Burgi prædicti deterioracionem manifestam factis, et per quos, et qualiter, et quomodo et ad omnes hujusmodi cursus modo debito obstruendos et dictas obstrucciones de obstruendis. Ita quod aqua ripariæ prædictæ rectum, debitum, et antiquum cursum habere, et naves et batelli per ripam illam usque ad prædictam villam transsire possint prout riparia illa cursum suum habere et naves et batelli transsire consueverunt ante hujusmodi cursus et obstrucciones factas ut prædictum est. Et ideo præceptum fuit vicecomiti, quod venire faceret hîc ad hunc diem tot et tales milites quam alios probos et legales homines de balliva sua per quos rei veritas, &c. in præmissis, &c. Et eciam omnes illos præmuniret quos negotia prædicta contingunt, quod essent hîc ad hunc diem si voluissent et si viderint expedire. Et vicecomes modo testatur quod præmunivit abbatem Ramesie, Reginaldum de Grey, et homines villæ de Huntingdon ut illos quos præmissa contingunt quod essent hîc ad certum diem, &c. Et abbas et Reginaldus non venerunt, sed homines Burgi prædicti veniunt et petunt quod inquisicio procedat. Ideo capiatur inquisicio mandato domini regis, et Philippus de Ripton, Johannes Mowyn, Galfridus de Bellofago, Radulphus de Hynton, Alexander le Sire, Rogerus de Grendale, Willelmus de Weston, Reginaldus de Bockyng, Robertus de Bedford, Adamus Gerbanec, Johannes de Blaysworth, et Radulphus de Giddyng juratores ad hoc electi, dicunt super sacramentum suum, quod prædicta riperia habet cursum sicut antiquitus solebat habere, exceptis turbacionibus quæ patent inferius, et dicunt quod naves, batelli magni et parvi cum diversis mercimoniis cartati ac discartati solebant venire apud Huntingdon per dictam riperiam cum aqua sufficeret. Et dicunt, quod cursus aquæ præpeditur in duodecim locis inter exclusas de Herford et molendinum prioris de Huntingdon ex parte prati de Godmecestre per terram morosam et arenam per aquam ejectam, et quod naves præpediuntur per salices ramos^a arborum de stagno de Herford, et oportet quod cursus aquæ mundetur de terris et arboribus. Item dicunt, quod cursus aquæ prædictæ præpeditur in tribus locis inter villam de Herford et pratum de Godmecestre ad diminucionem aquæ dictæ riperiæ, et oportet quod obstupentur. Item dicunt, quod extra inclusas abbatis Ramesie desuper molendinum de Houghton sunt duo monticuli facti inter duas sacritectas quæ inpediunt cursum aquæ antiquum, et oportet quod emendentur. Item dicunt, quod quidam lacus qui vocatur Houghton Lake factus fuit per disripacionem aquæ de magna ripa per quem lacum aqua de magna riperia diminuitur. Item dicunt, quod quidam lacus incipitur^b in prato de Houghton qui vocatur Middillake factus fuit per vim aquæ ad nocumentum dictæ riperiæ. Item dicunt, quod pars arenæ et terræ morosæ actertatur^c in riperia inter inclusas domini Reginaldi de Grey et Middillake, et oportet quod mundetur. Item dicunt, quod cursus aquæ præpeditur per incrementum terræ morosæ ad^d inclusis domini Reginaldi de Grey usque ad extremam partem de Houghton Lake, et oportet quod riperia mundetur. Et eodem modo præpeditur cursus aquæ ex opposito domus abbatis de Woubourne, et eodem modo in uno loco ex opposito le Howes, et eodem modo ex opposito domus Simonis le Ostric, et eodem modo accersitur quoddam inpedimentum ex opposito ecclesiæ de sancto Ivone, et in omnibus locis prædictis oportet quod mundetur. Item dicunt, quod naves cartatæ solebant dare quælibet unum donum pro auxilio habendo pro quolibet transsitu, et quando vacuæ nichil, ad stagna de Hemyngford, Houghton, Herford. Ad hunc dicunt, quod quidam rivulus est inter Houghton Lake et molendinum de Houghton, de quo non sunt certificati si sit ad detrimentum dictæ riperiæ an non. Et quod convictum est per inquisicionem illam, quod aqua riperiæ prædictæ in multis locis per obstrucciones, et similiter per plures cursus à riperia illa emanantes^e diminuuntur^f per quam naves præpediuntur, &c. præceptum est vicecomiti quod per visum juratorum faciat obstruere et deobstruere ea quæ nociva sunt, et ad diminucionem aquæ dictæ riperiæ. Ita quod aqua ejusdem riperiæ debitum, rectum, et antiquum cursum habere, et naves et batelli per ripam illam usque ad prædictam villam Huntingdon transsire possint, prout riperia cursum suum habere et naves et batelli per eam transsire consueverunt ante hujusmodi cursus et obstrucciones in ea factas, ut prædictum est. Et proinde dominus rex voluit de hoc quod factum est in hac parte in proximo parlamento post festum sancti Michaëlis sub sigillis præfatorum Thomæ et Johannis, et sigillis eorum, per quorum sacramentum præmissa facta fuerunt, cerciorari, et similiter per breve patens remittatur recordum cum processu tocius facti, et similiter veredictum inquisicionis^g sub sigillis juratorum eisdem mittentur,^h una cum brevi patenti et similiter originali. Edwardus, Dei gracia, &c. Johanni de Metyngham et sociis suis justiciariis de banco salutem. Mittimus vobis sub pede sigilli nostri quandam inquisicionem, per vos præfatum Johannem dilectum et fidelem nostrum et Thomam de Belhous nuper factam, super cursibus à magna riperia inter villam nostram Huntingdon et villam de Sancto Ivone currente fluentibus, et obstrucciones in riperia illa in nostri præjudicium et deterioracionem villæ nostræ Huntingdon prædictæ factis: vobis mandamus, quod inspecta inquisicione illa execucionem ejusdem juxta tenorem inquisicionis illius sine dilacione fieri faciatis. Teste meipso apud Waverle xii. die Februarii anno regni nostri xx.

Separacio marisci inter abbatem Ramesiæ et episcopum Elyensem incipit ad Wothinge, et vadit ad Wanfen. Sed piscaria ibidem est prioris de Huntingdon et personæ de Dodyngton, et sic de Wanfen durat separacio inter dictos episcopum et abbatem usque ad Alumbetherst. Ita tota costere de Weremere usque in Suthemere, et inde usque Achweredore, et inde usque Parkhallewere, et inde ex transverso usque Fenton lode.

Et dicunt quod Walterus Em, Walterus Nene, et Elyas de Benewik habuerunt piscariam de Pollynge ad firmam de abbate Ramesiæ, per quam firmam habuerunt ingressum in mariscum de Rammesmeremor ut asyamentum de eodem, et alii homines domini episcopi per ipsos, et hoc percipientes abbas et conventus Ramesiæ ceperunt dictam piscariam in manum propriam, et dimiserunt ipsam hominibus propriis, scilicet Michaëli Shortrad et Alano Chirte. Separacio marisci de Cathteriz et Dodyngton incipit ad Algaesfen et vadit usque ad Salteres Wyn, et inde usque Hachenewere, et infra prædictas metas non communicant homines de Dodyngton sed homines episcopi in Chatriz habent partem cum hominibus abbatis in marisco de Medilfen, qui est inter Algaesfen et Salteres Wyn. Et sciendum, quod homines de Dodyngton et Chatriz nunquam communicant cum averiis suis nisi solummodo post coppum marisci, et tunc communicant Horn, Underhon.

Memorandum quod cum contenciones et discordiæ subortæ fuerunt inter venerabiles patres dominum Willelmum de Luda Elyensem episcopum ex una parte et dominum Johannem de Sautre abbatem Ramesiæ ex altera super injuriis et transgressionibus hinc inde factis, et ad diem amoris tentum apud Wevelyngham die Sabbati proxime ante festum sancti Marcæ Evangelistæ anno regni regis E. xx. secundo, inter prædictos abbatem et prædictum^d propositis et discussis convenit pro bonæ pacis reformand^e quod leta de Walsokne conjungatur, et de tenet.^f dictorum episcopi, abbatis, et prioris de Lewys et pro eorum senescallis simitā^g et in communi teneatur. Ita scilicet, quod secreta dictæ letæ cum veredicto juratorum senescallo prædicti episcopi liberentur, qui quidem senescallus eadem secreta sociis suis senescallis ostendet, et ea statim cum veredicto cuilibet de tenentibus domini sui liberet, per quæ veredicta et secreta proficuum dictæ letæ de tenentibus suis unusquisque capiat et optineat. Convenit etiam inter eosdem, quod leta de Welle in eodem comitatu de cætero integre teneatur per senescallum abbatis vel ejus ballivis^h præsentente ballivo episcopi si interesse voluerit, sicut pacifice et plenius teneri consuevit usque xiiij. annum regis Edwardi patris regis nunc in die sancti Thomæ apostoli. Et quod episcopus habeat de tenentibus suis curiam suam extra hundredum de Clakkclose de omnibus placitis quæ in curia baronis possunt placitari. Convenit etiam inter eosdem, quod ex concessione domini episcopi, dictus abbas et tenentes sui de Wardeboys, Upworde, Ravele, Wistowe, Broughton, et Bery habeant de cætero communam suam in Weremer more, pascendo bestias suas, scilicet equos, boves, vaccas, et bovectos tantum pacifice sine impedimento. Concessum est insuper per prædictum abbatem, quod episcopus et tenentes sui de soka de Somersham habeant pacifice communam suam in Croulōdemor, pascendo averia sua. Et si contingat quod illa lada nimis profunda facta fuerit, tunc per visum omnium communicancium ibidem emendetur. Concessum est etiam per prædictum episcopum, quod secta quæ exigebatur de abbate Ramesiæ apud Chatriz in comitatu Cantebrigiensi ad curiam de Ely et ad hundredum de Wycheford de tribus septimanis in tres septimanas, de cætero fiat per duos tenentes abbatis de Chatriz sicut antiquitus fieri consuevit. Robertus Baynard et Petrus de Abyngdon custodes episcopatus Eliensis per Willelmum de Albersle ballivum hundredi de Wyccheford ceperunt in villa de Chatriz die Veneris in festo apostolorum Philippi et Jacobi proxime præterito de abbate Ramesiæ xij. taxos et xij. bovetos, et eos fugaverunt apud,^b et eos ibidem detinent, dicentes se prædicta averia cepisse, eo quod dictus abbas tenet manerium de Chatriz de episcopo Elyensi per servitium, duorum scilicet reddituum assizæ per annum, et per servitium duorum solidorum ad calcetam de Aldirhithe reparandam per annum, et per servitium faciendi melius animal. dicti manerii episcopo qui pro tempore fuerit post mortem cujuslibet abbatis, nomine herietti, et per servitium faciendi sectam ad curiam de Ely et hundredi de Wichford de tribus septimanis in tres septimanas, et eciam per servitium ad contribuendum domino regi tempore vacationis episcopatus prædicti cum liberis hominibus de hundredo de Wyccheford de porcione duarum marcarum in auxilium dictorum tenencium pro fine x. mar-carum, quem dicti libere tenentes de hundredo prædicto fecerunt cum dictis custodibus sede vacante, et eam ad fidelitatem faciendam domino regi pro omnibus prædictis serviciis. Et dicunt quod omnia prædicta servicia domino regi facienda per bonam inquisitionem tanquam de tenura episcopatus invenerunt. Sed tamen de prædicto hundredo de Wyccheford fuerunt dicti juratores commodum suum proprium declarantes in prædicta contribucione.

Et sciendum quod nos et prædecessores nostri tenuimus dictum manerium à tempore quo non stat memoria, de dono et concessione regis Edgari, et antequam fuit apud Ely aliquis episcopus sed abbas, et ut creditur tunc temporis fuit tota insula de Ely in manibus domini regis ut de com. Cantebrigia, quo tempore tenentes prædecessorum nostrorum de manerio prædicto venerunt ad hundredum regis de Wyccheford, et ad comitatum ejusdem regis per duos dictorum tenentium, et hoc alternatim, videlicet illi qui ad unum comitatum et hundredum venerunt uno die quieti fuerunt donec alii vicini eorum eodem modo ad quemlibet comitatum et hundredum vicissim venerant, et quo tempore dicti tenentes fecerunt ijs. per annum ad festum sancti Michaëlis, et hundredum de Wyccheford quod tunc vocabatur Hundredesgonge sicut et modo, et eciam ijs. ad calcetam de Alderhithe de bonis et catallis dictorum tenencium reparandis pro communi utilitate omnium infra insulam de Ely manencium. De quibus serviciis dominus rex fuit seisitus et hæredes sui tanquam de regia potestate sua, eo quod totus comitatus Cantebrigiensis, ad quem comitatum hundredum de Wyccheford pertinet, fuit in manu sua propria, donec successores sui concesserunt abbati de Ely, qui illo tempore fuit, libertatem insulæ de Ely includentem manerium de Chatriz, et permittentes dictum abbatem prædicta servicia quæ pertinebant ad comitatum et hundredum suum prædicta retinendo sibi et hæredibus suis dominium dicti manerii per manus abbatum Ramesie, absque faciendo dicto abbati de Ely vel serviciis suis vel aliquo episcopo de Ely fidelitatem vel herietum tempore vacationis de Ely, sed pro prædicto manerio abbas qui nunc est, et omnes prædecessores sui à tempore regis Edgari usque nunc fecerunt domino regi qui nunc est, et omnibus antecessoribus suis homagium, fidelitatem, et contribucionem de tenentibus dicti manerii cum acciderit ecclesiam de Ramesie vacare, eo quod nil facit episcopo Elyensi nisi ea quæ permissa fuerunt a regibus prædictis de regali potestate sua sicut prædictum est.

Anno regni regis Henrici filii regis Johannis xxv. facta est hæc inquisicio coram domino Johanne Basset, tunc temporis capitali justiciario forestæ, Rogero de Essex, Radulpho de Cammys, et Richardo de Harecurt apud Huntedune de libertatibus abbatibus Ramesie, quas habet per cartam regis Richardi et confirmationem regis Johannis de custodia boscorum suorum habenda per juratores subscriptos, videlicet Johannem de Folkesworth, Henricum de Longa Villa, Robertum de Amnevil, Johannem de Salene, Ivonem Quarel, Gerardum de Lexington, Willelmum de Salene, Osbertum de Weston, Willelmum de Jakele, Rogerum de Cantilupo, Willelmum de Brampton, Willelmum de Pyrye, Willelmum Cardom, Henricum de Folkeworth, et viredarium scilicet Oliverum Mause, Walterum de Besyle, et Robertum Wynn. Qui dicunt super sacramentum suum, quod abbas Ramesie semper usus est talibus libertatibus in boscis suis hucusque, quod ipse et prædecessores sui semper in boscis suis estoveria sua ad usus suos et hominum suorum sine visu forestarii domini regis capere consueverunt. Et si prædictus abbas vel homines sui attachiati fuerint veniendi ad Swammertun, ipse et homines sui et illi quos idem abbas warentizare voluerint, similiter quieti recesserunt sine misericordia solvenda.^a Et si aliqui attachiati fuerint de boscis ejusdem abbatibus quibusdam furtim asportassent^b sine libertate forestarii, senescallus forestæ de talibus capit misericordias, et hac ratione dicunt quod abbas et homines sui recedunt sine misericordia quieti, eo quod idem abbas de tercio anno in ter-cium annum quando regardum fit, respondet de regardo et de vasto boscorum suorum si vastati fuerint sicut carta domini regis quam habet testatur. Ideo procuratum est, quod prædictus abbas utatur libertatibus prædictis sine impedimento.

Hæc est finalis concordia facta in curia domini regis apud Cantebrigiam à die Paschatis in unum mensem anno regni regis Henrici filii regis Johannis xij. coram S. de Segrave, Willelmo filio Warini, Willelmo de London, et Willelmo Basset justiciariis itinerantibus et aliis fidelibus domini regis tunc ibi præsentibus, inter H. abbatem Ramesie querentem et Alexandrum filium Nicholai deforc' de consuetudinibus et serviciis quæ idem abbas exigebat de ipso Alexandro de duabus virgatis terræ cum pertinentiis in Borewell, de una virgata terræ cum pertinentiis quam Godwynus præpositus tenuit, quas consuetudines et quæ servicia idem Alexander ei non recognovit, et unde placitum fuit inter eos in præfata curia, scilicet quod prædictus abbas recognovit totam prædictam terram cum pertinentiis esse jus ipsius Alexandri, habendam et tenendam ipsi Alexandro et hæredibus suis de ipso abbate et successoribus suis et ecclesia sua de Ramesie in perpetuum, reddendo annuatim pro prædicta virgata terræ cum pertinentiis quam Godwynus præpositus tenuit, tresdecim solidos ad quatuor terminos anni, scilicet ad translationem sancti Benedicti in Julio iij^s. iij^d. et ad festum sancti Michaëlis iij^s. iij^d. et ad festum sancti Andreæ iij^s. iij^d. et ad Pascha floridum iij^s. iij^d. pro omni servicio reddendo et pro prædicta virgata quam Odgarus clericus tenuit vij. sol. ad prædictos terminos, scilicet ad quemlibet terminum xxj^d. et faciendo de prædicta virgata terræ forinsecum servicium quantum pertinet ad quartam partem unius hidæ terræ, videlicet tressentæ^c et sexaginta hidæ cum pertinentiis faciunt servicium quatuor militum per posicionem^d militum et libere tenencium de curia ejusdem abbatibus et successorum suorum.

Hic postquam præsentem ecclesiam xxxij. annis rexerat, percussus senio et invetudine baculum pastoralem resignavit, et tribus annis postea vixit: tandem resolutus in mortem sepultus est coram altare sancti Johannis Baptistæ in boreali parte ecclesiæ.

NUM. XL.

Placita de Jurat. et Assis. apud Bedford coram Roberto de Ardern et Sociis suis Justic. Itineran. 4 Edw. III.

[Ex orig. in domo Capitulari Westm. asservato.]

ABBAS de Rameseye summonitus fuit ad respondendum domino regi de placito quo waranto clamat habere visum franciplegii in manerio suo de Craunfeld et visum franciplegii in manerio suo de Shitlingdon, videlicet in illa parte quæ est in hundredo de Clyfton, et habere liberam warennam in omnibus dominicis terris suis de Craunfeld, Shitlyngdon, Barton, et Pekesden, et habere amerciamenta omnium hominum suorum et pecuniam quæ ad murdrum pertinet, et habere infangenethef, shipbrich, shipwerp scilicet wreck maris in mari et in littore, sok et sak, et them, et habere catalla felonum et fugitivorum in terris suis et habere in prædictis terris weyf et strey, et esse quietus de geld, scot, et danegeld, placitis et querelis, shiris et hundredis, reparatione castellorum, et opere servili, oneribus expeditionum, pontium reconstructione, furium apprehensione et emissionem, mundebrich, fredewyte, blodewyte, fightwyte, miskennyng, frythsoken, hamsoken, forstall, forfeng, wythfeng, hengwyt, grithbrich, outlap et tol, &c.

Et abbas per Willielmum Ganet attornatum suum venit, et quo ad prædictos visus franciplegii dicit quod Johannes quondam rex Angliæ per cartam suam concessit cuidam abbati de Rameseye et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus quod ipsi habeant visum franciplegii in tota terra ipsorum abbatis et monachorum, et profert cartam prædicti regis Johannis in qua continetur quod visus franciplegii de tota terra prædictorum abbatis et monachorum fiat in curia sua. Ita tamen quod ballivus ipsius regis per summonitionem ejusdem abbatis veniat in curia prædicti abbatis ad videndum quod visus de franciplegio rationabiliter fiat, &c. Et si ballivus prædictus non venerit, quod prædictus abbas nichilominus faciat inde visum fieri in curia sua. Et idem ballivus rationabiliter summonitus, &c. erit in misericordia regis, &c. Et eo waranto clamat ipse visus prædictos, &c.

Et quo ad prædictam warennam dicit quod dominus Henricus quondam rex Angliæ proavus regis nunc per cartam suam concessit cuidam Ranulfo quondam abbati de Rameseye et ejusdem loci conventui quod ipsi et successores sui imperpetuum habeant liberam warennam in omnibus dominicis terris suis maneriorum suorum de Craunfeld, Schitlyngdon, et Barton, in com. Bedf. dum tamen terræ illæ non sint infra metas forestæ, &c. Et dicit quod Pekesden est hamlettus et membrum prædicti manerii de Schitlyngdon. Et profert cartam prædicti regis Henrici quæ prædictam concessionem testatur in forma prædicta, &c. Et eo waranto clamat prædictus abbas warennam prædictam, &c.

Et quo ad amerciamenta omnium hominum suorum dicit idem abbas quod dominus Henricus quondam rex Angliæ, proavus domini regis nunc inspexit et confirmavit cartam Willielmi primi regis Angliæ in qua continetur quod idem Willielmus rex privilegia antiquorum regum, omnesque donationes terrarum, ecclesiarum, aut aliarum rerum a quibuscunque donatæ fuerunt corroboravit et confirmavit, atque concessit auctoritate sua regia, cum omnimoda libertate, et dicit quod dominus Edwardus quondam rex Angliæ avus domini regis nunc, inspexit cartas prædictorum regum Henrici et Willielmi, et omnes donationes, concessionem, et confirmationes in prædictis cartis contentas, ratas habens et gratas pro se et hæredibus suis abbati et conventui de Rameseye, et successoribus suis concessit et confirmavit per cartam ipsius regis Edwardi quam profert et quæ præmissa testatur, et in qua ulterius continetur quod quia per rotulos de scaccario ipsius regis Edwardi compertum est quod dictis abbati et conventui allocantur ibidem amerciamenta omnium hominum suorum per libertates a progenitoribus suis regibus Angliæ eis concessas et per verba generalia in cartis inde confectis contenta licet expresse non sint specificata, idem Edwardus rex eisdem abbati et conventui gratiam facere volens specialem, concessit pro se et hæredibus suis quod prædicti abbas et conventus de Rameseye et successores sui habeant et percipiant imperpetuum omnimoda amerciamenta omnium hominum suorum per ipsos et ballivos suos levanda, sicut per prædicta verba generalia et allocationes prædictas sic eis factas hujusmodi amerciamenta retroactis temporibus habuerunt et perceperunt sine occasione ipsius regis et hæredum suorum, justiciariorum, vicecomitum, et omnium aliorum ballivorum et ministrorum suorum quorumcunque imperpetuum. Et eo waranto clamat ipse amerciamenta prædicta, &c.

Et quo ad pecuniam quæ ad murdrum pertinet, catalla felonum et fugitivorum profert cartam sancti regis Edwardi in qua continetur quod ecclesia de Rameseye et monachi ejusdem ecclesiæ in omnibus possessionibus suis et suis appendiciis habeant omnimodam libertatem perpetualiter in terra et in aqua, quam quidem cartam prædicti Willielmus, Henricus, et Edwardus quondam reges Angliæ confirmaverunt prout in prædicta carta prædicti regis Edwardi superius prolata expresse continetur. Et dicit quod ipse et prædecessores sui virtute prædictorum verborum generalium de omnimoda libertate habenda et confirmationum regiarum prædictarum perceperunt et habuerunt prædictam pecuniam de murdro et catalla felonum et fugitivorum. Et eo waranto clamat idem abbas pecuniam de murdro et catalla prædicta, &c.

Et quo ad infangenthef, sok, sak, thol, et theam, et omnes quietancias prædictas in prædicto clamio suo contentas, dicit quod prædictus Willielmus quondam rex Angliæ concessit prædictis abbati et conventui de Rameseye, per aliam clausulam in carta sua prædicta contenta, omnes libertates et quietancias prædictas, quam quidem cartam prædicti regis Edwardi plenius continetur. Et eo waranto clamat ipse libertates et quietancias prædictas, &c.

Et quo ad prædictas libertates de shipebrech et shipwerp, quod wreck maris dicitur, omittit clamium suum ad præsens in com. isto, &c.

Et quo ad weyf et stray dicit quod ipse et omnes prædecessores sui a tempore quo non extat memoria seisi fuerunt de libertatibus illis in maneriis et terris suis prædictis tanquam pertinentibus ad eadem terras et maneria. Et eo waranto clamat idem abbas weyf et stray in maneriis et in terris suis prædictis, &c.

Et Ricardus de Aldeburgh qui sequitur pro domino rege dicit quod prædictæ libertates de infangenethef, weyf, et stray, et omnes quietanciæ prædictæ non fuerunt clamatæ in ultimo itinere hic, unde petit quod libertates et quietanciæ illæ capiantur in manu domini regis; et quod idem abbas respondeat domino regi de exitibus libertatum illarum a tempore ultimi itineris prædicti, &c.

Et Abbas petit libertates et quietancias illas sibi concedi per plevinam. Et dat domino Regi viginti solidos pro plevina inde habenda, et quod admittatur ad libertates illas clamandum et inde placitandum, et ei conceditur per quod idem abbas eas clamat eo waranto quo supra, &c.

Et prædictus Ricardus dicit quod prædictus abbas ad pecuniam quæ ad murdrum pertinet clamandam ad præsens admitti non debet, quia dicit quod prædecessor istius abbatis coram justiciariis ultimo hic itinerantibus clamavit tantum esse quietus de murdro; et hoc paratus est verificare per recordum rotulorum justiciariorum prædictorum: et ex quo per hujusmodi clamium prædecessor istius abbatis tacite cognovit et supposuit pecuniam de murdro proveniente ad solum dominum regem pertinere, et non ad ipsum abbatem petit judicium si idem abbas nunc ad contrarium clamii prædecessoris sui prædicti clamand. debeat admitti, &c.

Et quo ad catalla felonum et fugitivorum quæ prædictus abbas clamat per cartam sancti regis Edwardi per prædicta verba generalia de omnimoda libertate habenda dicit idem Ricardus quod hujusmodi catalla percipere mere spectat ad coronam domini regis et non ad alium nisi per factum regium de concessione hujusmodi jurium regalium specialiter appareret, unde idem abbas nichil ostendit nec aliquod judicium coram aliquibus justiciariis itinerantibus vel alibi super allocationibus ipsi abbati vel prædecessoribus suis inde factum allegat petit judicium pro domino rege, &c.

Et quo ad amerciamenta omnium hominum prædicti abbatis habenda, et per ballivos ipsius abbatis levanda, prædictus Ricardus nichil dicit quare prædictus abbas juxta tenorem cartæ et recordi prædicti domini Edwardi regis, avi domini regis nunc amerciamenti illis gaudere non debeat. Idcirco prædictus abbas quo ad amerciamenta illa eat ad præsens sine die salvo jure domini regis cum alias inde loqui voluerit, &c.

Et quo ad prædictos visus franciplegii dicit idem Ricardus quod prædictus abbas visibus illis gaudere non debet quia dicit quod prædictus abbas et prædecessores sui visus illos tenuerunt in absentia ballivi domini regis et progenitorum suorum, et sine aliqua præmunitione vel summonitione hujusmodi ballivis facienda contra tenorem et purportum prædictæ cartæ prædicti regis Johannis et hoc paratus est verificare pro domino rege; unde idem Ricardus tam quo ad visus illos quam ad liberam warennam, infangthef, weyf et stray, et quietancias prædictas, petit quod inquiratur pro domino rege qualiter et a quo tempore prædictus abbas et prædecessores sui usi fuerunt libertatibus et quietantiis illis, ideo ven. inde jur. hic die Lunæ proxima post festum Omnium Sanctorum, &c. ad quem diem venit prædictus abbas per prædictum attornatum suum. Et similiter jur. qui dicunt super sacramentum suum quod prædictus abbas et prædecessores sui tenuerunt visus prædictos secundum tenorem et purportum cartæ prædictæ in omnibus prout debuerunt. Et quod idem abbas et prædecessores sui seisi fuerunt de prædictis visibus, libera warennam, infangthef, weyf et stray, et tam libertatibus ipsis quam quietantiis prædictis usi sunt in omnibus prout debuerunt, hoc tantum excepto, quod idem abbas nunc levavit fines et amerciamenta de transgressoribus contra assisam panis et cervisiæ usque ad summam viginti solidorum in casibus quibus per judicium pillorii et tumbrelli puniri meruerunt, ideo consensus est quod prædicti visus capiantur in manum domini regis et prædictus abbas in misericordia. Et super hoc prædictus abbas petit rehabere visus prædictos per finem, &c. Et dat domino regi quadraginta solidos pro visibus prædictis rehabendis et ei conceduntur per finem prædictum; ideo prædictus abbas tam quo ad visus illos quam quo ad liberam warennam, infangthef, weyf et stray, et quietancias prædictas eat sine die salvo jure domini regis cum alias inde loqui voluerit, &c.

Et prædictus abbas, tam quo ad pecuniam quæ ad murdrum pertinet quam ad catalla felonum et fugitivorum, dicit quod ipse et prædecessores sui ante tempus memoriæ et post, seisi fuerunt de prædictis pecunia et catallis virtute prædictorum verborum generalium, de omnimoda libertate habenda in cartis prædictorum regum sancti Edwardi et Willielmi contentorum et per eorum concessionem et hæredum Henrici et Edwardi regum Angliæ successive confirmatis et allocationem inde habuerunt coram thesaurario et baron. de scaccario domini regis: et de hoc ponit se super recordum rotulorum ejusdem scaccarii. Dicit etiam idem abbas quod taciturnitas prædecessoris sui tempore ultimi itineris prædicti prædictam pecuniam de murdro non clamantis ipsi abbati nunc præjudicare non debet pro eo quod prædecessor suus prædictus qui tempore suo nisi custodiam ecclesiæ de Rameseye habuit quæ semper fungitur privilegio minoris, et ad cujus ecclesiæ regimen idem abbas nunc cum omnibus juribus et libertatibus suis per dominum Edwardum regem patrem domini regis nunc admissus fuit unde petit judicium si ad prædictam pecuniam modo clamandam admitti non debeat maxime cum idem abbas nunc pro non clam. prædicto alio modo quam per finem inde faciendum puniendus non existat, &c.

Et prædictus Ricardus, salvis domino regi rationibus suis prædictis, si videatur cur. quod prædicta verba generalia sufficiant ad prædictam pecuniam de murdro et catalla felonum et fugitivorum clamanda, petit quod prædictus abbas certificet cur. hic super allocationibus ei vel prædecessoribus suis inde factis coram thesaurar. et baron. prædictis. Ideo mandatum est eisdem thesaurar. et baron. de scaccario quod scrutatis rotulis memorandorum ejusdem scaccarii et quod de allocationibus prædictis invenerint constare fac. justic. hic sub pede sigilli scaccarii prædicti die Veneris proxima post festum Sancti Martini, &c. Ad quem diem venit prædictus abbas per prædictum attornatum suum, et prædicti thesaurar. et barones de scaccario non certificarunt curiam istam super allocationibus libertatum prædictarum nec breve miserunt, &c.

Et super hoc Ricardus de Aldeburgh qui sequitur pro domino rege dicit quod cum prædictus abbas non sit prosecutus versus thes. et baron. prædictos de certificando cur. istam super allocationibus prædictis, et sic deficit de waranto suo de prædictis libertatibus habendis, unde petit judicium pro domino rege quod libertates illæ domino regi remaneant tanquam forisfactæ, &c. Ideo dies datus est prædicto abbati coram domino rege ubicunque, &c. de audiendo inde judicio suo in eodem statu quo nunc in crastino purificationis beatæ Mariæ, &c.

Letter of Thomas Bedyll, one of K. Henry the Eighth's Commissioners, to respecting the Monks of Ramsey.

[Ex autogr. MS. Cotton. Cleop. E. iv. fol. 203.]

PLEASE it you to vnderstand that in the reding of the muniments and chartors of the house of Ramesey, I found a chartor of King Edgar, writen in a very antiq Romane hand, hard to be red at the first sight, and light inowghe after that a man found out vj. or vij. words and after compar letter to letter. I am suer ye wold delight to see the same for the straingnes and antiquite thereof. In the ende thereof is subscribed this. "Signum Ædgari incliti et serenissimi Anglorum Imperatoris ✠." Whereby it may be wel noted that affor the Conquest the said king wrate himself to be emporour of England. Item it is to be noted of the subscription of the said charter that in England wer vj. duks at that tyme, for they subscribe this—"Ego Alfwold dux. Ego Athelstan dux. Ego Alfre dux. Ego Oslac dux. Ego Brithmoth dux. Ego Ethelweard dux." And that tyme the king had to sonnys, Edward and Ætheldred whiche he subscribed not as du . . but under this maner: "Signum Ædwardi ejusdem regis filij," and "Signum Æthelredi fratris ejus."

I have seen also there a chartor of King Edward writen affor the Conquest, whiche begynneth this "In onomate summi Kyrion," and soon after the same he writeth this, "Ego Ædwardus totius Albionis Dei moderante^a gubernatione^b archiepiscopis, episcopis, abbatibus, centenariis, cunctisque sanctæ fidel . . ecclesiæ, clericis et laicis, insuper et omnibus post me futuris regibus salutem, perpetuamque pacis felicitatem:" whereby ye may note that King Edward nameth himself of al Albion, and not by the name of England. Also in the said charter it is writen thus: "In primis ecclesiarum^c beatæ Dei genitricis (quæ Ramesea nuncupatur) ita liberam et quietam ab omni exactione episcopali quam a sæculari esse volo, ut neque nos neque successores nostri neque quilibet episcopus, neque quicunque de ordinaria potestate in ipsam sanctam basilicam vel in manentes in ipsa, vel in homines qui cum suis terris, vel quibuslibet substantiis, ad ipsam tradere vel devovere se voluerint, nisi per voluntatem abbatis et suorum omnium monachorum ullam unquam habeant potestatem." Of this may be noted that if King Edward by his kyngly power could exempt this monasterie of Ramsey from all bishops powers, the kings grace may aswell all other abbeyes or asmany as he wol from the bisshops powers. And to this chartor subscribed iij. dukes, Leouricus, Haroldus, Leofwynus, and Eadwynus. Ferther in the said charter when I overloked it agayne I noted the words folowing. "Ipse abbas soli regi serviens atque ei soli os ad os respondens commissum sibi gregem spirituali et tempor. pastu habundantius^d foveat, soli regi et nulli alii subjectus." For which goodness of kings to this house above all other (in my opinion) they be moost bounden to owe their love, feith, and obedience to the king's grace above other religious houses, whiche be not so exempted only to the king immediatly. And asfar as I can yet perceyve thabbat and his brethern here be aswel contented to and under al the bisshop of Rome his vsrped jurisdiction and to accepted the kings grace for the supreme hed of the churche of England as any men may be. And thabbat causid to be shewed affor my commyng hither his charter of King Ædgar in the parisshe churche in the pulpit to the multitude of the parisshe, wher'by was declared that the kings grace is emporour of this his realme as King Edgar was. Whiche was a tokyn of a good mynd. What I shal ferther do or fynd here or in other places worthy writinge I w . . . ascerten you from tyme to tyme, to whom I hertly commend me to be had in your remembrance in this my long absence. From the abbey of Ramsey the xiiijth. day of Januarie.

NUM. XLVI.

Second Letter of Thomas Bedyll to concerning the Monks of Ramsey.

[Ibid. fol. 204.]

IN my moost hertie wise I commende me to you: doing you to vnderstand that I am now at Ramesey, wher in myne opinion the abbat and convent be as true and as feythful obedienciaries to the kings grace as any religious folks in this realme, and live as vprightly as any other after the best sort of lyving that hath been emong religious folks this many yers; that is to sey mor gyven to ceremonies than is necessary. I pray God I may fynd other houses in no worse condicion, and than I wolbe right glad that I tok this journey. Yo^r. cosyn Mr. Richard was her on Thursday by whom I sent letters vnto you whiche I think ye have not yet resceyved. Muche of the mater of my letters concerneth a charter of King Edgar whiche I found in this house writen in a very antique Romane hand; whereof the subscription is this "Signum Ædgari illustris Anglorum imperatoris." And it is subscribed by vj. duks whiche wer in Edgar's tyme. The said Edgar exempteth the abbat and his convent and al his men from the power of al bissops, and maketh thaim immediatly subject to himself. And albeit they were this exempted, the bisshop of Rome had never to do with thaim. Ther may be good nots gathered out sum of as I have writen mor playne in my said lettres deliured to Mr. Richard.

Here in this monastery of Ramsey be two brethern whiche have gyven thes billys enclosed unto me very affectuosly desiryng to have liberte to go from thair cloyster by the kings grace auctorite, or els to have licence to reparr to my lord of Cauntrebury to sue thair capacites. I have steyed thaim as well as I can with suche counsels and exhortations as I could gyve thaim, but, I fer, if the can have no liberte graunted thaim they wol take it of thair own auctorite. I besече you to write a word or two how I shal vse meself towards thaim and al other whiche wol make like suyt, in no smal number as I think: whereof svm occasion hath growen by that that Doctor Lee now at Christmas gave liberte to half the house of Sawtre to depart (as I am informed) whiche Sautre is within v. myles of Ramsey. The religious men thinketh that I have like auctorite as Doctor Lee: and that moveth thaim to make this suyt. Nevertheles I wol no thing do therein, or presume suche hyghe maters without your advise and counsel: beseching you to write your mynd [in] this behalf, and in suche other things whiche ye wold me to do in this journey. If it pleased you to grant me a commission to visit the religious houses vnvisited in Lyncoln dioc. whiche shal be nyghe my journey, it shuld be muche to my commodite. From Ramsey the xv. day of January.

Thorney Abbey, Cambridgeshire, 1814. North West View.

Thorney Abbey,

Anciently called Ancarig,

IN CAMBRIDGESHIRE.

AXULPH, the first abbat of Peterborough, is said, with the consent of Wulpher king of Mercia, to have built here a monastery, or rather a hermitage, as early as St. Etheldreda's time:^a about the year 662. From Ingulphus we learn, that a prior and several anchorites existed here in the year 870. TORETUS was then prior. The monastery at this time was called ANCARIG:^b and was destroyed by the Danes.

Ethelwold bishop of Winchester, in the year 972, under the auspices of Edgar, refounded this monastery for Benedictine monks (according to Bishop Tanner and the generality of the Charters) to the honour of the blessed Virgin Mary: but King Edgar's Charter states, that the church (that is the nave) was dedicated to the Holy Trinity; the choir to the blessed Virgin Mary; the west end to St. Peter; and the north portico to St. Benedict. Before the time of the new foundation, the spot on which the church was erected had acquired the name of THORNEY. Bishop Tanner says, it seems to have been sometimes called also Beamfleda: for Godmannus, who was made abbat of Thorney by Ethelwold himself, (as Angl. Sacr. tom. i. p. 218) is said, Angl. Sacr. tom. ii. p. 201, to be abbat of Beamfleda.^c After St. Botolph's bones were translated hither, Thorney was sometimes styled the church of St. Mary and St. Botolph.^d

The particulars of the first endowment of this monastery are minutely stated in King Edgar's Charter.^e The manors given to it appear to have been those of Witlesig, Niwantun, Wydestun, the two Geakesleas, Fearresheafod, Bearuwe, and Tealfolscet: with two manses in Huntingdon, and the little monastery of St. Mary without that town, which will be hereafter mentioned. A portion of Wittlesey mere is also named as one of the early purchases which in part constituted the endowment of the monastery.

The old church, founded by St. Ethelwold, appears to have been taken down by abbat Gunter in 1085:^f a considerable portion of the new structure seems to have been finished in 1098;^g and it is said to have been completed in 1108:^h but the renewal of the dedication did not take place till twenty years afterward.ⁱ

In Cambridgeshire, in the two hundreds of Ely, four hides in Witesie. In Huntingdonshire, fifteen hides at Lacheslei; eight hides in Stangrun; five hides in Wodestun; five hides in Adone; five hides in Newetone; two hides in Sibestune; and five virgates in Stebintone. On Witelesmare, or Wittlesey mere, the abbat of Thorney had two vessels; one of which, with certain rights of fishery, appears to have been rented by the abbat of Peterborough. In Bedfordshire, the abbey of Thorney held two hides and a virgate of land in Bolehestre. In Northamptonshire, three hides, all but a virgate and a half, in Tviwella; half a hide in Cerweltone; and five hides in Salwebrige.

The total of the rents appears to have amounted, at the time of taking the Survey, to the sum of 52*l.* 15*s.* exclusive of the profits of the fisheries and meers in Huntingdonshire. These last appear to have been divided between the abbats of Ramsey, Thorney, and Peterborough. In the Survey, the profits of the abbey of Ramsey appear to have been rated at ten pounds; those arising to Thorney at three; and the profits of the abbey of Peterborough at four pounds.^k

William of Malmesbury, who lived in the reign of Henry the Second, speaks with great enthusiasm of the beautiful situation of Thorney, and the extreme fertility of the soil. He describes it as abounding in orchards and vineyards:

"In ejus (Heliensis dico) episcopi parochia est Thorneia Cœnobium. Thorneia ulterior scripto et contractior spatio, sed prior laudum titulo, paradisi simulachrum, quod amœnitate jam cœlos ipsos, imaginetur, in ipsis paludibus arborum ferax, quæ enodi proceritate luctantur ad sydera, æquorea planities herbarum viridantibus comis oculos advocat, currentibus per campum nullus offensionis datur locus. Nulla ibi vel exigua terræ portio vacat, hîc in pomiferas arbores terra se subigit; hîc prætexitur ager vineis, quæ vel per terram repunt, vel per bajulos palos in celsum surgunt. Mutuum certamen naturæ et cultus, ut quod obliviscitur illa, producat iste. Quid dicetur de Ædificiorum decore, quæ solum mirabile quantum inter illas paludes solidum incon-

The hermitage of Trokenholt, in Cambridgeshire, appears to have been given to Thorney abbey by Nigel, bishop of Ely, in the time of King Henry the Second.^b Other benefactors of an early period, recorded by Dugdale from the Register in the earl of Westmoreland's possession, were, William Peverel of Brunne, Pain de Beauchamp, Adeliza the mother of Earl Gilbert de Clare, Hugh de Beauchamp, William de Beauchamp, Geoffrey de Trailli, Odo Revell, William de Lisures, Roger de Stivinton, Henry and Eustace de Merch, Baldwin fitz Gilbert, Robert and Thurstan de Muntfort, Ralph fitz Nigell, Hugh de Grantemainil, William de Weldebof, Hugh de Weldebof, Pain Cofin, William Fortin, the Countess Roesia, William de Albini, Adeliza de Montemoraci, Hugh de Lysures, Ralph earl of Chester, Richard de Clare earl of Gloucester and Hereford, Alberic the king's chamberlain, Robert the son of Alberic, John Hay, John de Stutavill, &c.^c

In 1162 Pope Alexander the Third granted a bull of privilege, in which various donations are also recited.^d

The patronage of this abbey was granted by King John, in the sixteenth year of his reign, to Eustace then bishop of Ely, and his successors.^e

Various Charters occur upon the Clause and Patent Rolls, respecting the fair, market, and other privileges belonging to the monastery at Jakesle, in Huntingdonshire, more particularly in the 10th and 11th of Henry III., 14 Edw. I., 8 Edw. II., and 23 Edw. III.; the substance of which will be found incorporated in the “Inspeximus” of the 13th of Hen. VI.^f They had also a market and fair at Wodeston in that county, Cart. 52 Hen. III. m. 5: common of pasture and free warren in Stanground, Cart. 48 Hen. III. m. 5, 30 Edw. I. n. 12, 8 Edw. II. n. 36, 37: and a market and fair at Fairshead, Cart. 25 Edw. III. n. 16. The churches of Jakesle and Staneground were appropriated to them in the 8th of Edw. II. Pat. 8 Edw. II. p. 1, m. 11.^g The former of these churches was afterwards transferred “ad incrementum officii Abbatis.”^h

Cole, in vol. xxiv. of his manuscripts, fol. 203, has given the following Account of the patronage belonging to the abbat and convent of Thorney, from the “Quaternus Brevium et Mandatorum tempore Johannis Fordham episcopi Elien.” A. D. 1402.

ABBATS OF THORNEY.

The Red Book of Thorney states

ATHELWOLD to have presided as abbat during his life.ⁱ Rudborne and Leland name

GODEMAN as the first abbat, a monk of Winchester, and Athelwold's chaplain.^k

LEFSIUS, or LEOSI, was the next abbat. According to Ralph de Diceto, he became bishop of Worcester in 1018.^l The Red Book of Thorney states him to have been succeeded by

LEFSINUS in 1017.^m

OSWY, abbat of Thorney, occurs as a witness to the Charter granted by Canute to the abbey of Croyland in 1031.ⁿ Florence of Worcester places his death in 1049.^o Wharton's Collections, however, according to Willis, state

ETHELSTANUS to have died possessed of the dignity in 1043.^p The Red Book of Thorney names

LEFWINUS as the successor of Oswy. Willis says, he occurs in 1051, in the reign of King Edward the Confessor.

SIWARDUS, a Dane, his successor, appears to have been abbat at the time of the Norman Conquest.^q

FULCARD, a Fleming, was appointed abbat by King William the Conqueror about the year 1068. He was deposed, A. D. 1084, by Archbishop Lanfranc, in a council held at Gloucester: the year after which, A. D. 1085, GUNTERIUS was chosen abbat. He had been originally a monk of Battel abbey; and, according to Willis, was archdeacon of Salisbury. The rebuilding of the monastery by him has been already mentioned. He died in the year 1112, and was buried at Thorney.

ROBERT, a monk of Evroul, was chosen abbat in 1113. Having presided thirty-seven years, he died in 1151.

Lambeth Registers, now preserved in the British Museum, vol. xv. p. 1165.

ⁱ “Memorandum quod a prima fundatione ecclesiæ Thornei usque ad tempus Gunterii abbatis fluxerunt anni cxii. infra quod tempus mortuo beato Adelwoldo qui dicto monasterio usque in diem mortis suæ tanquam ABBAS præsederat, fuerunt vi. abbates.” MS. Lansd. 994, fol. 78, ex Chartulario Thorniensi vulgo vocato ‘The Red Book of Thorney,’ penes prænob. Tho. com. Westmorland.

^k Rudborne, speaking of Ethelwold, says, “Monachos ibidem statuit, et Godmannum eis abbatem præfecit circa annum Gratia DCCCCLXX. ut refert Johannes, in Historiâ Aureâ.” And Leland, “Quem locum de Thornig Ethelwoldus pretio acquisivit, et pari conditione monachis aptissimum delegavit, rectorem illis et abbatem Godmannum præponens. Constructum monasterium dedicavit, et bonorum omnium possessione gratanter ditavit.” Collect. tom. i. p. 8.

GILBERT was the next abbat. He received the benediction from Nigel bishop of Ely. He died in the third year of his administration, A. D. 1154.

WALTER, the first abbat of the name, succeeded him immediately. He died in 1158.

HERBERT, a monk of St. Nicholas at Angier, was the next abbat. He died in 1162.

WALTER, the second of the name, a monk of Ramsey, was preferred to this abbacy immediately on Herbert's death. Willis places the death of Walter in 1170: but it must have happened in 1165; as the abbey is stated to have been vacant for seven years after his death, till SOLOMON, prior of Ely, was elected abbat in 1172. He ruled the monastery sixteen years.

ROBERT, the second of the name, a monk of Gloucester, became abbat in 1193. The Register of Thorney represents him to have been suspended from his office in 1195 by Hubert archbishop of Canterbury, and in the next year to have been deposed, having previously placed his resignation in the hands of the archbishop.^a The abbey remained vacant near three years; when, in 1198,

RALPH, a monk of Croyland, who is also called prior of Freston in Lincolnshire, was chosen abbat. The Thorney Register says, he had the cognomen of "Simplex" given to him. He ruled the monastery for eighteen years. His successor,

ROBERT, the third of the name, a monk and sacrist of St. Edmund's Bury, was elected abbat in 1216.^b Willis says, he was deposed in 1220, and was either restored afterwards, or else succeeded by another of his name. The Register of Thorney, however, states him to have governed the monastery for twenty-one years. "Robertus III. abbas monasterium Thornei per XXI. annos strenue rexit." He died in 1236, and was interred in the Lady chapel of the monastery which he had himself built.^c

RICHARD DE STANFORD, a monk of Thorney (prior of the cell of Deping), was elected abbat upon Robert's death, and received his confirmation in office from Otto the pope's legate. The series of abbats quoted from the Thorney Register by Dugdale, names Wido de Wake as the immediate successor of Robert, in the year 1231. This appointment, however, is not corroborated by the entries upon the Patent Rolls. Wido, the descendant of Baldwin de Wake, was merely a benefactor to the monastery. Richard de Stanford died within a year from his election: when

DAVID, a monk of Thorney, was chosen to succeed him.^d He died, according to the Thorney Register, in 1255; having added considerably to the buildings of the monastery.^e

THOMAS, prior of Thorney, also called THOMAS DE CASTRE, was the next abbat.^f Upon whose death, in 1261,

WILLIAM DE JAKEL, or YAKESLE, became abbat. The temporalities of the monastery were delivered to him June 3d.^g He died in 1293: not, as Willis has it, in 1291.^h

ODO DE WITLESEY, or WITLESHEY, received the temporalities of the abbacy July 17th, 1293.ⁱ He also was a benefactor to the buildings of the monastery.^k He died Sept. 26th, 1305. On November the 6th following, the temporalities of the monastery were delivered to

WILLIAM DE CLOPTON.^l He appears to have built the chapter-house at Thorney. He was also a great benefactor to some of the estates of his monastery, and contributed to the decoration of the Lady chapel.^m King Edward the Second granted to the convent the manor of Glatton in Huntingdonshire for the term of this abbat's life.ⁿ Abbat Clopton died in the "Inter cætera prædecessorum istius abbatis opera non sunt silentio prætereunda quæ tempore suo bene et provido gesta sunt, et maxime illa quorum commoda seu profectus usu cotidiano experimur. Erat namque sollicitus et diligens in maneriis, terris, et tenementis ac diversis adquirendis, ut patet de manerio de Kinestorp cum suis pertinentiis quod aliquando comparavit pro ducentis et xx. libris argenti quas solvit domino Herveo de Bosham, ac de mesuagiis, terris, et tenementis cum suis pertinentiis quæ cum non modico censu adquisivit in Enfeld, secundum quod continetur in monumentis inde confectis. Quam strenuus item extitit in domorum edificatione tam infra abbatiam quam extra oculis intuentium clarius apparet. Construxit enim infra abbatiam magnam bracinam et granarium brasei, a fundoque cooperuit tegula, et pistrinam quæ ante fuerat foragio cooperta. Construxit item quandam cameram annexam cimiterio juxta gabulam ecclesiæ occidentalem ad opus abbatis, sed non multum decentem, quam dominus Willielmus abbas tertius ab eo successor opere mirifico variaque pictura eleganter decoravit. Construxit item novum refectorium et decens, et illud consummavit. Edificavit autem aulam, grangiam, et boveriam apud Charwalton una cum capella sancti Botulphi ibidem opere decenti, omnia a fundo et de novo. Item apud Stangrund fecit novum cumulum super magna aula et novum cumulum super cameram cum camino ad caput aulae versus orientem. Item apud Enfeld aulam et alios domos construxit quas prædictus W. ejus successor in formam redegit decentiorem, curiam ampliando et novum stabulum largum et bonum construendo, grangiamque at alias domos ibidem tegulis cooperiendo una cum constructione magnæ portæ desuper cameram decenter. REGINALD DE NEWTON; to whom the temporalities were restored April 13th, 1322.^a He also occurs by the name of REGINALD DE WATER-NEUTON. He died in 1346: and was succeeded by

WILLIAM DE HADDON; to whom the temporalities were restored on May the 22d.^b In the time of this abbat, Simon de Islep, archbishop elect of Canterbury, founded a chantry in the conventual church of Thorney.^c Abbat Haddon died in 1365: in which year, on December 17th, the temporalities of the monastery were restored to

JOHN DE DEPING, bachelor of laws. He died on the 12th of the ides of November, 1396: when

NICHOLAS ISLEP, or YSLEP, was made abbat. He received the temporalities Feb. 24th following.^d Dugdale's "Series Abbatum"^e states him to have resigned his office in 1399; but the Patent Roll states

THOMAS DE CHARWELTON to have been elected upon his resignation in 1402. He was elected on Nov. 4th, "per viam compromissi," and, on the 5th of January following received the temporalities of his monastery from the king.^f He had been previously prior of the cell of Deping, in Lincolnshire.^g

ALAN KIRKETON, bachelor of laws, was elected abbat on Charwelton's death, A. D. 1425.^h He was elected, the Thorney Register says, "quasi per viam Spiritus Sancti." Bishop Kennett's Excerpts from the Thorney Register call him Adam KIRKETON. Upon his death,

JOHN KIRKETON was elected abbat, "per scrutinium;" to whom the temporalities of the monastery were restored May 3d, 1437.ⁱ

JOHN RAMSEY, or DE ROMSEY, bachelor of laws, was elected on the death of John Kirketon, "quasi per viam Spiritus Sancti." He received the temporalities July 12th, 1450.^k

WILLIAM RYALL, whom Bishop Kennett's Excerpts call WILLIAM HALL, received the royal assent to his election, upon Ramsey's death, Sept. 26th, 1457.^l He was confirmed abbat by the bishop of Ely October 6th following. He resigned in 1464.^m ^g From the Register of Fordham bishop of Ely, Mr. Cole, in vol. xxiv. of his manuscripts, p. 203, abstracts a mandate of the archbishop of Canterbury (dated Maidstone 20th May, 1404) to sequester the fruits, rents, and profits of the abbat of Thorney for contumacy in not appearing according to summons with the rest of the clergy in the convocation at St. Paul's, 21st April, 1404. By another mandate, dated June 13th, 1404, the bishop was enjoined to relax the sequestration at the prayer of the abbat.

Bishop Fordham's Register, fol. 207, gives an indulgence of forty days to those who, visiting the chapel of the Virgin Mary in the conventual church of Thorney, with confession and contrition should say the Antiphon which he lately in his visitation there found newly instituted in honour of our Lady, dat. It was during this abbat's time that Reginald Pecock, bishop of Chichester, being deprived of his bishoprick, was sent to Thorney "with the following instructions from the archbishop of Canterbury to the abbat, how he should be there treated: viz. 1. That he have a secret closed chamber, with a chimney and an house of easement, and that he pass or go not out of the said chamber. 2. THOMAS DE WESEBECHE, or WYSBECH, received the royal assent to his election December the 4th, 1464, and had the temporalities granted to him on January the 2d following.ⁿ The Thorney Register says, "iste erat seneschallus dicti loci, et electus per viam scrutinii."

JOHN MURCOTT had the temporalities of the monastery granted to him Sept. 7th, 1484.^o Willis calls him WILLIAM MURCOTT.^p

RICHARD HOLBECH received the temporalities Sept. 1, 1485.^q

ROBERT MOULTON received the temporalities April 28th, 1514.^r Willis mentions

JOHN, whose surname was unknown, as abbat in 1523.

ROBERT BLYTH, or BLITH, he adds, was possessed of the abbacy in 1525: at which time he held the bishoprick of Down and Connor, in Ireland, in commendam with it. He was the last abbat, and, surrendering his abbey into the king's hands, obtained a pension of 200*l.* per annum for life. In his will, Mr. Willis says, dated October 19th, 1547, he writes himself "Robert Blythe bishop of Downe, and appoints his body to be buried in the church of our Lady at Whittlesey, co. Cambridge, before the sacred sacrament of the altar; and gives a legacy to the parsonage of Whittlesey, belonging to the late dissolved monastery of Thorney."^s

The list of pensions granted at the dissolution of the monastery will be found in the Appendix of Instruments, Num. XLI.^t

The abbat of Thorney was summoned to parliament in the 49th of Henry III. The last abbat sat in 1538.

The possessions of this priory were valued, in the twenty-sixth of Henry VIII., according to Dugdale, at 41*l.* 12*s.* 11*d.*: according to Speed, at 508*l.* 12*s.* 5*d.*: a great part of which, with the site of the monastery, were granted, in the third year of King Edward the Sixth, to John earl of Bedford.^u

Willis says, in the church belonging to this abbey were interred these Saxon saints, St. Botolph, St. Athulf, St. Huna, St. Tancred, St. Tothred, St. Hereferth, St. Cissa, St. Bennet,^x and St. Tona, or Tova, to whose memory a fair chapel called Thoveham, half a mile off in

That the first quarter after his coming into the abbey he be contented to fare no better than a brother or monk doth, only of the freytour, or to have the same commons as the monks have in their common hall; but afterwards that he be served daily of meat and drink, as one of the friars or monks when he is excused from the freytour; and somewhat better afterwards, as his disposition, &c. shall require. For all which, and for fitting up this close apartment for the bishop, the abbat is ordered to have eleven pounds." See Lewis's Life of Reynold Pecock, 8^o. edit. 1744, p. 256. In a Note, Lewis adds, "So it is in a copy of these instructions communicated to me by the r. r. the bishop of Peterborough; but in another copy which was sent me by the learned Mr. Thomas Baker, transcribed by John Anstis, Esq. from Mr. Wharton's Collections Y. Of the REGISTERS of this monastery, the most important appears to be that which in Dugdale's time was in the possession of the Earl of Westmoreland, called The Red Book of Thorney: from which copious extracts have been made for the Appendix to the present Account. Other Excerpts from this Register are preserved among Dodsworth's manuscripts in the Bodleian library, vol. x. fol. 35; vol. lxxv. foll. 1, 17; and vol. cx. fol. 67: in the Harleian collection, in num. 258, fol. 136; num. 358, fol. 41; num. 6978, p. 111: and in a quarto volume entirely in the hand-writing of Bishop Kennett, preserved among the Lansdowne manuscripts, num. 994.

Smith, in his Catalogue of the Cottonian Library, names “Registrum Chartarum Monasterii de Thorney in Insula Eliensi” as one of the articles in the manuscript in that collection, marked Vitellius D. v.:^b but the volume was either burnt or lost in the fire of 1731.

Bishop Tanner names a third Register as formerly in the possession of Edmund Mountstevens of Paston, which, according to one of Vincent's manuscripts in the College of Arms,^c was called The Green Book of Thorney.

A fourth Register was some years ago in the possession of Mr. Maurice Johnson of Spalding. Where this manuscript is now preserved, the editors of Dugdale's Monasticon have not been able to discover: but some particulars concerning it are given in a Letter from Mr. Johnson to Browne Willis, dated December 9th, 1749, a copy of which is preserved in one of Cole's manuscripts in the British Museum. It was a quarto volume, on vellum, and had been purchased at the sale of a library belonging to a lawyer of the name of Stanford:

It was intitled “Chartularium et Rentale cum Terrario Monasterii de Thorney;” containing also an account of the payments of pensions and taxations, with entries of homages done, and recognitions made by the principal tenants to the monastery, from 1450 to 1460.^d

A few references to some detached Instruments will be found below.^e

The ARMS of Thorney monastery are given in the initial Letter of this Account, as Bishop Tanner has preserved them. In one of Cole's MSS. they appear with a trifling variation in the disposal of the croziers and cross crosslets.

DEPING, in Lincolnshire, was a CELL to Thorney abbey, to which it was given by its founder, Baldwin fitz Gilbert, in 1139.

The first foundation of what was afterwards a house of Austin canons in Huntingdon, dedicated to St. Mary, according to King Edgar's Charter,^f was likewise originally dependant on Thorney.

The Charter of Henry de March notices a HOSPITAL for poor persons at THORNEY under the government of the abbey, in the time of Robert bishop of Lincoln, between A. D. 1147 and A. D. 1166. See his Charter in the Appendix to the present Account,^g in which is a grant of some tithes to it.

Of the CONVENTUAL CHURCH of Thorney a small portion only is remaining. The greater part appears to have been taken down soon after the Reformation. The present remnant serves as the parish church; and seems to have been formed out of the central part of the nave of the ancient structure. It has two towers or turrets at the west end; between which, and over the west window, are nine statues of saints; and on the sides of the arch which forms the western entrance, the date of 1636; at which time, according to Willis, the side ailes were taken down, and part of the stone employed in filling up the arches of the nave.

Mr. Maurice Johnson of Spalding had a drawing of this abbey in a neatly-written vellum map of the lordship, made before the dissolution of the house: from which the structure appeared to have been originally five times as large as the portion which at present remains. It had side ailes, and spires probably on both the western towers, whereof only that on the north side remained and was represented in the map.

^d From the Dismes of the Taxations it appeared, that in 1450 the great officers of the house were: 1. Sacrista. 2. Penitentiarius. 3. Elemosinarius. 4. Precentor. 5. Custos Capellæ Mariæ. 6. Infirmarius. 7. Refectorarius. 8. Camerarius (who seems afterwards to be the Celerarius). 9. Hostillarius. 10. Coquinarius. The Terrar and Rental, tenures and services, in Whittlesey manor, were comprised between the pages 17 and 25. It appeared also from this manuscript, that in 1450 the abbat and convent were possessed of the manors of Thorney, Wodeston, Stanground, Yakesley, Whittlesey, Estrey, Bolnhurst, Twywell, Clopton, Wynge, Salesberge, and Farshed; with the patronage of the appropriate churches of Stanground, Yakesley, and Whittlesey; several lands in Flete, Whapload, Holbeck and Gedney in the parts of Holand; of the church of East-Depyng appropriate to the priory there, and of the then church of St. Guthlac East-Depyng which was not appropriate. At p. 64, were the Firmes of the boat-houses at Farshed, and of the fisheries on Whittlesey mere. This manuscript also contained a Composition made by the abbat and convent of Thorney on the part of the prior and vicar of East-Depyng St. James, and the rector of Depyng St. Guthlac as to tithes of intermixed lands. The other churches of which the abbat and convent of Thorney had the patronage in 1450, were stated in it to have been St. Mary's of Tydd, St. Augustine's of Woodston, St. Mary's of Haddon, St. Mary and All Saints of Water-Newton, St. John Bap-

TORNEIA quippe spinarum insula nuncupatur Anglice, quia diversarum saltus arborum copiosis aquarum gurgitibus circumluitur undique. Ibi monachile habetur monasterium in honore sanctæ Dei genitricis Mariæ, quod in cultu summæ deitatis grata pollet religione, et ab omni semotum est secularium cohabitatione. Illud venerabilis Adelwoldus, Guentoniensis præsul, Edelredi regis tempore construxit, et illuc corpus sancti Botulfi, abbatis Icanoensis, cum aliis sanctorum multis pignoribus transtulit post Danicam cladem, in qua beatus Anglorum rex Edmundus in confessione Christi martyr occubuit. Soli monachi cum famulis suis in opaco Torneie gremio habitant, Deoque tuti fideliter militant. Nulla mulier insulam nisi causa orationis ingreditur, nec aliqua ibidem commorari pro qualibet occasione permittitur; sed muliebris habitatio prorsus usque ad novem milliaria, religiosorum studio, elongatur. Postquam Normannica virtus Angliam edomuit, eamque Gulielmus rex suis legibus commodè subegit, Fulcardum sancti Bertini Sithiensis monachum, multa eruditione validum, Torneie præposuit, qui ferè xvj. annis, absque benedictione abbatis vices supplevit. Hic affabilis et jocundus fuit atque caritativus, grammaticæ artis, ac musicæ peritissimus. Unde preciosa peritiæ suæ monumenta reliquit in Anglia futuris generationibus. Nam plures dictatus memoria dignos edidit, et sancti Oswaldi, Guigornensis episcopi aliorumque sanctorum, quorum propago de Albione processit, delectabiles ad canendum historias suaviter composuit. Ortis postmodum quibusdam simultatibus inter ipsum et Lincolniensem episcopum recessit. Cenomannensis Gunterius de Bello monachus, qui Salesburiensis fuerat archidiaconus successit. Hic monachilem Torneie conventum ordine majoris monasterii regulariter instituit, et pulcherrimam à fundamentis basilicam cum officinis monachorum diligenter construxit, in qua idem post obitum à fidelibus discipulis tumulatus quiescit.

Carta Regis Edgari de Fundatione Abbatiae de Thorney.

UNIVERSIS sophiæ studium intento mentis conamine sedulò rimantibus, liquido patescit, quod instabilis hujus miserrimæ ac caducæ vitæ curriculum, cum marcido inanis gloriæ flosculo tabescendo lugubriter deficit, et frivola ejus gloria nunquam in eodem statu permanens, velut fumus rotatu celerrimo evanescit. Attamen annuente Christi, mundi creatoris, ac redemptoris, gratiâ, cum recidivis præsentis vitæ munusculis, futuram æternæ beatitudinem centuplicato quæstu adquirere lucrando, fide vigente catholicâ prudentissimè valemus. Quamobrem ego Edgar, totius Britanniae basileus quoddam monasterium beatæ Dei genetrici semperque Virgini Mariæ, ad laudem et honorem ejusdem Domini nostri Jesu Christi, mundi salvatoris, dedicatum, in loco qui quondam Ancraig, nunc verò usitato Thornig nuncupatur vocabulo, et rura præfato monasterio subjecta, cum omnibus utensilibus, pratis videlicet, pascuis, silvis, piscuariis, capturis, gronnis, atque culparum emendationem, quæ reatu aliquo in ipsis peraguntur ruribus, Domino nostro Jesu Christo, ejusque genetrici, semperque Virgini Mariæ, octavo decimo mei terreni imperii anno, attamen primo meæ regiae dedicationis, Adeluodo mihi episcoporum dilectissimo, cum omni subjectionis humilitate impetrante, eternâ largitus sum hæreditate, ea semper interposita conditione, ut nullius altioris, vel inferioris gradus hominis reatu, a Domino nostro Jesu Christo, sanctoque loco quod tam a me, quàm à prædicto episcopo, vel à cæteris catholicis, concessum, vel concedendum est, ulla occasione, diabolo instigante, privetur. Si verò crimen quod veniæ non sit dignum,

In the church and church-yard of Thorney are numerous tombs of the refugee French, or Walloons, a colony of whom settled here about the middle of the seventeenth century; having been employed by the Earl of Bedford in draining the Fens. See a long account of their settlement here, by Gregorio Leti, in his Teatro Britannico, tom. i. p. 400. The patent for the Walloon church, dated 13 Aug. 14 Cha. II. will be found in "Entretiens sur la Correspondance fraternelle de l'Eglise Anglicane avec les Eglises reformées," p. 518.

suadente diabolo, quod absit, loci procurator commiserit, agatur rationabiliter de eo quod de regis agitur præposito, ut videlicet, reo ritè decuriato, ac justo ordine depulso, illi qui dignus sit Christi designetur, uti regis solet præpositura, à nullo secularium Christi possessione violata. Nam in ipso præfato loco anachoreticæ vitæ aptissimo, duo quondam præcipuæ sanctitatis Germani antistites, Tancredus videlicet, et Tortredus, coelestis vitæ beatitudinem, alter martyrio, alter confessionis gloria obtinentes, cum gloriosi egregii triumphi palma migraverunt ad Christum. Tona vero eorum soror, non solum carnalis propinquitatis fœdere compaginata, sed etiam imitatione virtutum, et charitatis repagulo connexa, in intima hujus insulæ parte, anachoreticam vitam ducens, agonem sanctæ conversationis decentissimè complens, ac putidam hujus fragilitatis mortem deserens, membrum tripudians perrexit ad caput quod est Christus, humani generis redemptor, qui cum coeterno Patre, et Spiritu Sancto utriusque sexus milites infiniti tripudii gloria beatificando coronat. Hic namque tante, et tam secrete quietis, ac venustatis locus, peccatis promerentibus, prius a paganis vastatus, et diu postea miserabiliter a secularibus possessus sine Dei servitio, et spiritualium conversatione extiterat. Tali igitur, tantæque miseria præfatus præsul compassus, et insulam, unius, videlicet, mansæ quantitatem, a quadam muliere, quæ noto Æthelfled vocitabatur onomate, cum quadraginta mancusi auri emendo obtinuit, et edificia monachorum habitationi convenientia inibi construens, ecclesiam ad laudem Trinitatis, quæ in coeterna Deitatis unitate consistit, in unitate tripartitam construens ad sanctitatis memoriam trium sanctorum, quorum suffragiis præcipuè confidebat, Dei scilicet genetrici, semperque Virgini Mariæ, orientale altaris presbiterium dedicans, occidentalem verò cleri et populi ejusdem ecclesiæ partem beato Petro, regni cœlorum clavigero, necnon aquilonarem ipsius basilicæ porticum beato Benedicto, omnium monachorum patrono, consecravit, multisque et diversis telluris portiunculis locupletans, ac diverso ecclesiastici juris suppellectili ornans decoravit. Vitæ igitur regularis monachos inibi constituens, ipse abbatibus vice fungens, abbatem sanctæ monachorum congregationi præferre post obitum suum instituit; ita ut deinceps abbatum electio, secundum regulæ præceptum, ex eadem congregatione usu teneatur perpetuo: id est, ut ex eadem congregatione, qui ordinandus est, et aliunde nequaquam, nisi peccatis, quod absit, promerentibus vel impediende imperitia, talis qui dignus sit in ea reperiri nequiverit, cum regis consilio eligatur. Rex autem non ad tyrannidem, sed ad loci munimen et augmentum, uti mos est, super pastorem, et Christi gregem dominium solerti vigilantia misericorditer custodiat. Secularium verò, nec episcoporum quispiam, nè ad magni detrimenti ruinam deveniat, ut dominium loci teneat, excepto rege, nunquam eligatur. Sunt etenim rura hæc quæ a præfato rege, et divinæ servitutis obsequio, cum magna humilitate obtinuit, et auro argentoque, non solum à rege, sed etiam à diversis hominum personis comparavit, et in exordio Domino nostro Jesu Christo, ejusque genetrici semperque Virgini Mariæ, necnon beato Petro apostolorum principi, ad usus monachorum inibi, sub regula patroni nostri beati Benedicti degentium, æterno concessi donario, id est, Witlesig, Niwantun, Wydestun, Geakeslea, & other Geakeslea, Fearresheafod, Bearuwe, Tealfolscet: duas mansas juxta Huntandune, et monasteriolum sanctæ Mariæ extra oppidum dedicatum supradictum. Nam supradictam insulam quæ Whitesig nuncupatur, totam prudentissimè acquirens, ejus mediam partem ab Leofsige filio Ælfiges, cum xl. meri argenti libris, et cum sex mansis aet Brigrafan emendo obtinuit; duas verò partes alterius medietatis, cum viginti libris à Leofwine filio Athulfi comparando acquisivit; tertiam verò partem ejusdem medietatis, et duas partes illius stagni quod Witlesmere nominatur, emit ab Ufan, et ab ejus uterinis fratribus, cum xxx. argenti libris purissimi: has autem triginti libras præfatus miles dedit Henrico, et sibi ab eo rus quod Draegtun nuncupatur, cum ipsa argenti pecunia quam illi episcopus subveniundo ne depopularetur dederat, multis coram testibus comparavit; rursumque cum illi immutare vellent hanc commutationem, idem episcopus illis viginti libras appendit. Niwantun à quodam milite, qui Ælfrie Child vocatur, devotissimè primò cum viginti libris, ac deindè cum præfatus miles hoc immutare disponderet, prædictus episcopus illi duas mansas aet Resuan, duasque aet Yranceaster, unam quoque aet Tutean Mersce, insuper et tredecim libras pro pecunia appendit, et sic altera vice Niwanton mercando adquisivit. Leofstan, quidam miles, ob patrocinium sui muniminis, episcopo mansam et dimidiam in Tictean-Mersce gratuitè dedit; dimidiam verò mansam à quadam vidua comparavit, unam autem mansam quam fur quidam ante possiderat, à rege cum triginta mancusi auri emit. Wudestan præfatus præsul à rege mutavit, dans villam Paninctun in commutatione, quam episcopo superstiti Ælfsig post obitum ejus condixerat; viginti quoque mansas quæ Geakeslea nominantur, quas dedit sanctæ Dei genetrici semperque Virgini Mariæ aet Thornige mutavit à Wulstano, primò cum viginti quatuor mansis in Wassingatune in Sudsexon: rursumque cum ille totum hoc in aliud transferre moliretur, episcopus alteram comparationem innovans, cum sexaginta purissimi libris argenti, ab Ælfrico supranominato prædictas viginti quinque mansas aet twam Geakeslean, et aet Farresheafde comparavit, nam villam quæ Beruwe in Lindesige nominatur idem episcopus à rege præfato cum quadraginta meri argenti libris, emendo comparavit, et insuper munera sibi multò hac pecunia cariora pro eadem addidit tellure: ecclesiam autem in Huntandune, cum cimiterio, et tribus agellulis mansis, rex præfatus supradicto monasterio, ob æternæ beatitudinis præmium, gratulabundus æterna largitus est hæreditate; hoc excepto, supranominata rura omnia mutavit, vel emit à rege, vel possessoribus, majori, minorique pretio: piscaria verò in circuitu villularum, Wyllan scilicet et Eolum, præfatus emit episcopus cum viginti libris, ac una libra, in quibus per singulos annos xvj. millia anguillarum capiuntur. Cujus medietatem capturæ, octo scilicet millia, ad Thornig similiter, et octo millia ad Burch annuatim distribui idem concessit episcopus. Quartam quoque partem stagni quod solito Witlesmere nominatur onomate, ac duo piscaria, decemque mutata sunt jugera de Thornig, videlicet ad Burh pro commutatione centum viginti porcorum pascualium, ac pro domorum, sepium, et stabulorum emendatione. Sint igitur donanti Domino nostro Jesu Christo, ejusque genetrici, semper Virgini Mariæ, à prædicto rege, et episcopo perpetualiter representata, omni terrenæ servitutis jugo libera, tribus exceptis, rata videlicet expeditione, pontis, arcisve restoratione. Si quis igitur hanc nostram donationem in aliud quam constituimus transferre voluerit, privatus consortio sancti Dei ecclesiæ, æternis baratri incendiis lugubris cum Juda proditore Christi, ejusque complicitibus puniatur, si non satisfactione emendaverit congrua quod contra nostrum deliquit decretum. Heremitorium de Trokenholt.

[Ex Registro Abbat. de Thorney, penes Comitem Westmorland. an. 1638, fol. 11.]

In libro de historia Elyensis insulæ literis antiquissimis scriptum invenitur quod ecclesia Elyensis CXCJ. annis gaudebat monialibus, et CXJ. annis, propter barbaricam irruptionem, quasi desolationi subiacebat. Deinde CXXXIX. annis abbatibus gaudebat, sub regula sancti Benedicti degentibus usque ad annum Domini MCVJ. ex quibus unus abbas, nomine Tedwinus, quendam monachum suum vocabulo Trokonolum in loco Everdwic dicto sibi subjecto heremitare licentiavit. Et sic locus ille nomen pristinum repudiavit, et ab isto monacho nomen quod adhuc continuatum est Trokenholt mutavit. Quem quidem locum tempore regis Henrici secundi, Nigellus episcopus secundus Elyensis, monasterio Thorney contulit, per cartam suam et confirmavit, et ecclesiam, et cimiterium ibidem dedicavit ut sequitur.

NUM. VI.

Carta Nigelli Eliensis Episcopi.

[Ex Registro Abbatiae de Thorney, ut supra.]

NIGELLUS, Dei gratia, Elyensis ecclesiæ episcopus, toto conventui ecclesiæ sanctæ Ethelredæ, et omnibus baronibus, vavassoribus, et omnibus hominibus suis totius episcopatus, Francis et Anglis, salutem. Pastoralis cura nos admonet subditis nostris debitam adhibere tuitionis protectionem, illis maximè quos commendat habitus religionis, et honestæ vitæ titulus claros ostendit. Hinc est quod dilectorum filiorum nostrorum abbatis et conventus de Thorney congaudentes opinioni, sibi et successoribus suis heremitorium, quondam Everdewike dictum, nunc verò Trokenholt nominatum, in comitatu Cantabrigiæ situm, cum uno milliaro circumjacente de marisco nostro concedo et confirmo, ad ponendum ibi si ita voluerint, qui Deo serviant sub obedientia sua; et insuper ut eorum corpora, et famulorum suorum defunctorum, vel ibi, vel apud Thorneyam, secundum dispositionem abbatis et conventus, sine omni calumpnia sepeliantur. Sitque ista possessio eterna, et libera ac quietâ Thornensi ecclesiæ, quam quicumque inquietare quocunque modo presumpserit, Dei atque nostram maledictionem incurrat, Amen, &c. Hanc cartam postmodum rex Edwardus tertius confirmavit anno regni sui XXIJ.

TERRA Juditæ comitissæ in Normancros hundred. Cunintune ix. hidæ. De hac terra fuerunt vj. hidæ de ecclesia sanctæ Mariæ de Thorneia. Turkil tenebat de abbate et caritatem inde reddebat, marcam videlicet auri unoquoque anno. Has autem hidas in Cunintun tenebat Turkil de Harmewrth de monachis Thorneiæ ad firmam; sed postquam terram suam reliquit, et ad Danos qui ejus erant parentes transfretavit, tota ejus terra Waltevo comiti à rege data est, qui Waltevus cum alia terra etiam terram sanctæ Mariæ Thorneiæ saisivit. Quod audientes monachi, comitem adierunt, et ei qualiter prædictus Turkil terram illam ad firmam tenuisset apertè ostendunt. Ipse verò, ut erat vir sanctus ac totius justitiæ amator, audita rei veritate, terram illam reddidit ecclesiæ sanctæ Mariæ Thorneiæ. Verùm monachi timentes ne Fulcardus qui ea tempestate illi præerat ecclesiæ, sæpeditam terram alicui parentum suorum ad devastandum traderet, optulerunt comiti Waltevo, ut eam ab eis teneret sicut antecessor suus Turkil eam tenuerat. Qui eis multas gratias agens eam lætabundus suscepit, et eandem firmam quam prædecessor suus ante reddiderat, annuatim reddidit. Quo defuncto, Judita comitissa terram illam habuit, sed nullam firmam monachis sanctæ Mariæ Thorneiæ reddidit: unde factum est ut alii qui post eam terram tenuerunt, monachis sanctæ Mariæ de Thorneia consuetam firmam reddere neglexerint.

Et quod ad mercatum et feriam in Jakeslee et Wodeston dicit quod dominus W. rex Conquestor Angliæ concessit ecclesiæ Sanctæ Mariæ Thornens. mercatum ad manerium suum de Jakeslee quietum et tranquillum cum soka, saka, et theolonio, et omnibus consuetudinibus suis et hoc die Jovis unaquaque ebdomada et hoc per cartam ipsius W. regis quam profert et quæ hoc idem testatur. Dat. per manum ipsius H. regis apud Westm. anno regni sui undecimo. Et quo ad mercatum et feriam in Wodeston dicit quod clamat per cartam ipsius H. regis quam profert, et quæ testatur quod idem dominus H. rex concessit eis unum mercatum singulis septimanis per diem Mercur. in prædicta villa, et unam feriam ibidem singulis annis per octo dies duraturam. Et similiter clamat visum in Haddon et Wodeston ab antiquo. Et quo ad acquietantiam sectæ com. et auxil. Vic. dicit quod ipse debet quietus esse per cartam domini Henrici regis senioris, quam profert, et quæ testatur quod idem Henricus rex concessit eis quod ipsi sint quieti ab omni geldo et Vic. auxilio, et omni servicio, &c. Et de sectis hundr. dicit quod ipse est de feodo ballivus. Dicit etiam quod ipse nec prædecessores sui antequam prædictam ballivam habuerunt, nunquam fecerunt sectam aliquam ad hundr. Et quia prædictus abbas non potuit dedicere subtractionem prædictorum viginti solidorum super coronam factam per prædecessores suos, quam quidem subtractionem prædictus abbas usque nunc tempore suo continuavit et sufficiens warantum pro se non ostendit quod prædictos viginti solidos per assensum ipsius regis vel progenitorum suorum sibi retinere potuit. Et etiam quod recognitum est implacitando quod abbas de Burgo sancti Petri vel prædecessores sui unquam aliam libertatem regiam habuerunt in villa de Fletton et Alwalton, nisi per cartam regis Henrici tertii, quo tempore et antea prædecessores abbatis de Thorney extiterunt in seisinâ per cartam prædicti Willielmi regis Anglorum ita quod tempore regis prædicti homines abbatis de Burgo sancti Petri de Alwalton et Fletton venerunt ad visum franci plegii prædicti abbatis de Thorney ad præsentand. præsentationes quæ in turno Vic. debent præsentari pro conservatione pacis, et necesse non fuit quod libertas prædicti abbatis de Thorney per cartam prædicti Willielmi regis Anglorum concessa per posteriorem concessionem regum infirmaretur, consideratum est quod dominus rex recuperet seisinam suam de prædicto hundredo coronæ suæ annexo, et arreragia sua quæ sunt quater viginti et undecim libræ. Et Abbas in misericordia. Et quo ad residuum datus est ei dies, &c.

Postea a die sancti Michaelis in unum mensem xvº. quem diem habuit per communem proclamationem venit prædictus abbas per attornatum suum et datus est ei dies a die Paschæ in xv. dies, &c.: ad quem diem venit idem abbas per attornatum suum. Octone de Grandisono, Hugone le Despencer, Johanne de Hastings, Waltero de Bello Campo senescallo hospitii nostri, et aliis. Dat. per manum nostram apud Westm. vicesimo die Octobris anno regni nostri tricesimo. Inspeximus etiam literas patentes quas dominus pater noster fecit eisdem abbati et conventui in hæc verba: Edwardus Dei gratia rex Angliæ, dominus Hiberniæ, et dux Aquitanniæ, omnibus ad quos præsentis literæ pervenerint, salutem. Quia compertum est per inquisitionem per dilectos et fideles nostros Rogerum de Hefham et Johannem de Kyrkeby de mandato nostro factam, et ad scaccarium nostrum retornatam, ac coram dilectis et fidelibus nostris magistro Willielmo de Grenefeld, cancellario nostro, thesaur. et baronibus nostris de scaccario, Rogero le Brabanzon justiciario nostro, et aliis de consilio nostro diligenter examinatam, quod Willielmus quondam rex Angliæ fil. Willielmi quondam regis Angliæ Conquestoris, per cartam suam concessit abbati et conventui de Thorneye hundredum de Normancros in com. Huntingdon tenendum cum omnibus ad idem hundredum qualitercunque spectantibus ad feodi firmam per manus vicecomitum com. illius annuatim ad scaccarium reddendam, et quod a tempore concessionis prædictæ abbates ejusdem loci tenuerunt hundredum prædictum cum omnibus ad illud pertinentibus integre, ita quod nullus vicecomes noster, aut progenitorum nostrorum regum Angliæ, hundredum prædictum ingredi, vel turna sua ibidem tenere, seu præsentationes aliquas recipere consuevit usque vicesimum sextum annum regni domini H. quondam regis Angliæ patris nostri, quo anno vicecomes com. prædicti qui tunc fuit, auctoritate sua propria, et sine waranto, hundredum prædictum intravit, et turnum suum ibidem injuste tenuit et occupavit, et quod omnes vicecomites comitatus illius ab eodem anno vicesimo sexto, per occupationem prædictam hujusmodi, turna sua ibidem hucusque bis per annum tenuerunt et occuparunt, et etiam, quod illa duo turna in eodem hundredo valent per annum in omnibus exitibus duos solidos, et non plus, pro eo quod abbas loci prædicti percipit ibidem emendas assisæ panis, et cervisiæ fractæ, et omnia alia proficua quæ ad hundredum illud pertinent, præter amerciamenta provenientia de defaultis liberorum hominum ad turna illa non venientium. Nos pro eo quod per inspectionem et examinationem inquisitionis prædictæ manifeste liquet dictum turnum fuisse injuste, ut prædicitur, occupatum per finem quem dilectus clericus noster Willielmus de Spanneby fecit nobiscum ad scaccarium nostrum, coram prædictis fidelibus nostris pro præfatis abbate et conventu, concessimus pro nobis et hæredibus nostris, eisdem abbati et conventui, et eorum successoribus, quod ipsi hundredum prædictum de cætero teneant, sicut prædecessores sui illud, ante occupationem prædictam, tenuerunt, et quod de occupatione dicti turni injuste facta, sicut prædictum est, imperpetuum exonerentur, et inde versus nos, et hæredes nostros penitus sint quieti: ita quod vicecomites dicti comitatus qui de cætero erunt, turnum aliquod infra hundredum prædictum amplius non teneant, nec præsentationes aliquas ibidem recipiant, nec quicquam inde de cætero percipiant, nec etiam se inde in aliquo intromittant. In cujus rei testimonium has literas nostras fieri fecimus patentes. Teste meipso apud Strivelyn quinto die Julii anno regni nostri tricesimo secundo. Inspeximus etiam scriptum quod Nigellus quondam episcopus Elien. fecit præfatis abbati et conventui in hæc verba: Universis sanctæ matris ecclesiæ filiis, Nigellus Dei gratia sacre ædis sanctæ Etheldredæ virginis præsul et custos, salutem et benedictionem. Ne oblivio, noverca memoriæ quæ a nobis pie ac rite acta sunt, processu temporis possit eradere, ea præsentis paginæ dignum duximus inserere. Cum igitur in diebus nostri præsulatus a nonnullis venisset in dubium, et diutius inter ecclesiam Elyensem et cœnobium Thornense esset altercatum, ubi essent divisæ inter mariscum de Wisebeche et Thorn. necnon et proprium mariscum Thorn. et Witlesey: tandem de consensu partium, sunt plures viri prudentes, tam clerici quam laici, ætate provecti et fide digni, coram nobis et multis nobis assidentibus sunt vocati, qui hujusmodi altercationis ambiguitatem sopirent, quorum electorum inter alios hæc sunt nomina, videlicet, Trustanus de Walsoken, Godricus miles de Walsoken, Aylwardus de Wysebeche, Sedeston de Wisebeche, et Sumardus de Wisebeche, Helstan Hem, Reginaldus clericus, Ellich de Ficton, Agge de Leverington, Gudramus fil. Aldeware, Wiganus fil. Landri, Ysaac fil. Godrici, Edgarus præpositus, qui sub pœna anathematis a nobis jussi, bundas inter dictos mariscos nominare, istas esse dixerunt: scilicet a Tidbritwic super veterem ripam per Sepelac usque ad Thoht, et inde per Sepelac usque ad Cuor; deinde usque Ringemere; hinc inter Thorn. et Witlesey a Cuor usque ad Midfentre, et a Midfentre usque ad ripam quæ vocatur Must. Nos autem illorum assertionem gratam habentes et ratam, dictas bundas præsentis scripto, ac sigilli nostri appositione dignum duximus corroborari: statuentes, ut quicumque hanc confirmationem nostram infringere, vel ei ausu temerario contraire præsumpserit maledictionem Dei omnipotentis et beatæ Dei genetricis Mariæ et omnium sanctorum noverit se incursum. Nos autem donationes, concessiones, et confirmationes prædictas, ratas habentes et gratas, eas pro nobis et hæredibus nostris, quantum in nobis est, abbati et conventui loci prædicti et successoribus suis concedimus et confirmamus, sicut cartæ, literæ, et scriptum prædicta rationabiliter testantur. Præterea volentes eisdem abbati et conventui gratiam in hac parte facere ampliorem, concessimus eis pro nobis et hæredibus nostris, quod licet ipsi aliqua vel aliquibus libertatum vel quietantiarum in cartis et literis prædictis contentarum hactenus aliquo casu emergente minus plene usi fuerint, iidem tamen abbas et conventus, et successores sui, libertatibus et quietantiis illis, et earum qualibet de cætero absque impedimento nostri vel hæredum nostrorum, justic. escaetorum vicecomitum, aut aliorum ballivorum seu ministrorum nostrorum quoruncumque, plene gaudeant et utantur. Hiis testibus, venerabili patre W. Cantuar. archiepiscopo, totius Angliæ primate: Adomaro de Valencia comite Pem-

Noverit universitas vestra, nos caritas regum et episcoporum Elyen. Hervei, Nigelli, et Eustachii, et prioris et conventus Elyen. Thornen. ecclesiæ collatas monachis ibidem Deo servantibus, quantum in nobis est, imperpetuum confirmasse, ut omnibus in eisdem cartis contentis pacifice utantur, sicut melius antecessorum nostrorum temporibus uti solebant. Confirmavimus etiam eis donum quod Walterus fil. Chateriz, or Chateris, Nunnery,

IN

CAMBRIDGESHIRE.

LEWEN, wife to Ethelstan earl of the East Angles,^a and nurse to King Edgar, with the advice and assistance of her brother Ednoth, the first abbat of Ramsey, and after bishop of Dorchester, built here, about A. D. 980, a nunnery for Benedictines, to the honour of the blessed Virgin; ^b situated in the fens, about ten miles west of Ely.

The following are the lands of this monastery recorded in the Domesday Survey:

In Hertfordshire, three hides and a half in Berlai. In Cambridgeshire, five hides and forty acres at Foxtune; half a hide in Burwell; two hides at Barentone; a hide with a virgate and a half in Shepreth; the fourth part of a virgate in Orewell; and a hide in Ovre. In Suffolk, the manor of Careseia, consisting of three carucates of land and a half. The total of the rents producing an annual sum of 21*l.* 4*s.*^c

King Henry the First gave the patronage of this nunnery to Hervey bishop of Ely, and to his successors in that see.^d

The nuns of Chateriz had an annual rent of ten shillings a year in Spalding and Pinchebek, which they sold, about 1265, to John the almoner prior of Spalding for ten marks.^e

Between the years 1304 and 1310 the monastery appears to have been completely destroyed by fire.^f The particulars relating to the rebuilding of the nunnery nowhere occur; but from one or two passages among the injunctions given at the visitation of the house in 1345, the greater part must have been reinstated by that time.^g The conventual church, however, was not again dedicated till 1352.^h

The Register of Gray, bishop of Ely, contains the

“Memorandum quod die Dominica, videlicet 20 Sept. 1467, in capella de Dounham, dominus missam celebrans solempnem, indutus pontificalibus, recepit Professiones quatuor puellarum monasterii de Chateriz, videlicet dominarum Johannæ, Aliciæ, Agnetis, et Johannæ. Prima earum legente cedula quam manibus tenuit in hac forma, ‘Ego soror Johanna promitto stabilitatem meam, et conversionem morum, et obedientiam coram Deo omnibusque sanctis ejus secundum regulam sancti Benedicti in loco de Chateriz, qui est constructus in honore sanctæ Mariæ, in presentia rev. in Christo patris ac domini domini Willielmi Dei gratia Episcopi Elien. et propria manu subscribo ✠.’ Et fecit tale signum. Deinde secunda earum legit ut supra; ac etiam tertia, et quarta, &c. Præsentibus magistro Ricardo Bole archidiacono Elien. Johanne Roureliffe, Ricardo Robynson decretorum doctoribus, Johanne Warkworth, Henrico Strother, et Thoma Markham artium magistris, et aliis in multitudinè copiosa.”ⁱ

The abbess and convent were patrons of the rectory of Barley in Hertfordshire.^k

ABBESSES OF CHATERIZ.

EMMA DE SOMERSHAM occurs in the year 1265, and again in 1268, 49 and 52 Hen. III.^l

AMICIA DE CAMBRIDGE occurs abbess about 1272, and again about the year 1280.^m

MARIA DE SCHULDHAM occurs in the 34th Edw. I. 1306.ⁿ

ALICIA DE SHROPHAM is the next abbess upon record; on whose resignation

MATILDA BERNARD was elected, Oct. 13th, 1347.^o

MARGARET HOTOT occurs in 1362, and again in the 42d Edw. III. 1369.^p

^a Tann. Notit. Mon. She was not wife of Ailwin, the founder of Ramsey, as Camden, Speed, &c. but his mother.

AGNES DE ELY occurs in 1428, 6 Hen. VI.^a

AGNES ASHFIELD was abbess in 1437.^b Agnes, abbess of Chateriz, (but whether Agnes de Ely or Agnes Ashfield is not said) granted a chantry to Sir William de la Haye in the church of Shepreth, of which she was patroness.^c

MARGERY RAMPSEY died Jan. 27th, 1487, and was buried in the monastery.^d

ANNE BASSET, prioress of the abbey, was elected abbess Feb. 11th, 1487.^e

MARGARET SANCLYN is mentioned as Abbess by Mr. Cole some time in the reign of King Henry VIII. from an Instrument in the archives of Trinity college, Cambridge.^f

MARGARET DEVELYN is mentioned, in a MS. note by Mr. T. Baker, as abbess in the 24th Hen. VIII. A. D. 1533.^g

ANNE GAYTON was the last abbess.

Beside the Abbesses above-mentioned, four others occur in the Cottonian Register, but without dates, or any particulars in the Instruments in which they are mentioned by which the respective times of their existence can be ascertained. These are,

VIII. to John Goderick, Esq. and was thus confirmed, and an exemplification granted. The following were the pensions still payable to the nuns in the 2d & 3d of Philip and Mary :

ALBRED A.

This nunnery escaped ruin in the general devastation of religious houses in 1536, and was, with thirty others, reprieved for two years only; when, on Sept. 3d, 1538, 30 Hen. VIII. it was totally suppressed.^h It was valued, according to Dugdale, at 97*l*. 3*s*. 4*½d*. per annum: according to Speed, at 112*l*. 3*s*. 6*½d*.

A few years after the suppression, in 1551, the nunnery estate, with the rectory and advowson of the vicarage, were granted to Edward lord Clinton.

The only REGISTER of this foundation at present extant is preserved among the Cottonian manuscripts in the British Museum, Julius A. I. 6, at the beginning of which is the following inscription: "Orate pro animabus venerabilis dominæ Agnetis Aschefeld quondam abbatissæ de Chatriz et Henrici Bubworth decretorum baccularii quorum sumptibus et industria est liber præ manibus in hanc formam redactus."ⁱ Agnes Ashfield has been already mentioned as abbess in 1437. Henry Buckworth, or Bubworth, vicar of Chateriz, died in 1456.

The SEAL of the abbey of Chateriz probably represents the foundress, Alfwen, wife of Ethelstan king of the East Angles; the figure being that of a woman seated, wearing a crown, and having in her right hand a staff, and in her left a book. The legend, much defaced, appears to be SIGILLUM DOMUS SANCTE MARIE. The seal is affixed to the Surrender of the abbey, dated 3d Sept.

1538, to which the following names are subscribed: "Ane Gayton abbes, Ellen Smythe prioress, Marget Vasy, Margret Skyll, Agnes Hegdon, Ane Reyde, Jone Bate, Elsabet Aspelond, Mary Gray, Elsabet Gwyne, Elenor Hutton."

The present vestiges of Chateriz nunnery consist of little more than a few walls. Cole, in one of his manuscripts, vol. viii. p. 107, about the year 1745, says the fish-house where the nuns used to dry their fish was still entire, as well as their granary.

Cronica Foundationis Monasterii seu Abbathiae de Chateriz.

[Ex Chronicis de Chateriz, in Bibliotheca Cottoniana, sub effigie Julii A. i. fol. 71.]

SEQUITUR Ednodus, vir in Christo famosus, et monasticæ religionis cultor egregius, qui à beato Oswaldo Eboracensi archiepiscopo et glorioso duce Egelwino in

Ramesiensem ecclesiam, quam ipsi construxerant de Wigorniensi monachatu ad officium abbatis est assumptus. Ubi cum in omni honestate sub Christo floreret, et gregem Domini fideli cura salubriter gubernaret, facta est cuidam fabro divina revelatio de corpore beati Ivonis et sociis ejus, simul cum ipso apud villam de Slepa quiescentibus. Apparens enim fabro in episcopi specie beatus Yvo, et se et socios suos in eadem villa, ab antiquissimo tempore jacuisse indicavit, et ut Ednodo id indicaret imperavit. Ac ille statim evigilans, viro Dei visionem revelavit, et de oblata suo tempore gratia nimis eum letificavit. Qui tantam sanctorum gloriam non passus est diutius in coeno latitare; sed, convocato clero et populo ad effodiendum coelestem thesaurum, cum ecclesiasticis apparatus properavit, et beatum Yvonem propriis manibus, cæteris cereos ferentibus, ipse usque in Ramesiam portavit; et postea in ipsa Slepa ecclesiam in nomine ejusdem sancti edificavit. Nec multum postea, defuncto Lincolniensi antistite, in episcopum promovetur; pro qua potestate nihil minuit de antiqua religione: sed quanto altior, tanto melior effectus, circa condendas ecclesias, et augendas congregationes, assiduus insistebat, quarum unum apud Chateriz, ob amorem sanctæ Dei genetricis Mariæ et Alfwenne sororis suæ cognomento Dominæ, ad ponendas ibi cum ipsa sanctimoniales construxit; et rebus necessariis ampliavit. Ipse quoque corpus beati Alphegi martiris, et archiepiscopi apud Grenewicum à Danis lapidatum, pietate succensus, et fide armatus collegit atque Londoniis sepelivit. Tandem verò martirii gloria, pro gloriosa conversatione decorandus, in bello quod fuit inter Edmundum regem, et Canutum, apud Assandun dum missam cantaret, à Danis Canuti sociis prius dextera manu, propter annulum amputata; deinde toto corpore scisso interfectus est, cum abbate Wlsio, qui secundum cronicam, ad adorandum Dominum pro milite bellum agente commemorant. Hujus corpus, cum ad hanc Elyensem ecclesiam, a suis fuisset allatum, ut confestim hinc ad Rameseyam, ubi abbas fuerat, deferretur. Alfgarus vir

Quomodo Herveus primus Episcopus Eliensis Monasterium de Chateriz optinuit, et Eliensi Ecclesiæ jure perpetuæ Possessionis de manu regia temporibus perpetuis attribuit.

EST autem Chateriz circa insulam Elyensem sanctimonialium habitatio, ubi monasterium sub nomine abbatiae constitutum, quamdiu sub manu regia versabatur, gravissimis angariis premebatur. Videns itaque vir discretissimus locum destructioni proximum, et pauperes Dei ancillas nimium inquietari, nec posse ullo modo sine meliore patrocinio locum incolere, paterna pietate ductus, episcopalem sollicitudinem ad liberandam Christi familiam apposuit, et mira efficacia regium favorem ad sui desiderii modum aptavit. Tantoque pondere suscepto negotio institit, ut locum illum Eliensi ecclesiæ jure perpetuæ possessionis ascriberet, et deinceps matres ibi statuendi, et monachas imponendi principalem potestatem haberet. Egit hoc itaque misericors manus Domini, ut pater animarum pater esset et rerum, et in omnibus necessitatibus suis quibus manus foeminea non sufficiebat, filiae ad patrem recurrerent, et congruum auxilium invenirent. Nemo igitur tantum episcopum putet, rebus quidem terrenis multipliciter abundantem, aliquam sinistram intentionem in hac causa fuisse sequutum, qui non ut terreno commodo consuleret, sed ut ancillæ Dei de crastino non cogitarent allaboravit. Quanto autem robore locum illum sibi suisque successoribus vendicaverit, quanta utilitate locus ille illi cesserit, duæ sequentes cartæ testantur quas regia largitas Elyensi dedit ecclesiæ.

Litteræ precatoriæ per Robertum Elien. Episcopum, R. Lond. Episcopo porrectæ, in favorem Sanctimonialium de Chateriz, ratione combustionis illarum Cænobii.

VENERABILI in Christo patri, domino R. Dei gra-

tia Londonensi episcopo, Robertus ejusdem permissione, Elyensis ecclesie minister, salutem et fraternam in Domino caritatem. Ignis fortuitus ecclesiam et domos abbatisse et sanctimonialium de Chateriz nostre dioceseos, et omnia bona maneriorum suorum pro earum sustentatione ibidem collocata, nuper ita funditus devastavit; quod nec restat eis locus, ubi earum capita reclinent, nec remansit aliquid incombustum, quo pro victu tantummodo possent aliquo modo sustentari; sed necesse habent circumquaque, quod paternitati vestre, non sine cordis dolore nunciamus, pro vite necessariis alienum subsidium implorare: cujus combustionis amara in tantum nos excitavit, quod eisdem, que de proprio honeste vivere consueverunt a nostris subditis elemosinas facimus elargiri. Hinc est quod paternitatem vestram duximus, ex intimis, deprecandam, quatinus earundem inopie, pio compatiens affectu, exactionem decime jam currentis, quam pauperes hujusmodi agnovissent, si pristina bona optinuissent, una cum collega vestro, jubere dignemini relaxari. Impossibile enim est eis decimam solvere, que tam lamentabiliter sunt bonis de quibus decima exigitur, devastata. Valeat reverenda paternitas vestra semper in Christo et Virgine gloriosa. Data apud Dounham viij. kalend. Octobris.

Cerne, or Cernell Abbey,

IN

DORSETSHIRE.

BISHOP Tanner says, "Where the parish church of Cern is now was formerly a hermitage; after that a small monastery of three religious, founded pretty early in the Saxon times by a rich man named Egelward, to the honour of St. Peter."

If the story told by Malmesbury, however, is to be believed, the origin of this monastery must be placed considerably higher. He informs us, that St. Augustine having converted Kent to the Christian faith, travelled through the rest of the English provinces as far as King Ethelbert's dominion extended, which was through all England except Northumberland: having arrived at Cernel, the inhabitants treated him and his companions with great rudeness, fastened the tails of cows^a to their garments, and drove them to a considerable distance from the place. The saint, however, foresaw the change which was likely to ensue, and cried to his companions "Cerno Deum qui et nobis retribuit gratiam, et furentibus illis emendatiorem infundet animam." The people repented of what they had done; asked pardon for their conduct; and requested his return. He imputing this change to the hand of God, gave to this place the name of Cernel, compounded of the Hebrew word Hel, or El, God, and the Latin Cerno.

^b See Num. I. Hutchins, speaking of the foundation of this monastery, says, "The annals ascribed to Walter of Coventry, who wrote about 1230, or in the reign of John and Henry III. give much the same account, which I shall transcribe at large from his MS. in Benet college library [I. xi.]: 'In Dorsetensi pago sunt abbatiæ Kerneliensis, Midiltunensis, virorum; Sceaftoniensis fœminarum: in quo pago olim colebatur deus Helith: sed prædicans ibidem verbum Dei S. Augustinus vidit mentis oculo divinam adesse præsentiam, hilarisque factus ait Cerno Deum, qui nobis suam retribuit gratiam. Eventus, vel potius verbum, Kernelliensi loco indidit vocabulum ut vocaretur Kernele ex duobus verbis, Hebraico et Latino, quia Hel Deus dicatur Ebraice.'

"The author of the Flores Sanctorum, in the Life of St. Augustine (pp. 515, 516: see also Fuller's Church History, pp. 66, 67), tells us, that 'A.D. 603, Augustin destroyed the idol Heil or Heile,' or, as Leland, Helith, the Saxon Esculapius, or preserver of health, who was worshipped here at that time. This saint's company being weary and thirsty, he stuck his staff in the ground, and fetched out a crystal fountain; whence the place was called Cernel from Cerno and El as before; or rather, as Fuller thinks, it should be derived, Cerne Well, behold the fountain; or Cerne Heal. i. e. see the destruction of the idol. The author above cited adds, 'that the inhabitants fastened fishes tails to the backs of St. Augustine and his followers: in punishment whereof, all that generation had that given them by nature, which they in contempt fastened on these holy men.' This legend is still retained by the people here, who imagine the posterity

The conversion of the people followed; and when water was wanting to baptize them, a spring broke out at his command.^b

In succeeding times, according to the same authority, Edwold the brother of Edmund king of the East Angles, struck with the fate of his brother, who had been murdered by the Danes, retired from the world, and became a hermit at St. Augustine's well at Cerne, where he was afterwards buried. Veneration for the memory of Edwold appears to have given rise to a foundation, the history of which is better authenticated to us than either of the preceding accounts.

Æthelmer, or Ailmar,^c son of Æthelward, a nobleman of King Æthelred's court, rebuilt and endowed this monastery. He began it in the reign of King Edgar, and finished it A.D. 987. It was dedicated to St. Mary, St. Peter, and St. Benedict: but in later ages to St. Edwold, or Athelwold.^d

The foundation Charter endowed the monastery with the vills of Cernel and Aescere, six cassates of land in Minterne, ten manses in Winceburn, six in Bridian, and twelve in the farther Brydian, together with three manses in Hremnescumbe. Leofric clerk of Poceswylle added to this donation the vill of Poceswylle, which was confirmed by grant from King Ethelred. Ælfrith, a relation of Æthelmer, gave four cassates of land at Pydelan, after the death of Leowin their kinsman. Alswold gave five manses at Blaeewyrthe, after the death of his wife. Æthelmar also gave the tithes of his yearly rent in Cernel and Ceosolburnan, and the tithes of honey, cheese, and hogs, in his other lands.

of those who abused Augustine still remain, and are distinguished by a remarkable elongation of the os sterni."

"But," Hutchins adds, "it is much to be doubted whether King Ethelbert's dominions extended so far, or whether Augustine was ever in those parts. For he doth not seem to have made any great progress in converting the Saxons, except in Kent, as the conversion of the rest of that people was made after his death by various persons; the West Saxons, in particular, by Birinus: about A.D. 633 or 634. Augustine came into England between 588 and 603, and died about 604, so that, if he built this monastery, it was one of the most ancient foundations in this kingdom. But Bishop Tanner, notwithstanding the authority of Malmesbury, and succeeding writers, who with Camden follow Malmesbury, questions the truth of this account."

At the north-east corner of the church-yard which formerly belonged to the abbey, now to the parish church, from which it is distant about 500 yards, is the spring said to have been raised by St. Augustine, and still called his well. It is walled about, and seems to have had a chapel built over it. See Hutchins, p. 315.

^c Leland and Tanner call him earl of Cornwall. See Lel. Collect. tom. iii. p. 65. Num. II. Tann. Notit. Mon. Hutchins, Hist. Dors. new edit. vol. iii. p. 308, calls him Ailmer, Ælward, or Egelward. Leland, who considers him as the same Ailmer who founded the abbey of Eynesham in Oxfordshire, A.D. 1005, says he was buried in that monastery. Hutchins, in a passage which will be hereafter quoted, among the obits, names one for Ailward the son of the founder.

^d See Rym. Fœd. tom. xiv. p. 637. In the Domesday Survey it is simply called the church of St. Peter of Cernel.

He also directed the monks to observe the rule of St. Benedict, and gave them leave to choose a secular patron.^a

Canute, while king of Denmark, is said to have plundered and destroyed this abbey, but, when king of England, to have endowed it both with lands and privileges.^b

In the Domesday Survey the church of St. Peter of Cernel appears to hold lands in Dorsetshire only. These were rated, in the time of King Edward the Confessor, at twenty-one hides in Cernel, three hides and a half in Litelpidre, three hides in Retpole, five hides and a half in Blocheshorde, nine hides in Affapidele, six hides in Pocheswelle, two hides and a half in Werdesford, three virgates in Ælfatune, one hide in Vergroh, eleven hides in Litelbride, ten hides in Wintreburne, nine hides in Langebride, five in Netelcome, four hides in Mideltone, five hides in Cameric, five in Romescumbe, and nineteen in Simondesberge.

The total amount of land was a hundred and thirteen hides and a half and three virgates: the amount of rent at the time of the Survey 1157. Under Affapidele the rent is omitted.^c

The certificate of the knights' fees belonging to the church in the time of Henry the First, with the names of the knights who held them, as returned by abbat Robert in the reign of King Henry the Second, and recorded in the Black Book of the Exchequer, will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.^d

In after ages, till the time of the Dissolution, the abbey of Cerne possessed the manors of Affpudle, Bloxworth, West Baglake, East Baglake, Cerne, Nether Cerne, Hawkchurch, Maiden Newton, Milborn St. Andrew, Radipole, Symondsbury, Winterborn Abbas, East Woodsford, Kimeridge, Rentscombe, Piddle Musterton in Piddlehinton, Longbridy, Little Bridy, Myntern, West Milton in Poorstock, Middlemarsh in Minterne, Poxwell, Little Piddle, Tiley, Wotton, Mapercomb, Palington in Affpiddle, Woolbridge, and Hungerhill: with the advowsons of Affpudle, Bloxworth, Cerne, Hawkchurch, Radipole, Symondsbury, Longbridy, and Poxwell. I Ælfric, monk and priest, although a man of less abilities than are requisite for one in such Orders, was sent in the days of King Æthelred, from Alphege the bishop and successor of Athelwold, to a monastery which is called Cernel, at the desire of Æthelmer the thain, whose noble birth and goodness are everywhere known. Then ran it in my mind, I trust through the gift of God, that I ought to translate this book out of the Latin tongue into the English language, not upon presumption of great learning, but because I saw and heard much error in many English books, which ignorant men, through their simplicity, esteemed great wisdom, and because it grieved me, that they neither knew, nor had the Gospel learning in their writings, except from those men that understood Latin, and those books which are to be had of King Alfred's, which he skilfully translated from Latin into English. For this reason I took courage, trusting in God, to enter upon this task, and because men have now most need of sound doctrine, especially at this time which is so near the end of the world, and vexations will torment mankind before the end is come, as our Lord in his Gospel said to his disciples.—See the unpublished sheets of Mrs. Elstob's Saxon Homiliarium, folio, p. 3.

ginal Serne), attested by the prior and fifteen monks (not sixteen, as in Hutchins), is preserved in the Augmentation Office, and given in the Appendix, Num. VI.

The revenues of the house were valued at this time, according to Dugdale, at 51*l.* 17*s.* 10½*d.* per annum: according to Speed, at 623*l.* 13*s.* 2½*d.*^a

Hutchins says, in the 31st Hen. VIII. the site of the monastery and demesne land, with the pasture by St. Catherine's chapel, were demised for fifty years to Philip Vanwildcr, paying yearly 37*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* the reversion of which was demised, 7 Eliz. to John Fowler. 17 Eliz. this lordship, the site of the monastery, and several parcels of land, amongst which was one called Totcomb and another Podingstede apud Totcomb, were granted to John Dudley, John Ayscough, &c. and their heirs. 21 Eliz. the site of the monastery, with the parcels before mentioned, were granted to Edmund Downing and John Walker, reciting the grants 31 Hen. VIII. and 7 Eliz.^b

No remains of the CONVENTUAL CHURCH of Cerne are now existing. It is supposed to have stood east of the abbey house, partly in the church-yard, and partly in the adjoining field on the north side; dedicated to St. Mary. The south transept is supposed to have stood near the centre of the present church-yard, where fragments of monuments, &c. have been frequently found. A few yards from this spot, in the north-east corner of the church-yard, between the site of the conventual church and St. Augustine's well, a pavement of glazed figured tiles, now covered with turf, was formerly to be seen, conjectured to have been the floor of the Lady's or some other chapel at the east end of the church. Hutchins has engraved the broken figures of two abbats in black marble formerly found here. In the deepest foundations of the abbey, he says, have been observed the remains of a former handsome building incorporated, and the bases of small pillars frequently dug up are found marked with a cross on the upper side.^c

Hutchins says, from the First Fruits Office we learn that in 1534 here were obits for Robert, Thomas, Dionysius, Ralph, Richard, and Philip, abbats of this place; for John Vann the thirty-first abbat; for Alreda the wife and Ailward the son of the founder, David Pley, Thomas Friday, Alice countess of Wilts, Henry Harding, Anastasia Attemore, Hugh Chamberlain, and John Burton.

Here was a chantry founded, 9 Edw. III., by William de Whitfeld, to find two monks, chaplains, to pray for his soul. Also another chantry, erected 4 Hen. IV., by indenture between R. Symondesbury, abbat, and Humphry Stafford, knt., whereby the abbat was to find one secular chaplain, to celebrate every day for ever, at the altar of the Holy Cross, or St. Michael, in the said monastery, for the good estate of the said Humphry and Elizabeth his wife, while living, and for their souls after death: and for the souls of John Stafford, knt. and Margaret his wife, Alice late wife of the said Humphry, Ralph late earl of Stafford, Edmund Stafford bishop of Exeter, Robert Symondesbury, John Matravers, knt., Humphry Stafford junior and Elizabeth his wife, Matilda Dynham, Walter Clopton, knt., William Ekerdon, and Robert Grey, and their ancestors: and for all their souls, whom Humphry Stafford and Elizabeth his wife were obliged to, and for those of all faithful people. This mass to be called Stafford's Mass. The abbat to find a poor man to say mass daily for ever, and to pay him 17*s.* 4*d.* yearly, in equal portions every week. The abbat grants to the founders, &c. participation of their good works, and their names to be put in the Martyrology, and recited when divine service was said. For these purposes Humphry Stafford gave to the abbat the manor of Milbourne St. Andrewe, alias Milbourne Deverel. See Hutchins's Hist. Dors. ut supr. vol. iii. p. 314.

The Gate-house, a square embattled tower, which seems to have been the principal entrance, is now the only remain of Cerne abbey. Hutchins gives a minute account of the escocheons of Arms with which it is adorned. He conjectures it to have been erected by an abbat of the name of Thomas Salmon, in the reign of King Henry the Seventh, but of whom no other traces can be found.

A barn belonging to the abbey, of considerable size and stateliness, is engraved by Hutchins:^d who informs us, that the old abbey house, many large barns, dog kennels, &c. made out of the ruins of the abbey, were burnt about seventy or eighty years ago.^e The abbat had a park, and also a vineyard.^f

On the top of the hill, north-east from the town, stood the chapel dedicated to St. Katherine, which belonged to the monastery; of which only the traces of foundations remain.^g

Cerne mills, supposed anciently to have been the abbat's mill, are situated upon a brook a little to the south-west of what is called the abbey house. They pay a small annual acknowledgement, or ancient quit-rent, to the church of Salisbury.

The ARMS of this abbey were, Sable, a cross engrailed Or, between four lilies Argent, as given by Tanner from Reyner, as well as in the initial Letter of the present Account. Hutchins says, the cross is not engrailed in the spandril of the inner arch of the gate-house at Cerne, and in the nave of Sherbourne church.

A small portion of the Abbey SEAL, representing a Gothic building, with a figure kneeling beneath, is all that is now appendant to the Surrender of this monastery in the Augmentation Office.

The only REGISTER of Cerne abbey now known to exist is that among Bishop Moore's manuscripts, preserved in the public library at Cambridge, Ll. i. 3.^h

^g Ibid. p. 315.

^h Hutchins, speaking of Bishop Tanner's Notitia Monastica, says:

"The MS. there referred to, among Bishop Moore's manuscripts in the publick library at Cambridge num. 113, seems to have been the property of this house. It is of high antiquity, and contains a collection of lessons and prayers written in the ancient Saxon characters; and, on several leaves inserted in the beginning, contains, according to the custom of those ages, several particulars relating to the abbey. I have inserted an account of its contents communicated to me by a learned friend, who examined it at my request.

"It begins with several grants of Indulgences to the faithful visiting and offering up their devotions here; viz. twenty days by the archbishop of Canterbury, fifteen and twenty by the bishop of Sarum.

"Then follows an account of the dedication of several altars, viz. 1311, of the altar in the abbat's chapel in honour of St. Stephen and St. Katherine, by an Irish bishop of Enaghdo [Enachdunensis] who granted at the same time an indulgence for twenty days to those who visited it. The same bishop also dedicated the chapel of the Infirmary in honour of the Virgin, St. Margaret, and St. Apollonia; to the visitors of which he granted an indulgence of thirty days. A. D. 1318, the bishop of Sarum dedicated the high altar in honour of the Virgin and St. Peter, with a similar grant of forty days indulgence. In 1396, the bishop of Enachdoe, suffragan to the bishop of Oxford" [Qu. Oxon. for Exon.] "dedicated two altars in the chapel of Nu-therteene [f. Nether Cerne], the high altar to All Saints, and that on the south side to St. Ethelreda."

"Then follow several particulars relating to the knights' fees held by the abbat. 2 Hen. I. he answers for three. 14 Hen. II. a mark was raised on every knight's fee throughout England, for marrying the king's daughter to the duke of Saxony; and writs issue to every tenant in capite, to certify how many knights' fees he holds. The abbat of Cerne's return is printed in the Liber Niger." [See Num. VI. of the Append.] "It appears, however, that the exchequer was not well content with the abbat's account, who owned only two knights' fees, and disowned the other eight which were charged on him. The king afterwards grants his Charter by which they were to enjoy 'wreccum per omnes terras suas super mare et bellum et polam et forum in villa de Cerne, faciundo servitium duorum militum ad scutagium, et unum militem in expeditione.' Notwithstanding this Charter, the abbat still remained charged as before in the exchequer till the 54th of Hen. III. who confirmed the preceding Charter, and forgave the arrears, which amounted to near two hundred pounds. The Charter and the writ to the barons of the exchequer to this purpose are here preserved. One might have imagined the abbat would have been well contented with this great reduction, and cheerfully performed the service enjoined by this Charter. But, emboldened by

IN Dorsatensi pago sunt abbatiae: Cerneliensis Mildeltunensis virorum, Sceptoniensis foeminarum, praeter aliquas, quae vel omnino destructae, vel multum imminutae sunt. Cerneliensis exordium ita accepimus. Augustinus primus doctor Anglorum, post Cantiam Christo subditam, reliquas Anglorum provincias pervagabatur, quantum Ethelberthi regis imperium protendebatur. Habebat enim (ut aliàs diximus) sibi subiectum, quicquid Angliæ Britanniae incolunt, praeter solos Northanimbros. Pagum ergo suprà nominatum Augustinus adorsus, crebris à diaboli damno prædis christianitatis augebat numerum. Sed loco illo virtus hæsit, dæmonis conflata invidia, qui tantis animarum lucris dole-ret. Aggrediuntur ergo virum et socios furiatis mentibus incolæ, et magnis dehonestatum injuriis, ita ut etiam caudas racharum vestibis ejus affigerent, impellunt, propellunt, expellunt. Patientèr ille et modestè gaudensque pro nomine Jesu contumeliam pati, et ne magis miserorum irritaret insaniam, excusso pedum in eos pulvere, longè, quasi milliariis tribus, recessit. Tum verò persecutionis remoto turbine in quietem regressus animi, vidit mentis oculo divinam adesse præsentiam, exhilaratoque vultu ait suis: Cerno Deum qui et nobis retribuit gratiam, et furentibus illis emendatiorem infundet animam.

Cum dicto advenerunt illi properatis gressibus, facti poscentes veniam, fidem pollicentes suam, eventus vel potius verbum loco indidit vocabulum, ut vocaretur Cernel ex duobus verbis Hebraico et Latino, quod Hel Deus dicatur Hebraicè. Dixit Augustinus Dominum secernere: nec veritas sermoni abfuit, quod tam citò mente mutata plebs antè lymphata credidit. Nam et ibidem cum ad baptismum deesset aqua, ad jussum pontificis ex occultis meatibus fons erupit, qui hodieque et Augustini merito, et usus sui commodo incolis clarus habetur. Ibi succedentibus annis, Edwoldus frater Edmundi regis et martyris vitam heremiticam solo pane cibario, et aqua trivit, pertæsus (ut fama est) mundi deliciarum, quod se et fratrem durior excepisset fortuna. Fit enim plerumque, ut adversitatibus seculi admonitus generosus animus, ad Dominum se convertat attentius, qui nec falli, nec fallere novit. Et prima quidè virtus est bene per se velle, secunda cogi posse. Non minoris, ut estimo, deputatur meriti Paulus, qui ad bonum flagello coactus est aspero, quàm Petrus, qui libens et statim accurrit vocanti Domino. Edwoldus post religiosè actam vitam, magna sanctitatis opinione ibi sepultus dedit occasionem posteriori tempore Egelwaldo prædixit homini, ut cœnobium eo loco sancto Petro con-

Æthelmer filius Æthelwerdi, satrapa regis Æthelredi, notum fore studui ipsius regiae sublimitati hoc salubre meum consilium, et archiepiscopo Dunstano et Ælfeago Wintoniensi episcopo, et omnibus episcopis cunctisque sapientibus gentis Anglorum, quod ego liberè perpetua munificentia tribui illum locum qui vulgò Cernel nuncupatur, cum possessionibus quas ei subjugò, cuncti-creanti Deo ad almi onomatis ejus laudem, et ad honorem Mariæ genetricis Dei perpetuæ virginis, ac sancti Petri principis apostolorum, necnon et sancti Benedicti, pro meo carissimo hero basileo Æthelredo, et pro memetipso, necnon et pro dilecta mihi animula mei genitoris, et redemptione meorum præcedentium patrum, qui propria colla spontè fidei Christianæ subdiderunt, suarum possessionum me hæredem haud ingratum relinquentes. Illud monasterium, videlicet Cernel, de quo præfatus sum, primitus ditavi, sicuti mihi largitus tunc dictavit, sed post paucorum annorum spacia majoribus illud possessionibus Deo inspirante ampliavi, largiens ei et fratribus inibi degentibus illam villam Cernel, cum omnibus quæ ad eam pendent, postquam ego mortali jure hoc seculum relinquam. Hac etiam ratione concedo illam villam quæ Aescere dicitur, cum cunctis eis adhærentibus; denique me in carne, et post obitum perpetuè has possideant quas modò nomino terras; in illa villula quæ à ruricolis Minterne nominatur, sex cassatos, in Winceburnan decem mansas, in Bridian sex, in Ulteriore Brydian duodecim, in Hremnescumbe tres. Hæc nostra dona augmentavit Leofricus clericus de Poceswylle, donans spontanea largitate suam villam de Poceswylle, cum possessiunculis, fratribus prædicti loci in adjutorium cum territoriis, quod postea concessit eodem jure noster basileus Æthelredus coram testibus. Ælfrithus etiam meus propinquus de Beuncumbe largitus est unum rus juxta Pydelan, quatuor cassatos, post dies Leofwini nostri propinqui. Alfwoldus quoque in Blaeewyrthe quinque mansas post sui conjugis obitum illi monasterio concessit. Et ego mando in nomine omnipotentis Dei, ut decimæ totius anni redditus in Cernel et Ceosolburnan præfato monasteriolo cum omni diligentia dentur, quamdiu aura vitali alor, et æquè post metam labentis vitæ, et ex meis reliquis ruribus mellis casei et pinguium porcorum decimæ similiter per omne ævum incunctanter præscripto loco adducantur. Et ego volo ut illuc habitent servientes et vacantes Deo, et hiis commodis utantur qui sanctam regulam beati Benedicti vita et moribus teneant. Qui locus et ejus habitatores Deo omnipotenti sint commendati. Et sit eis liberum arbitrium secularem patronum ubi meliùs autumant sibi eligere. Et insuper adjuro per nomen æterni judicis quemcumque superstitem derelinquo, ut nequaquam præsumat hoc privilegium temerè pervertere. Sed caveat ipse et caveant valde oppido omnes iniqui raptores, ne nostrum donarium aut suis dominiis vendicent, aut avare minuant, ut non cum impiis avaris et sceleratis rapacibus æterna animadversione in baratri incendiis crucientur. Precor nunc obnixè ut quicumque fidelis illius loci res augmentare satagit, multiplicet ei Christus Dominus æternas divitias.

Placita de Juratis et Assis. apud Shyreburne in Com. Dors. in octab. Sancti Hillar. coram Johanne de Reygate et sociis suis Justiciar. itiner. ibidem anno regni Regis Edwardi fil. Reg. Henrici sexto.

[Ex orig. in domo Capitulari Westm. asservato.]

ABBAS de Cerne summonitus fuit ad ostendend. quo waranto clamat habere wreccum maris, furcas, et emendas assisæ et cervisiæ fractæ in terris suis sine licentia et voluntate domini regis et prædecessorum suorum regum Angliæ, &c.

Et abbas venit et quo ad wreccum maris dicit quod dominus H. rex consanguineus domini regis nunc concessit abbathiæ de Cerne wreccum maris per omnes ter-ras suas super mare per cartam suam quam ei inde fecit. Et præterea dominus H. rex pater domini regis nunc prædictam concessionem confirmavit per cartam suam quam ei inde fecit et quæ hoc idem testatur, &c.

Et Willielmus de Gyselham qui sequitur pro domino rege dicit quod post confectionem prædictæ cartæ et confirmationem prædictam fuit dominus H. rex pater domini regis nunc, et est ipse dominus rex nunc in seysina de wrecco maris in terris ipsius abbatis, et petit quod seysina sua sibi adjudicetur.

Et abbas dicit quod revera Elias de Rabayne custos Castri de Corf, tempore regis nunc, vi et armis extorsit ab eis quoddam wreccum maris quod accidit in terra sua per quod idem abbas ad querelam suam super hoc depositam optinuit justiciarios assignatos per breve regis ad inquirendum ad quem hujusmodi eveniens in terris ejusdem abbatis debuit pertinere. Ita quod per inquisitionem super hoc factam per Walterum de Wymburn justiciarium ad hoc assignatum compertum fuit quod omne wreccum eveniens in terris ipsius abbatis ad ipsum abbatem pertinere debet per cartam et confirmationem prædictam. Et quod per eandem inquisitionem per eundem Walterum per breve domini regis compertum fuit ut prædictum est paratus est verificare, &c. Ideo libertas illa remaneat in man. domini regis quousque, &c. Et quo ad emendas assisæ panis et cervisiæ in manerio suo de Cerne dicit quod ipse et omnes prædecessores sui a tempore Conquestus et ante plene usi sunt hujusmodi libertatibus. Et dicit quod postquam ipse fuerat in bona et pacifica seysina de libertate prædicta dominus rex concessit abbathiæ prædictæ forum in villa de Cerne et omnes libertates suas et milites et libere tenentes cum eorum serviciis, faciendo inde servitium duorum militum ad scutag. et unum militem in expeditione; unde dicit quod eo waranto clamat ipse libertatem prædictam in manerio suo de Cerne. Et quoad eandem libertatem in terris suis forinsecis dicit quod dominus Johannes rex avus domini regis nunc concessit et confirmavit carta sua abbathiæ prædictæ et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus hundr. de Motbergh et Cotescumb cum omnibus pertinentiis et libertatibus, exitibus, et liberis consuetudinibus ad hundreda illa pertinentibus ad feodi firmam adeo integre sicut dominus rex tenuit, et eo waranto clamat ipse habere emendas assisæ panis et cervisiæ fractæ in terris suis forinsecis quæ sunt infra procinctum prædictorum hundredorum, et profert cartas prædictorum regum H. et Johannis quæ prædictas concessionem et confirmationem testatur.

Et Willielmus de Gyselham qui sequitur pro rege dicit quod libertas assisæ panis et cervisiæ fractæ est quædam libertas coronæ et dignitati regiæ immediate annexæ quam nullus habere potest absque speciali waranto a domino rege concesso. Et petit judicium desicut prædictus abbas nullum warantum ostendit faciens mentionem de libertate prædicta nisi solam acquietantiam occupationis suæ si prædicta sufficiant ad prædictam libertatem retinendam. Ideo quo ad hoc ad judicium.

dictus abbas de Middelton nunquam fuit in seisinā de prædictis emendis. Et unde prædictus abbas de Cerne questus fuit domino regi quod fuit in seisinā capiendi prædictas emendas ut prædictum est. Cell of St. Ive,

IN

HUNTINGDONSHIRE.

THE monks of Ramsey pretending to have found the relics of St. Ivo, a Persian archbishop, in their town of Slepe,^a Ednoth abbat of Ramsey, A. D. 1001, founded a church in Slepe to the honour of that holy man;^b wherein he placed a prior and some Benedictine monks, subordinate to the monastery of Ramsey; finally giving St. Ivo's name to the town.^c Speed erroneously says, that Earl Adelmus was the founder of this priory, A. D. 1017.^d

The entry relating to Slepe in the Domésday Survey, as the property of Ramsey abbey, has been already given in the Appendix of Instruments subjoined to the account of that monastery. The land here consisted of twenty hides.^e It had been originally given to Ramsey abbey by Athelstan Mannessune.^f

Pope Urban, in a Charter of confirmation printed by Dugdale, names the site of the priory itself, the church of Ellesworth, the church of Cnapwelle, and the church of Slepe, with its chapels of Waldehirst and Wodehirst, as its principal endowments.^g

In 1207, the church and offices of the priory of St. Ive were burnt; though by what accident is not recorded. A new church was dedicated in 1237.^h died in 1285, gave two hundred marks toward the reparation and renewal of the buildings of St. Ive.ⁱ Of the

of this cell, no regular list has been preserved. Incidental notices, however, have been found of the following.

WILLIAM occurs as prior in Pope Urban's Charter of confirmation already noticed.^k

"R. prior de Sancto Ivone" occurs A. D. 1200.^l

HUGH DE SULGRAVE, prior of St. Ive, succeeded to the abbacy of Ramsey A. D. 1254.^m

ROBERT STAMFORD occurs prior in the time of Henry the Sixth.ⁿ

ROBERT HUCHYN, whom Willis calls ROBERT HUTCHINSON, was the last prior. At the Dissolution, he had a pension of 12*l*. "over and besyds the chappell and chamber stondyng upon the brygge at Seynt Ives during his lyffe."^o

These priors were, of course, all monks of Ramsey; and, as such, voted uniformly at the elections of the respective abbats.

A grant from the monks of Ramsey to the monks of St. Ive, A. D. 1303, of power to cut underwood in Ockley wood for ever, is preserved in Madox's Formulare Anglicanum.^p

The cell of St. Ive was granted, in the 36th of Hen. VIII. as parcel of Ramsey abbey, to Sir Thomas Audley.^q

The priory, barn, and dove-house, are now the

^a The early history of the property of Slepe is thus given in the Exchequer Register of Ramsey:

"In primis Æthelstanus Mauvessone concessit Sancto Benedicto Ramesiæ terram de Chateriz," &c.—"et sorori ejusdem duas hidas apud Hettenleiam, et Alfwennæ juniore filie suæ quandam terram de SLEPE, et terram de Haggethorn; post mortem puellæ decrevit eandem terram ecclesiæ Ramesiensi venire in possessionem, si vero hæredem haberet in vita sua, eandem terram hæres teneret, postea Ramesiensi ecclesiæ pro sua et antecessorum suorum animabus remansuram. Dedit etiam Lefsio reliquam terram de Hettenleia, et filio fratris ejus terram de Pottune, post mortem Alfæ, si erga eam dirationare posset, quod ipsa eam cuiquam dare non deberet. Itemque præfatæ uxori suæ dedit medietatem totius piscariæ de Welle, et consuetudinalium præsentationum alteram medietatem filio suo et duabus filiabus. Post obitum igitur ejusdem Athelstani, uxor ipsius, parentum inducta suggestione, huic testationi omnino contradixit, sicut superius scriptum est. Tunc fratres communicato ad invicem consilio, animam defuncti fide quam viventi promiserant nolentes defraudari, quia in eis spem habuerat, quod liberos suos post mortem suam adjuvarent, concesserunt mulieri terram quam petierat; ea tamen interposita conditione, quod terra de Slepe, post dies prædictæ Alfwennæ filie ejus, tota simul Ramesiensi ecclesiæ remaneret, sive haberet liberos sive non; mulier igitur placito adquiescens, hoc totum affidavit in manu sancti Oswoldi archiepiscopi cognati sui, fidejussori in super præstita cautione. Hoc totum factum fuit apud Slepe, in die qua præfati Æthelstani anniversaria commemoratio agebatur, sub testimonio Æthelsii, filii Ethelstani aldermanni, et Leofrici filii Æthelwyni aldermanni, Edrici, Lefwyni filii Ætholfi, Alfnothi de Alricheseya, Oswaldi presbyteri, et aliorum multorum, qui conventioni huic interfuerunt. Indicet altissimus eum, qui hoc immutare præsumpserit, quod ipsi cum vadio et fidejussoribus inter se confirmaverunt." Hist. Rames. cap. xxix. Gale, Script. XV. p. 407. See also, ibid. p. 414, cap. xlv., "Quomodo quidam presbyter Oswaldus x. sibi hidas apud Slepe usurpavit, et quomodo super eisdem à fratribus Ramesiensibus implacitatus cum eis tandem concordatus est."

^b The History of Ely, printed in the same volume by Gale, lib. ii. c. 13, p. 497, speaking of abbat Ednoth, says,—"beatum Yvonem propriis manibus cæteris cæteros ferentibus, ipse usque in Ramesiam portavit, et postea in ipsa SLEPA Ecclesiam in nomine ejusdem sancti ædificavit."

Confirmatio Prioratus Sancti Ivonis.

[Ex Registro de Ramesey in Archivis Scaccarii, remanente, fol. 158 a.]

URBANUS episcopus, servus servorum Dei, dilectis filiis Willielmo priori et monachis monasterii sancti Ivonis tam præsentibus quàm futuris regularem vitam professis in perpetuum. Piæ postulatio voluntatis effectum debet prosequente compleri, et ut devotionis sanctitas laudabiliter enitescat, ut utilitas postulata vires indubitanter assumat. Eapropter, dilecti in Domino filii, vestris justis postulationibus clementer annuimus, et præfatum monasterium sancti Ivonis, in quo divino mancipati estis obsequio, sub beati Petri et nostra protectione suscipimus, et præsentis scripti privilegio communimus. Inprimis siquidem statuentes ut ordo monasticus qui secundum Domini et beati Benedicti regulam in eodem loco institutus esse dinoscitur, perpetuis ibidem temporibus inviolabiliter observetur. Præterea quascunque possessiones, quæcunque bona, idem monasterium impræsentiarum, justè et canonicè possidet, aut in futurum concessione pontificum, largitione regum vel principum, oblatione fidelium, seu aliis justis modis, præstante Domino, poterit adipisci, firma vobis vestrisque successoribus, et illibata permaneant. In quibus hæc ipsis duximus exprimenda vocabulis. Locum ipsum in quo præfatum monasterium situm est, cum omnibus pertinentiis suis. Ecclesiam de Ellesworth cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, et cum manso Manfredi presbiteri ejusdem villæ. Ecclesiam de Cnapwelle cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, ab abbate et fratribus Ramesiensibus vobis concessam et scripto firmatam. Ecclesiam de Slepa cum duabus capellis de Waldehirst et de Wodehirst ad eandem ecclesiam pertinentibus. Sanè novalium vestrorum quæ propriis manibus vel sumptibus colitis, seu de nutriendis animalium vestrorum, nullus à vobis decimas extorquere præsumat. Liceat quoque vobis clericos vel laicos è seculo fugientes liberos et absolutos ad conversionem recipere, et eos absque contradictione aliqua retinere. Prohibemus ne ulli fratrum vestrorum post factam in eo loco professionem fas sit absque prioris sui licentia, nisi arctioris religionis obtentu, de eodem discedere, discedentem verò absque communi literarum cautione nullus audeat retinere. Sepulturam quoque ipsius loci liberam esse decernimus, ut eorum devotioni et extremæ voluntati, qui se illic sepeliri deliberaverint, nisi fortè excommunicati vel interdicti sint, nullus obstat; salva tamen justitia illarum ecclesiarum à quibus mortuorum corpora assumuntur. Libertates præterea, seu immunitates, antiquas et rationabiles consuetudines ecclesiæ vestræ concessas, et hactenùs observatas, ratas habemus, easque perpetuis temporibus illibatas manere sancimus. Cum autem generale interdictum terræ fuerit, liceat vobis clausis januis, exclusis excommunicatis et interdictis, non pulsatis campanis, suppressâ voce, divina officia celebrare. Decernimus ergo ut nulli omninò hominum liceat præfatum monasterium temerè perturbare, aut ejus possessiones auferre, vel ablata retinere, minuere, seu quibuslibet vexationibus fatigare, sed omnia integra conserventur, eorum pro quorum gubernatione ac sustentatione concessa sunt usibus omnimodis profutura. Salva sedis apostolicæ auctoritate, et diocesani episcopi canonica justitia, ac monasterii sancti Benedicti de Ramesia debita reverentia. Si qua igitur in futurum ecclesiastica sæcularisve persona hanc nostræ constitutionis paginam sciens, contr eam temerè temptaverit, secundò tertiove commonita, nisi reatum suum digna satisfactione correxerit, potestatis, honorisque sui dignitate careat, reamque se divino judicio existere de perpetrata iniquitate cognoscat, et à sanctissimo corpore et sanguine Dei et Domini Redemptoris nostri Jhesu Christi aliena fiat, atque in extremo examine districtæ ultioni subjaceat. Cunctis autem eisdem loco sua jura servantibus sit pax Domini nostri Jhesu Christi, quatenus et hic futurum^a bonæ actionis percipiant, et apud districtum judicium præmia æternæ pacis inveniant. Wherwell Nunnery,

IN

HAMPSHIRE.

HERWELL was not, as Speed makes it, of the order of St. Augustine, but a Benedictine Nunnery; founded by Elfrida, queen dowager of King Edgar, about the year 986, to expiate for her being concerned in the murders both of her first husband, Ethelwolfe, that she might be queen, and also of her son-in-law, King Edward, that her own son, Ethelred, might be king. Herein, it is added, she spent the latter part of her life very penitently, and was here buried.^a

King Æthelred's Charter of confirmation to this monastery, granted in 1002, will be found in the Appendix of Instruments, taken from an "Inspeximus" of the 44th of Henry the Third.^b

Emma the mother, and Editha the wife, of Edward the Confessor, appear both to have been imprisoned in the monastery of Wherwell.^c

The following were the possessions of this monastery in 1087, as they stand recorded in the Domesday Survey; the whole of the abbey-property being at that time situated in Hampshire. The complete vill in which the church stood belonged to the nuns. In the reign of Edward the Confessor this manor had been estimated at twenty-two hides. In the Conqueror's time it was estimated at thirteen hides. Yet the value of it amounted to a third more in the Conqueror's time than in that of the Confessor. Tochiton, which in King Edward's time had been rated at seven hides, in the Conqueror's paid geld, "se defendebat," as for three and a half only; the money value being still the same in both reigns. Godorde, which had been estimated in King Edward's time at three hides, was now rated for one and a half only; yet still, as in the earlier reign, produced the rent of forty shillings. Anna, another manor, which in the Confessor's time had been considered as consisting of five hides, paid geld as for three virgates and a part of a fourth virgate only; a hundred shillings being the rent of the property in both instances. Middeltune was rated in the Confessor's time at twenty hides, in the Conqueror's at ten hides; the value, still remaining the same, at twelve pounds. Bolende was rated at ten hides, having been and being valued at seven pounds the year. In Winchester the abbey had thirty-one manses, or tenements, and a mill. The tenements were exempt from every customary payment except the "geldum regis." The residence of the abbess there was exempt even from that payment.

The annual revenue of the monastery at the time of the formation of the Domesday Survey appears to have amounted to 48*l.* 10*s.*^d

Numerous entries relating to the rents of tenements in Winchester belonging to the abbess of Wherwell occur in the Winton Domesday of the time of Henry the First. See the Supplemental Volume to Domesday, published by the Commissioners upon the public Records, pp. 537, 539, 550, 552.

In the war between Stephen and the Empress Maud the monastery of Wherwell was burnt by William de Ippe.^e

Pope Gregory the Eighth's confirmation of the privileges of this monastery, A. D. 1228, will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.^f

In the 18th of Edward II. Henry le Wayte had licence to grant certain tenements to the abbess and convent of Wherwell in Godesworth, Wherwell, and Eston, in the county of Hants.^g

Bishop Tanner notices a REGISTER of this monastery in the possession of Joshua Iremonger, Esq. which still remains at Wherwell.^t It is the same which Dugdale saw in 1669, in the hands of Charles Lord de la Warre. Excerpts from a Chartulary of this house, formerly in the hands of Thomas Noy, are also to be found among Dr. James's manuscripts in the Bodleian library at Oxford.^u

Several Indentures relating to the manor of Tokington, held under the abdess of Wherwell, are preserved among the ancient Charters in the British Museum.^x

Of this nunnery, situated about three miles from Andover, scarcely any vestiges are now remaining.

NUM. I.

[W. Malmesb. fol. 33 a, n. 10.]

ATHELWOLDUS quidam erat, sui temporis, [scilicet Edgari regis] comes egregius, et à secretis, huic rex in-junxerat negotium, ut Elfthridam filiam Ordgari ducis Devoniæ, quæ forma sui oculos relatorum pellexerat, quatenus eam regiis auribus commendarent; huic, inquam, præceperat, ut illam adiret speculatum, nuptias conciliaturus, si veritas famæ conquadret. Ille viam celerans, nihilque præter opinionem comperiens, celato apud parentes nuncio, suis potius usibus puellam applicuit. Rediens ad regem, quæ suis partibus conducerent, allegat speciei vulgaris et quotidianæ pusiolam esse, nec tantæ majestati convenire. Reducto ab his animo, et aliis amoribus intento, delatores nunciant quanta illum Ethelwoldus astutia emunxerat. Ille clavò clavum expellens, fraude scilicet fraudem eludens, fron-tem serenam comiti ostendere, diem quo visitaret tam laudatam mulierem quasi joco edicere. Qui tam terribili joco exanimatus, præcurrit ad conjugem, rogans ut suæ saluti consuleret, et, quantum posset, vestibus se deformaret, tunc primum aperiens facti sui concilium.
Sed quid non præsumit fœmina? ausa est primi amato-ris, et primi conjugis fidem fallere, et speculo vultum comere, nihil omittens quod ephebi et potentis lumbos pertentaret. Nec citra propositum accidit: visam enim adeo inarsit, ut dissimulato odio, comitem in silvam Warewelle (quæ vocatur Harewoode) gratia venandi accitum jaculo trajiceret. Ubi cum filius occisi nothus familiari visu supervenisset, et à rege interrogatus esset, qualiter ei talis venatio placeret, respondisse fertur, Benè, domine rex, quod tibi placet mihi displicere non debet; quo dicto, ita tumentis animum mansuefecit, ut nihil chariùs in vita sua posthæc haberet, quàm juvenem illum, tyrannici facti offensam in patrem sedulitate regia in filium allevans. Ob illius sceleris expiationem, ibidem monasterium ab Elfthrida ædificatum, sanctimo-nialium frequentia inhabitatur.

[Ibid. fol. 140 b, n. 20.]

DE Warewelle scitur, quod Elfrida uxor regis Edgari ædificaverat illum in honore sanctæ crucis, compuncta privigni sui Edwardi nece indigna, cujus ipsa conscia et autor fuit.

[Ibid. fol. 107 b, n. 50.]

COMBUSTA est etiam abbatia sanctimonialium de Warewelle à quodam Willielmo de Ipra homine nefando, qui nec Deo, nec hominibus reverentiam ob-servaret, quod in ea quidam imperatricis fautores se contutati essent (tempore regis Stephani.)

NUM. II.

[Hist. MS. Joh. Tinemuthensis, in Bibl. Bodleiana, lib. xxi. cap. 117.]

ALFREDUS rex Westsaxonum silvam quandam venandi gratiâ quadam vice adiit, et vocem parvuli vagientis in arbore audivit, et à venatoribus quid hoc foret diligenter inquisivit. Qui ascendentes arborem, invenerunt in summitate arboris in nido aquilæ, infantem ele-gantem, forma conspicuum, habentem in corpore notam quasi regificum signum, purpureo pallio involutum, in brachiis, gemellis armillas aureas nobilitatis indicium præferentem, quem rex baptizari fecit, et à nido, Nestingum vocans, nobiliter educatum in comitem provexit.

Hic genuit Witburdingum, qui genuit Wlhelmum, qui ex uxore sua liberos procreans, cum conjugis sua xvij.
annis, usque ad provectam ætatem, cœlibem vitam duxit.
Angelus autem Domini, trina visione utrumque hortatus est ut convenirent, quia sponsam Christi generarent, et de cætero propositum servarent. Nata est eis igitur infantula et Wlfhildis vocata, ablactaque, virginibus Wiltoniæ tradita educanda, quam cum interjecto tempore Edgarus rex ad se non posset accersire, nec de ecclesia eam capere auderet, per ejus amitam nomine Wenfledam irretire temptat. Tunc illa languorem simulans, puellam ad domum suam apud Warewelle invitat, ut eam quasi neptem suam rerum suarum hæredem moritura constituat, quò cum pervenisset, ecce rex Ed-garus sedens ad convivia, assidente sibi Wenfleda, non languida, sed regalibus epulis jocunda, jubetur in cubiculo puella regaler parari, et ad regem adduci, quam rex lateri suo assidere fecit, et ei divitias, regnum, et imperium, reginam et dominam Britanniae fore pollicetur, si sibi matrimonialiter voluerit copulari. Virgo autem tacito ore, sed corde clamoso, ad Christum attollit suspiria, et ut eripiat silenter exorat, simulatâ verò infirmirate, de convivio ad pausam in cubiculo ut defessa egreditur. Rex verò ne quoquo modo posset evadere, ad ostium cubiculi militum ponit custodiam: procedit itaque virgo quasi ad secreta naturæ, ubi turpe erat mares sequi, et exutis pompaticis indumentis, per meatum cuniculi, angelo duce, fuga dilabatur, atque in villa de Werwelle cujusdam pauperculæ tugurio, ut mendica mulier hospitata est, et mane facto cum festina-tione Wiltoniam advenit, quod rex comperiens illuc properat, et tam per se, quàm per alios insidias apponens, fortè eam in claustrum apprehendit, fugientemque in ipso ecclesiæ limine, per manticam rapuit, sed illa utcunq̃ potuit renitente, mantica in manu regis trahentis remansit, adeo videlicet ut non sentiretur scis-sura, et solida vestis tanquam humana industria erat circumcisa.

Virgo igitur coram altari prostrata, pudicitiam suam cum lacrimis Deo commendabat: at rex ad se conversus obstupuit, et accedens ad eam dixit.

Noli timere, virgo Dei devota, quia nequaquam ultra molestus ero proposito tuo, sed potius adiutorem, et de-fensorem tibi me præbebo. Dedit igitur rex sibi monas-terium virginum de Berkinge, et ad antiquum statum regali munificentia reparavit, ipsiusque Wlfhildæ nobile patrimonium ad xxiii. villarum mansion. auxit, prædic-toque monasterio de Berkinge tam numero virginum, quam copia rerum cœquavit.

Charta Regis "De Inspeximus" dicta.

[Cart. 44 H. III. m. 6.]

Rex archiepiscopis, &c. salutem. Inspeximus scrip-turas Æthelredi quondam regis Angliæ monialibus de Werewell, super quibusdam terris, redditibus, ac libertatibus confectas, absque sigilli sui appositione, cum subscriptione quorundam magnatum temporum illorum conscriptas, quas pro eo quod vetustate erant attritæ, fecimus sub nostro sigillo exemplificari ad cautelam, nolentes quod dictis monialibus, per rupturas seu commissuras scripturarum illarum, periculum immineat de terris, rebus, aut libertatibus quas per scripturas prædictas habent, et hactenus justè possederunt. Tenor autem prædictarum scripturarum is est.

Postquam prothoplastus, invida veneniferi serpentis deceptus versutia, stola immortalitatis deposita, felicissimam paradisiacæ amenitatis amiserat beatitudinem, mortis illico cunctis postmodum inevitabilem sortitus sententiam, in hanc miserrimam, et ærumpnis plenissimam detrusus est peregrinationem, Domino sibi tale pronunciante præconium, Terra es et in terram reverteris, unde et ab ipsius stirpis origine demoniacæ potestatis jugum in omnes aggravatum est posteros, adeo cunctis fermè mortalibus portæ paterent infernales, clausis amissæ fœlicitatis firmissimè januis, donec unicus æterni patris verbigena creaturam suæ imaginis quam per se factam meminerat, inimico sibi ab initio contrario subditam, et ad pœnas ruere gehennales dolens, in extrema fere hujus caduci seculi margine carne velatus virginali, Deus immortalis hominem indueret mortalem, initaque veri Dei, et veri hominis persona, homo inter homines apparere atque conversari dignatus est. Quod misterium diabolo in tantum celebratur, ut eum eisdem modis quibus primum prostraverat hominem aggredi non diffideret, autumans se, et ipsum qui Deus in homine latebat suo posse mancipare dominio. Sed ab ipso tripharia confossus responsione, abcessit inanis, et vacuus inferos petendo suæ tumidæ preparatos adinventioni. Hinc ipsa veritas hominem ad ymaginem et similitudinem sui conditum reformare atque ab hostili eruere disponens tyrannide, viam patriæ cœlestis, quam prius in Adam perdidimus, in seipso restaurandum rectis corde et paulatim intimare curavit, ita dogmatizando. Pœnitentiam agite, appropinquabit enim regnum cœlorum. Rursumque inter reliqua suæ ammonitionis eloquia filios hominum humilitatis sequi hortatur vestigia, taliter proclamans: Honora patrem tuum et matrem tuam, ut sis longævus super terram.

Hujusmodi sententiis multociens à meis præmonitus sapientibus, Ego Æthelred gentis gubernator Angliæ, totiusque insulæ coregulus Britannicæ, et cæterarum insularum in circuitu adjacentium, quoddam nobile cœnobium cum villa circumquaque sibi connexa, Christo sanctisque omnibus humillima offero devotione, quod vulgares suaptè, à vicinitate fontis æt Werewelle appellare consueverunt, cum villulis quæ vel præscripto arcisterio, vel villæ, (ut prædiximus) subjacent circumpositæ, quæ utriusque portio tota pariter in unam collecta quantitatem, in se continet mansarum septuaginta, licet diversis disjaceat in locis, ut sit prætitulatum monasterium cum omnibus quæ supra taxata sunt ad se ritè pertinentibus, omni mundiali jugo liberrimum. Et hoc devotè ipse omnium largitori bonorum optuli pro remedio animæ patris mei Eadgari, et matris meæ Elfdryd vocitatæ, quod ipsa dum vixit possedit et jugi extruere aggressa est diligentia. Existimavi etiam me participem fore retributionis æternæ in elemosinaria partitione possessionis transitoria. Atque iccirco hoc egi, ne me argui pertimescerem ante districti tribunal judicis, si supra memoratam ipsius sententiam, dum scirem quid in oculis suæ majestatis esset placitum, contempsisse seu neglexisse convincerem.

Adhuc autem, ut in illo tremendo examine misericordiam in conspectu tam justici censoris invenire, et in dextera parte inter oves ascisci merear electas, adicio munus devotionis sincerissimæ, tribuens ad adminiculum victus et vestitus sanctimonialium in prænotato monasterio Christo sedulo servientium famulatu, quoddam aliud rus situm in provincia Saxonum Australium, quod loci accolæ Edelingedene cognominant, cassatorum sexaginta, quod et ipsa prædicta regina quamdiu spiraculo vitæ potita est sibimet in usus usurpavit proprios; ut subiciatur hujus portio telluris crebrius præscripto cœnobio, quatenus illi sanctæ familiæ ad usus sibi nil desit necessarios, tantum ut laus Christi nuni-quam per murmuracionis torpescat gravedinem, nec regulæ sanctæ frigescat observantia, prævalente qualibet naturalis inopia refocillationis.

Ut verò istud nostrum decretum stabile capiat solidamentum, hujus curam regiminis commendo abbatissæ venerabili Heanfled agnominatæ, quæ ad eundem sanctum locum ipsum honoris, et ut veriùs dicam, oneris sortita est gradum, ut ipsa hæc omnia quamdiu spiritum gesserit vitalem diligenti cura juxta Dei velle præordinet, postque sui defectum excessus, habeat ipsa religiosa congregatio, cum sui consilio metropolitani, sibi inter se arbitrium eligendi, si inter eas talis inveniri possit, cui more omnes obediant regulari. Perduret siquidem istud cœnobium villaque quam prætitulavimus cum universis appendiciis sibi jure subjacentibus, campis, silvis, pascuis, pratis, aquarum decursibus, grouvis, piscationum hostiis, jugi securissimum libertate, sequestratis sollemnodo trium causis necessitatum communium, si contingat expeditionem educi, arcem, seu pontem redintegrari. Et ne fastidium faciam in multiloquii prolongatione, omnes Christum timentes per ejus adjuro crucifixionem, ne quispiam elationis inflatus supercilio hoc nostrum munus quod Deo optuli evertere, seu in aliud quid transmutare, vel minuere præsumat, servata æternaliter à cunctis hujus institutione privilegii. Si quis autem hoc nostrum donum augere studuerit, augeatur ei æterna felicitas. Qui verò evertere seu in aliud transferre satagerit, duplicentur illi cum Juda proditore pœnæ infernales, nisi celerius cum pœnitentiæ singultu à sua resipiscat fatuitate.

Sane novalium vestrorum quæ propriis manibus aut sumptibus colitis, sive de nutrimentis animalium vestrorum, nullus a vobis decimas exigere vel extorquere præsumat.

Ad hæc liberas et absolutas mulieres è seculo fugientes liceat vobis in monasterio vestro ad conversionem recipere, et eas absque contradictione aliquâ retinere. Nulli quoque post factum in eodem loco professionem licitum sit de monasterio vestro, absque abbatissæ licentiâ nisi arctioris religionis obtentu discedere: discedentem verò absque communium literarum nostrarum cautione nullus audeat retinere.

Obeunte verò te nunc ejusdem loci abbatissâ, vel earum aliquâ quæ tibi successerit, nulla ibi qualiter surreptionis astutiâ seu violentiâ præponatur nisi quam sorores communi consensu, vel earum pars consilii sanioris secundum Deum et beati Benedicti regulam providerit eligendam. Decernimus ergo et nulli omnino hominum liceat præfatum monasterium.....perturbare, aut possessiones auferre, vel ablatas retinere, minuere, seu qualibet vexatione fatigare, sed omnia integrè conserventur earum pro quarum gubernatione ac sustentatione concessa sunt usibus omnimodis profutura salvâ sedis apostolicæ auctoritate et diocesani episcopi canonicâ justiciâ.
